Council considers contract extension

Bob Davis needs more time to lobby for local Coast Guard presence

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The contract for Bob Davis, the lobbyist hired to help retain a Coast Guard ship in Charlevoix, expired on Dec. 31.

After six months and an $18,000 price tag for his services, city council was asked to renew Davis' contract on a month by month basis, not to exceed six months at a meeting that took place Jan. 3. Compensation was requested at $3,000 per month.

The results of this meeting were not available by press time.

According to Charlevoix Mayor Norman Carlson, he believes Davis has been effective.

"We hired him (July 1, 2005) because he understands the way things work in Washington," Carlson said. "He was a longtime resident of the area (and) he has a lot of good connections with the proper personnel."

Carlson said Davis' job is to act as a liaison between the City of Charlevoix and those representatives in the government, including legislators, who can help Charlevoix the most.

According to third ward city council member, Shirley Gibson, she won't vote to renew Davis' contract.

"I'm not throwing good money after bad money. Enough is enough—that's it," Gibson said. "It doesn't sound to me like anything was accomplished. If anything was, I haven't heard about it."

She added, "I don't know anything about it other than a short e-mail (stating) that other people have done something. So, at this point, it looks to me like it was a waste of money until I hear differently."

The e-mail dated Sept. 26, 2005 from Davis to which Gibson refers, states,

"The efforts to replace the Acaera with another Coast Guard Vessel is proceeding as planned. The first letter to the Coast Guard was sent by Congressman Bart Stupak and went to the following: Admiral Thomas Collins, Commandant of the Coast Guard, Vice Admiral Vivien S. Crea, Commander Atlantic area (this includes Michigan) and Admiral Papp, ninth district."

Davis also stated, "All of these admirals would need to sign off on any replacement for the Acaera. Congressman Stupak's office has not received a response yet, but that is understandable because of the Coast Guard involvement with the hurricanes."

Wagner family welcomes first baby of 2006

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

While many Charlevoix residents and visitors spent the morning of New Year's day sleeping and snacking, one family spent it watching in wonder as their child took her first breath of air.

Maureen Wagner, 29, spent New Year's Eve making cranberry cakes and snacking on shrimp cocktail.

She said the warnings from her husband, Ty Wagner, who said the shrimp were going to send her into labor were in vain; her labor pains had already started.

At around 5 a.m., with contractions about three minutes apart, Maureen gave up her thoughts of sleep and making her Jan. 2 due date, gathered her delivery bag and told Ty it was time to go.

Jonelle Tyne Wagner was born just four hours later, at 9:10 a.m. Jan. 1, 2006, making her the first baby born at Charlevoix Area Hospital this year.

The tiny bundle stretched 20 inches in length and weighed in at 7 pounds 15 ounces.

At her arrival, the couple made a wish that her timely birth would bring their whole family closer.

Jonelle's proud parents were married on Jan. 29, 2001. At that time Maureen said they didn't know life would bring them three beautiful girls.

"We didn't know what we wanted, it just all happened," Ty 36, said.

The couple is scheduled to be released from the hospital Tuesday, Jan. 3, and will join their two children, Rilyn, 4, and Katherine, 1, at home.

Maureen, a dog groomer at the family kennel and dog breeding business, Oyster Bay Farm, said she plans to take some time off while enjoying the Wagner family's newest addition.

Jonelle's grandparents are Henry and Joan Wagner and Thomas and Evelyn Olesky, all of Charlevoix. The baby's name is a play on grandma Joan's name with a dash of holiday spirit.

Joan said this story about her new granddaughter is the first of many positive headlines Jonelle will make in life.

Charlevoix Middle School welcomes three new coaches

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

At the Dec. 12 Charlevoix Public School Board meeting, the board unanimously approved to appoint three new coaches in several different sports.

Mary Jane Grunch

While this is Grunch's first coaching assignment, she is no novice to the sport of volleyball.

Grunch, who graduated from college in 2004 with a degree in special education, said she has years of experience playing basketball, volleyball, softball and she still plays on a softball summer league.

"I played volleyball competitively in high school and have knowledge in the sport," she said. "I had the opportunity to take this position and I'm very excited about it."

According to Grunch, her main goals are to teach the fundamentals like the importance of teamwork to her girls and, "get the girls to enjoy the sport."

Sign-up for seventh grade volleyball is over at the end of the day Friday, Jan. 6 at the middle school office. Practice will begin Jan. 16.

Grunch said, if all goes right, "I would like to get into more coaching."

For nearly a decade-and-a-half, Todd Klinger has taught and coached at Charlevoix schools and now he coaches boys' basketball.

"This is my 14th year teaching and I have coached at least one sport for each year I taught," Klinger said. "I'm happy to be appointed. I've enjoyed working with the kids so far."

Todd Klinger

are to make sure, "the kids will have a good time and be better basketball players by the time the season's done."

Aside from basketball, Klinger has previously coached football and track.

"I'm just enjoying working with kids," he said. "I enjoy sharing the athletic arena with the kids. It's fun seeing them out of the classroom in a little different light."

Klinger currently teaches high school biology and human anatomy.

Kari Koffman was appointed as the new middle school cheerleading coach but was unable to be reached by press time.

'Thanks' law makers and abiders for playing it safe

EDITORIAL

Now that the dust from the festivities has settled, it's time to thank the rule makers for their concern and the law abiders for their responsible actions.

Perhaps it was a combination of good choices on the part of partygoers and the concerted efforts of local law enforcement, but New Year's came and went without anyone becoming a holiday spirit due to alcohol-related deaths.

While many of us were at home nestled in our beds during the wee hours of the holidays, countless men and women in law enforcement and emergency medical fields alike manned their posts to ensure safety and order were maintained.

We'd like to first give a big shout out to the partygoers who indulged in their favorite boozy beverages on New Year's Eve and opted to either walk or take a ride from a designated driver instead of attempting to swerve their way into oblivion.

According to police reports in the City of Charlevoix on New Year's Eve, patrolman Pete Shrift only had to haul away one intoxicated driver. And, while even one instance of drunk driving is intolerable, we were happy to hear the number was so low.

We were also pleased to hear the only other big incident of the night involved a group of kids busying themselves by throwing snowballs.

Across the county, sheriff's department deputies were busy patrolling the streets. According to Undersheriff Don Schneider the New Year's weekend brought four drinking-related arrests. He said two of those came on New Year's Eve and the other two on New Year's Day. Again, we abhor the act of drinking and driving, but it's nice to hear there were no fatalities during the booze-bused holiday.

We want to commend those who made safe decisions and thank those who were out there to keep peace and order. With each of those five drinking and driving related arrests a life may have been saved.

As you can see on pages 12 and 13 of this week's edition of the Courier, there was plenty of safe fun happening all across town.

Take some aspirin, drink some orange juice, rest up your livers for next time and until then, we wish you a prosperous, safe and happy 2006.

And P.S., whoever shaved off our eyebrows when we passed out — very funny.

Exploring and enjoying the continual passage of time

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

It's that time of year when we pay particular attention to time.

We count seconds to the end of one numbered year and the beginning of another and collectively watch games often decided in the last few ticks of time.

In trying to understand time, I have consulted with the writings of mathematicians and physicists who deal with time in the most profound way. Steven Hawking has written "A Brief History of Time," which sounds like it would be helpful. Another deep thinker about time, Brian Greene, wrote a book last year called, "The Fabric of the Cosmos: Space, Time and the Texture of Reality."

After consulting both of these works, I must say that what time is has become less clear. Like trolls or leprechauns, time seems to disappear when examined closely. We all know about it, but no one really understands it.

For much of human history, time seems not to have been as continuous as we presently see it. The sun, the moon and the stars all cycled around each year, and for humans, time cycled in the same way. Years did not have names or numbers, only seasons did. Each spring was like all preceding springs, and most thought that each one in the future would be the same. Time cycled and many believed that people or at least spiritual parts of people did as well. We are now more likely to see time as beginning at a long past event, like the "Big Bang" or the origin of the universe, and continuing in a more or less straight line up to now. And now is, of course, always becoming the past as quickly as we can think of it.

When confused by physics or religion, I am inclined to look to biology for clarification. For many years a favorite source of that clarification has been a series of essays by Aldo Leopold, "A Sand County Almanac." While Leopold pretends to be writing about the possession and care of a small, abandoned farm in northern Wisconsin, he was writing about more important things, like time.

Leopold saw through a tree and recounts the biological history of Wisconsin as he cuts the ring of growth that permanently mark how successful a tree is in manufacturing wood in that year. Trees, in places with strong seasons, record time, even centuries of it, in readable annual rings. The history of Charlevoix, since its beginning, is written in the rings of trees still living in and near our community.

In an essay called, "Odyssey," Leopold recounts the history of a single atom, which he says, "had marked time in a limestone ledge since the Paleozoic seas covered the land. Time, to an atom locked in a rock, does not pass." Those Paleozoic seas are the same ones that housed the living coral reefs we now know as Petoskey stones. Biologically, according to Leopold, there is no time without life. That, I can understand.

We house those atoms that collectively allow life for a time, and share them with all of the living things with which we share the earth. There is a very high probability that one of the atoms of oxygen that you breathed in today was for a time part of any historical figure you could name — George Washington, Thomas Edison, Alexander the Great or a Neanderthal caveman in the Middle East. There is an equally good chance that it was for a time part of any number of other living things, plant or animal. Time, for an atom, passes when it is participating in life.

Whatever time is, we all seem to have it. Have a good time in this New Year. It's the right time to celebrate. Make time for important things. Take time to do what is good and right. Time seems to be a gift. Fortunately, we don't have to understand time to accept it and participate in it.

Letter to the editor

Editor:

The Women's Resource Center's Harvest Food and Supply Drive to benefit the Safe Home was a resounding success thanks to our community's generosity.

The multitude of donations, including food, supplies, financial support, and gifts, have stocked the shelter pantry and provided holiday happiness to many families in our community.

As the only shelter for victims of domestic abuse in Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet, and Otsego counties, the Safe Home provides emergency shelter 24 hours a day, 365 days a year and a 24-hour crisis line. In the past year, 146 women and children took refuge at Safe Home to escape the peril of emotional, verbal, and/or physical abuse. The community support received during the Harvest Food and Supply Drive allows the Women's Resource Center to continue providing these important services to families in need.

Our sincere appreciation to all the service groups, churches, businesses, schools, clubs, and individuals who recognize that domestic violence is an ongoing national and local disaster and have taken action to support victims in our community. Your contributions have a direct, positive impact on the lives of many families in Northern Michigan.

DNR tackles the task of deer herd management

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources is working to manage the state's deer herd.

Wildlife managers for the Department of Natural Resources are in the midst of holding a series of statewide meetings to gather public input on recommended deer population goals through 2010. The recommendations were presented to the Natural Resources Commission at its November meeting.

The statewide meetings are a way for wildlife managers to involve citizens, both sportsmen and the general public, in determining the goals for Deer Management Units in each of Michigan's eight Wildlife Management Units.

"The deer population goals we recommended at the NRC meeting reflect the first time the DNR has proposed goals for each of the state's Deer Management Units," said Rodney Clute, a Michigan Department of Natural Resources big-game specialist. "Current goals were established in 1999 for each Wildlife Management Unit. The proposed goals will guide management for the next five years at which time they will be re-evaluated."

This re-evaluation, Clute said, will be based on resource and social conditions present in 2010.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources' deer population goals through 2010 call for between 1.28 million and 1.56 million white-tailed deer in the state. This is lower than the current estimated population of 1.7 million deer statewide.

The recommended deer population goals through 2010 for the Upper Peninsula is between 323,000 and 411,000 deer. This is below the current goal of 475,000, but close to the current estimated population of 336,000 deer. Harsh winters in the Upper Peninsula make it impractical to sustain larger deer numbers.

The recommended deer population goals through 2010 for the northern Lower Peninsula is 459,000 to 546,000 deer, which is within the range of the current estimated population of 498,000 and current goal of 538,000 deer.

The recommended deer population goals through 2010 for the southern Lower Peninsula is between 501,000 and 602,000 deer, which is within range of the current goal of 566,000 deer, but far lower than the current estimated population of 868,000 deer.

Wildlife managers say the proposed goals will help the Michigan Department of Natural Resources manage the deer herd in Michigan to support a healthy population without causing problems for the environment or the public.

All the values and problems that deer bring to Michigan must be weighed when considering population goals.

Among the values is the economic boost to the state provided by hunting. Deer hunters contribute $500 million to the state's economy each year. On the other hand, deer damage in agricultural areas reduces the profits for farmers and orchard owners, and car-vehicle accidents are above acceptable levels in many areas.

In addition, wildlife managers must weigh other factors, such as the regeneration of forests and wood lots, changes in forest structure, land use and fragmentation, as well as the age and health of deer.

"Deer management is a complex science, and often not an exact one. Public involvement in the deer population goal setting process is critical so wildlife managers know what the public expects from the state in terms of deer population," said Michigan Department of Natural Resources Wildlife Division Chief Bill Moritz. "I encourage the public to attend these meetings and offer their comments in order to assist us in maintaining a healthy deer herd in our state."

More information on the public meetings taking place across Michigan is available on the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Web site at www.michigan.gov/dnr.

Crooked Tree Arts Center hosts Phoenix Ensemble Jan. 13 and 14

Crooked Tree Arts Center continues the Virginia McCune Performing Arts Series with a Michigan group sure to keep the audience warm this month.

The Phoenix Ensemble from Ann Arbor will perform at 8 p.m., Friday and Saturday, Jan. 13 and 14 at Crooked Tree Arts Center in downtown Petoskey.

This eight-member group featuring the nuevo tango music of Argentinean Astor Piazzolla joined The Jeff Haas Trio in October of 2003 at the grand reopening of the Crooked Tree Arts Center.

The Oblivion Project, named after Piazzolla's tangos, will be performed and includes Peter Soave and Julien Labro on bandoneon, Gabe Bolkosky on violin, Sacran St. Christopher on flute, Derek Snyder on cello, John Holkeboer on bass, Tad Weed on piano, and percussionist Alex Trajano.

The Oblivion Project is the most successful among the detours taken by this classical/improvisational company of musicians.

"In March 2005, I took a chance to see and hear the Phoenix Ensemble in a packed house in Ann Arbor," said Crooked Tree staffer Mary Wiklanski. "Although what I heard was not jazz, it's decidedly improvisational — the company uses their instruments to talk to one another, and allows audience members to get in on their conversations. The bandoneon, a South American concertina, used especially in Argentina, is used to elicit complete joy, sensuality, and sometimes sorrow. No, the audience does not get to be on stage with the ensemble, but no doubt audience members will be moved to feel what the ensemble is feeling."

Tickets are on sale now at the arts center. Call (231) 347-4337, stop by 461 East Mitchell St. in Petoskey or visit www.crookeditree.org.

Ticket prices are: Crooked Tree Arts Center members $20/adult, $8/student; non-members $25/adult, $10/student. Patron seating is $50.

Health department offers free radon test kit program

Free radon test kits are available at the health department this month.

In observance of National Radon Action Month, radon test kits are available free during the month of January at local offices of the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency in Bellaire, Charlevoix, Petoskey and Gaylord.

Your property tax identification number is required when obtaining your free test kit.

"We've identified some homes in our area with indoor concentrations five times the Environmental Protection Agency action level of 4 pCi/L. Several area homes were found to contain unsafe levels of radon, ranging from 4 pCi/L to 22 pCi/L," Kendzierski said.

Health department staff helped these homeowners to select inexpensive mitigation systems to lower radon levels in their homes.

It is easy and inexpensive to detect and remove radon. If a radon test kit detects unsafe radon levels, the health department offers free consultation to assist residents in solving the problem, including linking them with certified contractors who can install an inexpensive mitigation system.

Radon can be a problem in all types of homes, including old homes, new homes, drafty homes, insulated homes and homes with and without basements.

"Testing your home for radon is the only way for you and your family to know if radon levels are dangerously high," said Scott Kendzierski, director of environmental health for the health department.

Radon has been found in many northern Michigan homes. About 12 percent of homes across the state have high radon levels, with some counties reporting as high as 45 percent of homes with unsafe levels of the deadly gas.

There are no obvious signs of radon. You can't see or smell it because radon is a colorless, odorless gas. Radon gas is a naturally occurring byproduct of the radioactive decay of small amounts of radium and uranium, commonly found in bedrock and soil. Most soils in northwest Michigan contain some amount of these radioactive elements. As they breakdown, radon gas moves through small spaces in soils and rock and can enter buildings through openings in foundation floors or walls.

Radon is a leading cause of lung cancer, second only to cigarette smoking in the United States. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency estimates 21,000 lung cancer deaths each year are due to radon.

For additional information about radon exposure in your home, contact Kendzierski at (231) 547-7651 or call toll-free (800) RADON GAS.

Women's Resource Center named specialty provider

The Women's Resource Center has earned the designation as being a women's specialty provider.

As the result of a recent audit conducted by the Northern Michigan's Substance Abuse Services, Inc., the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan's substance abuse program has recently been designated as a women's specialty provider.

In addition, the Women's Resource Center continues to hold its designation as a Women and Families Program and provides a unique array of substance abuse services in this area.

Due to the negative stigma women face when admitting they have a problem with alcohol or drugs, women with substance abuse tend to enter treatment later and have multiple psychosocial issues with which to deal. The Women's Resource Center provides programs that help women identify their needs and then gives them the referrals and support necessary to meet those needs. Those needs often include health care, education, employment and housing.

Women who enter substance abuse treatment often must surmount barriers such as transportation and childcare in order to be able to receive and continue with treatment. The Women's Resource Center has supports in place that help women with both transportation and childcare while they attend treatment appointments.

Women with substance abuse issues are more likely to be survivors of family, sexual and/or domestic violence. The Women's Resource Center provides these women with counseling through their Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence programs at no cost and all Women's Resource Center counselors are trained in assisting survivors of abuse.

Because problems with alcohol and/or drugs effects the whole family, counseling is also available to children and other family members. As always, the Women's Resource Center's Safe Home shelter is available to women and children in need of a safe place to stay due to domestic or sexual violence.

The Women's Resource Center is accredited by the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities and is a state-licensed substance abuse agency.

They are also a Medicaid and NMSAS provider.

Treatment is available at low or no cost to eligible persons. For more information call (231) 347-0067.

Injury prevention tips for winter warriors

Joelle Beaudoin
'Kids' corner'

If the snow would ever stay, we may get a little more excited about participating in all of the winter activities that northern Michigan has to offer.

After the holidays, everyone is trying to shed those extra pounds and become a little more active. Joining a ski league, putting on those cross country skis for the first time since last January, going out ice skating with the kids or maybe even snowboarding. Whatever it may be, these spontaneous impulses can lead to injury because of our inactivity and deconditioning during the winter months.

Some of the most common injuries from winter sports are rotator cuff tears—typically from falls, or landing on the shoulder, wrist and thumb sprains/fractures from falls and getting caught in ski poles; ACL tears/knee ligament sprains typically seen in skiers; low back strain from shoveling or falls on the ice; and concussions from improper fitting helmetts and falls.

As parents, it is helpful to know what some typical winter injuries are and how to avoid them. This will help parents not only protect yourselves, but also your kids.

One of the most common mistakes for adults is found during those impulse moments of skiing, skating or sledding, and not being in condition for those activities. Perhaps, you surprise yourself by actually keeping up with the kids, cruising down the ski hill. Then, just as you think, "My legs are getting a little tired, I'll take one more run," you are tumbling down the hill in agonizing pain. That last run ended up being your last one of the season due to a torn knee ligament.

This scenario is more common than you think, most injuries occur in the last few runs of the day when your muscles are fatigued and can't maintain proper form. Most people are fit enough to participate in winter sports, but not conditioned enough to last all day. Most people forget to take precautions that prevent injury.

The following is a list of 10 Tips for a successful winter sports season:

- Conditioning—begin an early winter conditioning program at least four to six weeks prior to joining any type of ski, skating or recreational group for the winter. Area gyms have great programs available, while Northern Michigan Sports Medicine Center offers a Ski Fit program geared specifically for sport specific skills related to skiing and skating.

- Stretching—make sure you do a five to 10 minute warm-up and gentle stretching before any type of activity, especially in the cold weather when muscles take longer to stretch out and loosen up. Stretching can prevent muscle strains and pulls.

- Equipment check—make sure you check your equipment including helmets, bindings, skis, poles, and skates prior to activity. Improper fitting equipment can also be a culprit of injuries.

- Always wear a helmet—helmets are critical in most winter sports. Concussions are becoming more and more common in young children because of improper fitting helmets. Parents should recognize early concussion signs and seek medical attention if symptoms do not resolve within a few hours. Symptoms are dazed, confused, complaints of headache, ringing in the ears, nausea, forgetfulness, sensitivity to light, loss of appetite, extreme aggressiveness or sensitivity.

- Dress accordingly—keep warm in winter months by layering your clothes. Apply thinner layers but more of them. Also, waterproof or sweat resistant gear is advised because as one sweats, the under layers get wet. Children are much less aware of body temperature. Often, they feel warm and don't realize they are wet, which can cause frostbite or decreased internal temperature.

- Stay hydrated—in winter months people generally don't think of dehydration. In fact, colder temperatures cause your body to work harder and use more fluid to keep your body warm. Dehydration is just as common in the winter as in the summer. Along with your hot cocoa, drink a glass of water.

- Use RICES—RICES is an acronym used to help remember the steps to take after an injury. Rest—stay off and limit the use of the injured area. Ice—15-20 minutes three to five times a day. Use a bag of peas or corn from the freezer section for a quick fix. Compression—keep the area compressed with an ace wrap or splint. Always wrap from the bottom up toward the heart, this helps with proper circulation. Elevation—try to keep the injured area elevated above the heart level. Stabilize—use a splint, sling or brace to prevent the injured area from moving. Do not move the injured area if there is a potential fracture, call for help and/or refer to a physician.

- Consult medical care—if you sustain an injury that does not seem to be getting better within a day or two, consult your physician, or a skilled medical professional. Some facilities such as Northern Michigan Sports Medicine Center, offer walk-in screenings for sports related injuries. A physical therapist or certified athletic trainer can evaluate and determine the extent of injury and recommend a further plan of care.

- Don't procrastinate—don't wait a month after your injury to seek medical advice. Most injuries are preventable and will heal quickly if you don't wait and pick up bad habits. Most injuries become chronic if they are not treated early.

- Have fun—it's not worth it if it isn't fun anymore.

As with any other recreational activity, knowing what to do when you are injured is helpful, but knowing how to prevent injuries is the key.

Joelle Beaudoin is a certified athletic trainer for Charlevoix Public Schools based out of the Charlevoix office of Northern Michigan Sports Medicine Center. For more information regarding injury prevention programs or walk-in screenings for adults and athletes, contact Northern Michigan Sports Medicine Center of Charlevoix at (231) 547-0380. - The title to the property shall vest absolutely in the Foreclosing Governmental Unit unless all forfeited unpaid delinquent taxes, interest, penalties, and fees are paid by March 31, 2006.

PLEASE NOTE:

The following list represents parties that appear to have title, lien, or other apparent rights to the parcels being foreclosed by the Foreclosing Governmental Unit.

This notice is required to be given by law, even if the party no longer claims or desires an interest if it appears they hold any undischarged, apparent, or potential title or lien right to the property.

Listing of a party does NOT necessarily indicate that they are the owner of a parcel, or that they are liable for the property taxes.

This list is NOT an offering of property for sale. These parcels are NOT being sold, auctioned, or otherwise made available by virtue of this notice.

There is no procedure for purchasing these parcels from the Foreclosing Governmental Unit at this point in the foreclosure proceedings. Those parcels that are foreclosed and not redeemed may become available at public auction after July, of 2006. These parcels remain the property of their current owner until redemption rights have expired. No party should make any attempt to inspect or enter upon these parcels assuming them to be for sale. This may constitute trespassing and subject the offender to criminal prosecution. The street address of the parcels listed is based on local records and is not guaranteed to be the actual location of the property.

The amount due listed indicates the balance which was due as of forfeiture on March 1, 2005. The current amount required to redeem must be obtained from the Charlevoix County Treasurer, as additional penalties, fees, and interest have accrued since forfeiture.

Second smoking ban lawsuit to be filed

Regulation takes effect Jan. 9 in Emmet, Antrim and Otsego counties

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

An initial lawsuit filed in response to the Public Health Clean Indoor Air Regulation which aims to limit smoking in Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim and Otsego county businesses is dissolving as another waits in the wings.

A lawsuit was filed this summer against Charlevoix County and the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency by three residents served by the agency who smoke and claim they are being adversely effected by the regulation.

In the suit, Kent McNeil of Bellaire, and Franklin Fisher and Roger Griffin of East Jordan call for Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas to overturn the Public Health Clean Indoor Air Regulation. This first draft of the regulation which they take aim at, took effect July 14, 2005 and prohibited smoking in all enclosed areas of workplaces in Charlevoix, Antrim, Emmet and Otsego counties.

Since then, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners repealed this initial regulation and on Oct. 1, 2005 adopted a revised regulation allowing smoking in businesses which employ one person, smoking in vehicles used by one person at a time and the existence of sufficiently ventilated smoking break rooms.

The new regulation was adopted by boards of commissioners in Emmet, Antrim and Otsego counties. It will go into effect in those counties on Jan. 9, 2006. The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners exempted itself from adopting the regulation. Thus, Charlevoix County businesses are not required to adhere to its conditions.

According to Mark Muniak, assistant prosecutor with the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's Office, repeal of the initial regulation made the lawsuit moot.

"The order that is the subject of the lawsuit is no longer on the books," he said.

An order to dismiss this suit is in the process of being finalized.

Muniak is working with Sam Frederick an attorney with the East Lansing firm Murphy, Brenton and Spagnuolo representing McNeil.

Fisher and Griffin, to establish the wording in the order to dismiss.

He said the initial proposed wording which included the language that the order, "disposes of all pending claims," was rejected.

While Muniak has not yet received formal notice of a second lawsuit filed in reaction to the revised regulation he said he is expecting another.

Frederick confirmed Muniak's expectation.

"The issue still remains. It's a preemption argument — can the local ordinance trump state law? That issue isn't going to go away. A judge will ultimately have to rule on that," Frederick said.

Attorneys for the parties involved, including Muniak, Frederick and Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency counsel Jim Young will meet at a scheduled conference in the near future to decide when Judge Pajtas will settle this preemption argument.

According to the regulation, as of Jan. 9, 2006 the following types of workplaces in Emmet, Antrim and Otsego counties will be designated as nonsmoking sites: restrooms, lobbies, reception areas, hallways and other common-use areas within a facility; buses, taxicabs and boarding and waiting areas of public transit depots; retail stores, areas patronized by the public such as attorneys' offices, banks and Laundromats; all areas of galleries, libraries and museums; facilities that are primarily used for exhibiting motion pictures, musical recitals, stage plays, lectures and any other performance, except when smoking is a scripted act; sports arenas; convention halls; every place of meeting or public assembly, including school buildings; waiting rooms, hallways and semi-private rooms in hospitals, clinics, physical therapy facilities, and doctor and dentist offices; lobbies, hallways and common areas in hotels, motels, multiple-tenant office and apartment buildings, malls, nursing homes, retirement facilities and residential facilities used for health services, child care or adult day care; and public places where bingo games are held.

Those employees or patrons who observe someone disregarding the nonsmoking policy are first asked to take the issue up with their immediate supervisor, the ordinance states.

In the event that the community health agency is called to a work site for a complaint, a warning will be issued as the business' first violation. Within one year, a second citation will cost the employer $50, the third citation will cost $100, and fourth and subsequent citations will cost $500. The ordinance states that those who wish to report violators may do so with the reassurance that their identities will be protected.

Examples of successful clean air initiatives have been enacted in Chippewa, Wayne, Ingham and Genesee counties, and the City of Marquette — all of which have smoke-free ordinances.

Charlevoix rings in the new year

Giuseppe's Italian Grille

In an effort to capture a sampling of New Year's Eve fun in Charlevoix, the Charlevoix Courier placed five disposable cameras in five downtown bars that night: the Villager Pub, the Town House, the Weathervane Restaurant, Grey Gables and Giuseppe's Italian Grille. People taking part in New Year's festivities at those businesses were invited to take random pictures of the evening as it unfolded. Pages 12 and 13 of this week's edition of the Courier feature some of those pictures. Since the Courier staff was not in attendance, all of the names of the people in the photos are not known. Therefore, the pictures are printed without cutlines. From the looks of things people at all five hot spots had a great New Year's Eve. All photos were taken by unknown photographers.

Local businesses report positive holiday sales

The holiday shopping blitz and tradition of subsequent returns and exchanges came and went in Charlevoix once more.

Merchants, innkeepers and restaurateurs alike took a break from their busy schedules to give their take on their respective holiday returns.

Executive Director of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, Jacqueline Merta said, "People in the restaurant business have been telling me that they've had a good holiday season and that this week is very busy."

Merta said another comment she heard from a few people is, "people that have second homes here waited to do their Christmas shopping until they got here."

According to Merta, during a chamber of commerce retail meeting held on Thursday, Dec. 29, the general consensus was merchants were very appreciative of all the local residents who supported area businesses.

And, she added, "They said they noticed more locals than in years past. Maybe they've always been there, but they seemed to notice it more this year."

Merta said, as far as the activity level of the chamber is concerned, they had quite the holiday season.

"I always get a lot of inquiries here," she said. "It seems like we're always busy."

"Everybody thought the open house, the tree lighting after Thanksgiving and Men's Night were good," Merta said. "It was a good holiday and we're looking forward to a prosperous new year all in all for the community."

According to Merta, she and the chamber members already began brainstorming for ideas to implement during the next holiday season which they will unveil as the new year progresses.

"We're up for the month and this last week has been phenomenal," said general manager of Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant, Jeff Sprecksell. "We're up 40 percent for this week and up about 20 percent for the month."

Sprecksell, who has been in the area for about seven years, said he thinks the clear roads have a lot to do with the increase in business.

"Just driving down the roads and seeing motels, I see all no vacancy signs," he said. "The motels are full."

With all these people out and about, Sprecksell said, he hoped New Year's Eve would be just as good.

According to Mary Potter, front desk clerk with the Pointes North Inn, she thinks the clear roads have had an impact on people's willingness to travel.

"Compared to last year it's a little bit better," Potter said. "Right now we have a mix of a lot of things, people skiing and shopping and snowmobiling and people here on corporate business."

Some of those in the lodging industry saw holiday business on a pretty even keel.

Chris Kowal, general manager of the Edgewater said, "I'd say

Local boy learns life lessons on Jamaican mission

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Instead of heading to college or taking a break in the fall following high school graduation, Charlevoix resident Mitchell Klooster chose to use his time to benefit others.

During the 2004-2005 school year, Klooster and others collected small toys with the idea that he would take them with him to Jamaica on his six-month mission trip teaching computer usage to underprivileged children.

"When I give them toys they go around saying, 'The white boy gave it to me,'" he said. "That's what they call me, 'white boy,' because most of these kids have never even seen another white person."

According to Klooster, because they are so poor, the kids are ecstatic someone is walking around handing toys out.

Klooster emphasized how grateful he is for all the people who helped him to go on the mission trip and thanked all the people who gave toys.

"It's a blessing. It's always something I've wanted to do. And I definitely wouldn't have been able to do it without my family, friends and all the people who gave money so I could go," he said.

Klooster said the school calls the class he teaches computer science, but it's little more than teaching the basic functions.

"Pretty much it's, 'This is how you turn on the computer, this is how you type capital letters and italicize.' And I teach the little kids, 'This is a mouse, this is a monitor, this is how you turn it on,'" he said. "The seventh graders can't even spell their names. Maybe three out of 10 kids can read a word I put on the board and sometimes none of them at all."

Klooster said he deals with students in different grades each day and due to lax truancy enforcement, kids sometimes don't show up at all.

"Some kids come to school drinking and some kids come to school smoking. What I don't understand is, this is a beautiful island, but it's so ugly because of all the crime," he said. "The government supports gangs. They were giving guns and money to Jamaica's most wanted, who they recently killed."

He added, "The government is so corrupt, I can't go to Kingston, Jamaica's capital city, right now because crime is so bad."

Klooster returns to Jamaica to complete mission

The idea of sipping rum on the beautiful sandy beach is a minute portion of the island country, Klooster said, but in spite of the danger, he wouldn't miss this experience to help others.

"It's something that I felt like I wanted to do for a long time and I prayed about for a long time," he said. "It's been awesome since I've been down there and I'm looking forward to going back."

According to Klooster, on a typical day he awakens to a breakfast of fried plankton and spinach, washes himself and his clothes in cold rainwater, then walks a mile down the mountain to the school where he teaches until 5 p.m.

After buying fruit and meat at the store all these years, life in the small Jamaican village of Bamboo was a bit of a shock.

"The chickens we slaughter right in our yard. The first day down there we slaughtered 18 chickens," he said. "We have all kinds of tropical fruit trees in the yard and we make juice all the time. They're so good."

And, Klooster said, traveling for someone who stands out can be treacherous.

"I go out sometimes, but I have to make sure I have one of my friends with me because it's not safe. I can't be out on my own. The crime rate is unbelievable," he said. "It's just heartbreaking. I pick up the newspaper every day and you see a new rape, a new murder, a new abduction every single day."

He added, "These people live with it. I've only been there four months and I don't even like to pick up the newspaper. You open the newspaper and they're talking about 10-year-old kids raping women. It's so sad."

According to Klooster, one evening the village was stormed by gunmen. "Luckily I wasn't there. The gunmen were holding up taxis. My friends in the village said if I would have been there it would have been bad," he said.

In addition to the crime, Klooster said sanitation is also a concern.

"Police stations have to close down because of rat infestation because people don't throw away their trash. They either burn it, which the government told them not to do anymore, or they pile it up because there is no place to deposit waste," he said. "The schools have been closed down because of lots of rats. I have newspaper articles that say, 'Rats vs. Police.' I woke up one night and there was a rat in my hair."

Regardless of some hardships he may experience on his trip, Klooster wants little more than to share his faith and build relationships with the children he teaches.

"I think I was put on this earth to love people and share my faith," he said. "My faith has grown a lot. It's going to be hard to say good-bye when I leave."

Klooster added, "These people have it so rough. I guess I will walk away with a broken heart and stronger faith."

Klooster's mission is scheduled to be complete in two months. He was home in Charlevoix during the holidays.

Contract to keep local Coast Guard boat debated

According to Davis' e-mail, both Senators Levin (Carl) and Stabenow (Debbie) agreed to send letters, "and in my conversation with staff today, the letters just need to be signed off by senior staff and the senators likely will not mention Charlevoix but will ask for a vessel to be sent to Lake Michigan. I have also asked congressman Dave Camp (he has strong ties to Charlevoix) to send a support letter, but have not seen the letter yet."

Davis stated he has been working with the Lake Carriers Association and the Beaver Island Transportation Authority and will continue to follow-up with all parties. Mayor Carlson sent letters to all three admirals in addition to testifying before a legislative committee in Lansing in October of 2005.

At the meeting Tuesday night, Jan. 3, mayor Carlson provided an overview of Davis' accomplishments thus far in the Acacia case for council.

He said Davis has been working closely with legislators to find a way to keep the Acacia here or have a replacement vessel located in Charlevoix.

"Hopefully we'll have an answer one way or another in the next three months," he said. "Hopefully it comes out good for the Great Lakes and specifically for Charlevoix."

Carlson said, those doubtful about Davis' results, "have to understand, it was a small investment to try and save something that brings a lot of money to our community and a lot of other issues are addressed with them. Something of this magnitude takes a joint effort and people need to work together."

Carlson noted the economic and social impact of losing so many people when the Acacia is decommissioned this summer.

Carlson said, "The wives and husbands of those in the Coast Guard shop and work in the area, live in housing and there is the presence of the feeling of safety they bring to our community by being here."

First ward city councilman, Bob Timms, said he hasn't heard whether

Davis is having success but, "it's one of those things where we hope he's successful. He's one of the most knowledgeable people."

Timms added, "It's a sizable amount. If he's successful, it will be money well spent, we just thought if we didn't, our chances were slim to nonexistent, so that's why we went ahead to hire him."

Davis is president of Boh Davis and Associates in Washington D.C. and a former Republican Congressman for Michigan.

At the June 20 city council meeting it was decided unanimously to pay

Davis $3,000 a month from July 1 to December 31, 2005 out of the city's industrial promotions account after a memo written by Charlevoix City Manager, Mike Wiesner to members of city council, which stated Davis' consulting services were pursued because the city failed to receive adequate representation on the matter at the federal level.

Wiesner added, "As a result of the above information, we felt it may be potentially beneficial to enlist the services of Bob Davis who is certainly familiar with the area and the Coast Guard."

Stupak: Prolong Acacia's stay

By BENJAMIN GOHS

All but one Charlevoix City Council member voted to renew lobbyist, Bob Davis', contract at the Jan. 3 meeting.

Mayor Norman Carlson told council that as of Dec. 31 Davis' contract had expired. He said in order for Davis to continue to work to have a Coast Guard vessel located in Charlevoix following the coming decommissioning of the cutter Acacia that contract would have to be extended.

First ward council member, Bob Timms made the motion to extend Davis' contract on month by month basis at a cost of $3,000 for up to six months. Bill Haggard, a first ward councilman, seconded the motion. Shirley Gibson, a third ward council member was the lone "no" vote.

"That's a lot of money," Gibson said. "I'm all for keeping the boat or trying to get one, but we've already spent $18,000 and I don't know much about what's going on."

Davis was unreachable by press time.

Some in the city government are tightlipped with information surrounding the proposed legislation citing fears of possible competing interests such as Grand Haven, who they claim also want a vessel located there.

As far as Grand Haven Mayor, Roger Bergman knows, at this time no one is looking to locate a Coast Guard cutter there.

Carlson said Bergman's comments do little to ease his fears.

In the days following the meeting, First District U.S. Congressman, Bart Stupak said he never formally met with Davis on issues dealing with the Acacia and he doesn't want people to be somehow misled into thinking Davis has a hand in Stupak's work.

Stupak has authored proposed legislation to retain the Acacia until May of 2007, 18 months beyond its summer 2006 decommissioning date.

Two make professional team cut for police chief

Council adds Doan to final interview list

Only two of nine candidates sent to a professional team for review were recommended by that group to fill the Charlevoix City Police Chief vacancy.

At a special city council meeting that took place Jan. 9, council learned who made the grade with the professional team.

On Friday, Jan. 6, a professional team made up of Rogers City Police Chief Matthew Quaine, former Traverse City public safety director, Ralph Soffredine and Mackinaw City Police Chief Patrick Wyman interviewed seven applicants for the local police chief position.

These seven were recommended to the team by council who on Dec. 20 used a matrix of qualifications to choose nine out of the original group of 29 applicants for the seat.

Two dropped out of the running before interviewing with the three-man professional team.

The two the team passed on to the final round and noted as "The best candidates to proceed further in the interview process," are Patrick Foster, a former City of Charlevoix patrolman and current Clay Township sergeant from St. Clair and John Jarecki, Jr., the city police chief in Norway.

In a memo to Charlevoix City Council from city manager Mike Wiesner, he states that these candidates are his police chief recommendation to council.

"Council and members of the audience took issue with the team's decision not to recommend local applicant and long-time city patrolman Gerard Doan.

"In hind site, we should have had a professional team of our professional officers. They have to back each other up and they know who they want to work for," second ward councilman Gabe Campbell, said. "We're sending a message to young people on the force. 'You can work as hard as you want but if you want to go some place, you better look in the ads because we're not inclined to hire someone from Charlevoix.'"

While the professional group feels of the nine council chose in the initial round Foster and Jarecki, are best

According to Davis' e-mail, both Senators Levin (Carl) and Stabenow (Debbie) agreed to send letters, "and in my conversation with staff today, the letters just need to be signed off by senior staff and the senators likely will not mention Charlevoix but will ask for a vessel to be sent to Lake Michigan. I have also asked congressman Dave Camp (he has strong ties to Charlevoix) to send a support letter, but have not seen the letter yet."

Davis stated he has been working with the Lake Carriers Association and the Beaver Island Transportation Authority and will continue to follow-up with all parties. Mayor Carlson sent letters to all three admirals in addition to testifying before a legislative committee in Lansing in October of 2005.

At the meeting Tuesday night, Jan. 3, mayor Carlson provided an overview of Davis' accomplishments thus far in the Acacia case for council.

He said Davis has been working closely with legislators to find a way to keep the Acacia here or have a replacement vessel located in Charlevoix.

"Hopefully we'll have an answer one way or another in the next three months," he said. "Hopefully it comes out good for the Great Lakes and specifically for Charlevoix."

Carlson said, those doubtful about Davis' results, "have to understand, it was a small investment to try and save something that brings a lot of money to our community and a lot of other issues are addressed with them. Something of this magnitude takes a joint effort and people need to work together."

Carlson noted the economic and social impact of losing so many people when the Acacia is decommissioned this summer.

Carlson said, "The wives and husbands of those in the Coast Guard shop and work in the area, live in housing and there is the presence of the feeling of safety they bring to our community by being here."

First ward city councilman, Bob Timms, said he hasn't heard whether

Davis is having success but, "it's one of those things where we hope he's successful. He's one of the most knowledgeable people."

Timms added, "It's a sizable amount. If he's successful, it will be money well spent, we just thought if we didn't, our chances were slim to nonexistent, so that's why we went ahead to hire him."

Davis is president of Boh Davis and Associates in Washington D.C. and a former Republican Congressman for Michigan.

At the June 20 city council meeting it was decided unanimously to pay

Davis $3,000 a month from July 1 to December 31, 2005 out of the city's industrial promotions account after a memo written by Charlevoix City Manager, Mike Wiesner to members of city council, which stated Davis' consulting services were pursued because the city failed to receive adequate representation on the matter at the federal level.

Wiesner added, "As a result of the above information, we felt it may be potentially beneficial to enlist the services of Bob Davis who is certainly familiar with the area and the Coast Guard."

City council to interview three for police chief seat

qualified to fill the chief's seat, they have the power to pull candidates from that original 29 for final review and hiring.

After hearing comments from the public supporting Doan, council voted to add him to the list of applicants they will interview this week. At press time interviews had not been scheduled.

Mayor Nonnan Carlson said, "I don't think anyone has questioned Gerard's ability as a police officer and what he's given as a patrolman. Just because he wasn't recommended by the professional team doesn't mean he's been slighted in any way. He's willing to keep going."

At previous meetings council members have agreed that they are looking for a long-term working chief who is visible in the community.

Former chief Dennis Halverson announced his resignation in late September. Halverson, the longest serving Charlevoix Chief of Police, accepted the "Safe Schools Coordinator" position with the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District. He started in this position in early November.

Deputy police chief Scott Hankins has filled the role of interim chief during the transition time.

At the time of Halverson's retirement he was making $53,736 a year. The incoming chief's wage was advertised to be between $45,000 and $55,000.

Council plans to hire the new chief and set his wage at their regularly scheduled meeting to take place at 7 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 16.

Stupak drafts legislation to keep Acacia in Charlevoix

some thought that maybe the new buoy tenders cannot cut the ice in the same manner or method as the old types could. I don't want the Acacia decommissioned before we're sure the new huoy tenders can do the job they are intended to do."

In the letter which Stupak sent to some high-ranking Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and subcommittee on Coast Guard and Maritime Transportation members, he expressed the essential aid to navigation and search and rescue services which the Acacia provides to the northern Great Lakes region.

"These critical services will be severely limited after the Acacia is decommissioned. Therefore, I urge you to include the following language in the bill," Stupak stated in the letter.

The language in Stupak's proposed legislation states, "The Secretary of the Department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall not decommission the Coast Guard cutter Acacia before May 1, 2007 and shall ensure the availability of such vessel for transitional ice breaking and huoy tending service on the Great Lakes until that date or until an additional ice breaking or ocean going buoy tender is stationed on northern Lake Michigan."

Stupak said he isn't sure where Davis is going with his lobbying efforts.

"If there is a mission, we should have the assets to do that mission," he said. "If there is a new mission in Charlevoix, I'll do whatever I can to get those assets. But I don't want anyone to believe that the Acacia will be around forever, that's not going to happen."

He added, "I've asked for an 18 month extension to make sure we have sufficient assets to protect everyone's interests."

Stupak hopes to know more about the status of the Fiscal Year 2006 Authorization Bill by February.

Carlson said, if the extension goes through, it will be a win for everybody.

"That's everything that we've wanted and that's what I've been working on for a year," he said.

Carlson said he has heard positive talk about the possibility of this extension coming to fruition. And, if it happens, it will not only be a starting point, but a small victory for Charlevoix.

If it wouldn't have been for the work of Davis, Stupak and others at the state, local and federal level, Carlson said, "I certainly don't think it would have happened."

Carlson added, "I think this is a good lesson to citizens (of Charlevoix) that they have good representation at the state, federal and local level that have worked hard. And, when you work hard at something, sometimes it comes out in your favor."

A writer's angst over door-to-door sales

Benjamin Gohs
'Staff writer'

Last week a couple men peddling theology visited my home. This makes it the third time the dense duo were turned away from my door. And seeing as they asked when would be a good time to come back, I expect this won't be the last I've seen of them.

The idea that people go house to house selling products, services or religion boggles my mind. But, as angry as these invasions of space make me, I must confess to a brief foray into the world of door to door sales once upon a time.

Though I never dared visit the same house twice, I managed to annoy many an unwilling patron during my three month stint. I would have quit after the first humiliating day if it weren't for the empty promises of big money and nonexistent prestige.

My first taste of the biz was in vacuums — and I thought cleaning kennels after table scrap Tuesdays was bad. If you are unaware, selling vacuum cleaners is one of the most miserable jobs on the planet, right below barnacle scraper and the guy who washes the arm length gloves at the animal husbandry clinic.

My second and final sales job was with some obscure phone company. There's nothing quite like the indignant look on someone's face when you knock on their door and ask them if they are happy with their long distance service. Why I wasn't punched in the stomach more often, I'll never know. I later heard the company was accused of switching people's long distance service without their knowl-

I'd like to think I'm absolved from the stink of those paltry positions for two reasons. One, I never made a penny. In fact, with the cost of business attire, gasoline and lost time at a real job, I actually ended up a few thousand dollars in the hole. Two, I felt terrible about myself every time I darkened someone's doorstep with my pitch.

If I recall, the only comparable humiliation I felt previous to working in outside sales was when I was 15 and my father decided he'd try taxidermy as a hobby. Few things lower a young man's self-esteem like the shame of dodging traffic on 90 degree blacktop with a handful of week-old possum remains while attempting to avoid being spotted by someone you know — and let me tell you, those babies ain't pine scented either.

While I can't change my awful past, I may be able to offer a little insight into the mind of these door-stop derelicts. First of all, don't invite them into your home. Once they're in the blood sport begins and you are on your own.

If you find yourself in the position of defending your pocketbook against the lure of 80 pounds of authentic Himalayan Yak Butter, remember, the words that come out of your mouth are seldom what the salesman hears.

When you say, "I'm not sure I need a lifetime supply of lemon flavored wart remover," the salesman hears, "I might change my mind if you throw in a couple cases of Grandma Smith's Old Time Fish Lips."

When you say, "I'm not interested," the seller hears, "Remind me how the floor buffing unicycle attachment will enhance my life."

And, as a final effort to rid your home of these putrid purveyors you say you cannot afford the product, the seller hears, "Please offer me the 30 year installment plan at 26.5 percent APR financing."

While I may not be able to live without a vacuum powered spine massager, battery operated steak knives or a self-propelled potato peeler with built-in nose hair trimmer, I don't want to buy them from a guy in a trench coat at my kitchen table.

Yes, my steak knives are dull. Yes, my carpet is stained. And yes, I've heard the good news. In fact, he and I have an understanding: I don't turn to anyone else and he doesn't show up on my doorstep with full color pamphlets telling me how great he is.

I'd rather not adopt a Jack Russell terrier with an anger problem to deter these troublesome traffickers, but I have the number to the local humane society on speed dial, and I just might.

Grandparenting, it's not the Lido Deck

Gayle Gennett
'A look at life'

I took a trip to Chicago, Ill. this past weekend to celebrate my daughter's twenty-eighth birthday.

It seemed only fitting to do something special since she had reached the same age that I was when she entered this world kicking and screaming. It was a reality check for me as it drew up memories of when my own mom came to Charlevoix during that very snowy winter of 1977 and traversed I-75 minus an SUV.

What woman in her 50's loves to travel in the winter? Only a trip to Chicago or spending time with a grandchild could make me wander from my cozy home.

This chapter of my life is hitting me square in the face. I am playing the role of older mom, friend and grandma. In this chapter of my life I've realized that I never really appreciated everything my mom and my mother-in-law did for our family until I became a grandma myself.

If you are a parent, married or single, it's very difficult to spend quality time with your children. For a working mom, that only leaves weekends to catch up on household tasks and sometimes even bringing home unfinished work. Though I feel that most young parents today are doing a wonderful job blending work, family activities and household tasks, it is easier with help from a grandparent.

Grandparents can offer children of busy families a listening ear and maybe even a calmer lifestyle. I've found the best thing about being a grandma is having the time to listen without worrying about cleaning and laundry. Now, I finally get it — this is what grandparenting is all about.

Author Dr. Kornhaber, said it best, "The relationship between a grandparent and a grandchild is one in which they really are crazy about each other simply because they are breathing."

Most grandparents if they aren't working full-time are needed more than ever. I am impressed by the number of grandparents who are raising their grandchildren. They deserve to be treated as royalty as far as I'm concerned. They chose to spend time trying to fix or maintain family order when they could be running around in their fifth wheel or getting margaritas on Lido Deck.

Some couples experiencing a divorce will rely on a great deal of support from a grandparent. For months and sometimes years following divorce children experience sadness and anger. With mom and dad wrapped up in their own feelings their patience is tried to the limit. Grandma and grandpa can provide a quiet and nurturing home for them to visit. The difficult part will be avoiding the negative comments which are so easy to make in front of the children about their son or daughter's former spouse. A grandparent can accept that the couple had difficulties in the marriage and need to keep from adding any more information for the child to see either parent in a bad light.

Having a grandparent listen helps to build a child's self-esteem. When you ask about a school project or how their week went, the communication between you grows. Your grandchild may turn to you for support later on when they need advice or need to make a decision about something important.

Companionship is another thing you can offer. Let your grandchild watch or join you as you make dinner or build something. The grandkids also love hearing stories about their mom or dad when they were little themselves. This sharing gives them the security to know they belong to a larger family that has a wonderful background. Talk about great-grandma or great-grandpa and various aunts and uncles too. If our grandchildren have a pleasant experience with us they will approach life with excitement and humor and will have a better attitude about growing older. They also learn the important lesson to "Respect your elders."

Gosh I'm an elder, but don't call me senior citizen, I'm not ready to be called that yet.

Letters to the editor

'Thank you' supporters

Editor:

At 6:26 p.m. on Nov. 6, I was involved in a head-on car accident in Atlanta, Michigan. After being passed around to several hospitals and emergency units, I ended up in Ann Arbor at the University of Michigan Hospital for two of my three surgeries. My stay there was a duration of 24 days before returning home to Charlevoix.

After being home for three weeks I was to start physical therapy on my legs at the Charlevoix Area Hospital. The second day of therapy, Diane, my therapist, suspected the likelihood of a blood clot in my left thigh. We checked it out with Dr. Stewart and sure enough, after Heather looked for just under 15 minutes, it was located with ultrasound.

I spent Dec. 23 through Dec. 27 in our hometown hospital. The concern, care, and degree of professionalism was superb, burying any of the care I had received thus far during my recovery. We should be very proud of the institution we have right here in our own backyard. Hats off to all of the aides, nurses and doctors that helped me get past this potentially critical phase on my road to recovery. You guys are great.

In addition, I most certainly need to thank so many thoughtful individuals out there that have supported me and my family since the accident. The generosity of so many has astounded and humbled my wife and I time and again. We are very, very, very appreciative and thankful for your friendships and support. You too are great.

Remember, the highest thing in life is in fact a culmination of all the little things. Be sure to stop and smell the ponies whenever possible.

Have a great 2006.

Christmas project success

Editor:

On behalf of the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project committee, I would like to thank a myriad of persons, groups, churches, clubs and other organizations that helped to make this a hugely successful project this year and a merrier Christmas for 350 children in our community.

First off, commander Charlie Butcher and the membership of the VFW allowed us the use of their new building from which to work. Toys For Tots and Russ Bolt, Ken Staley and Charlie Butcher provided us with more toys than Santa's workshop turned out last year, donated, of course, by the good people of Charlevoix. A tremendous number of gifts came from the Giving Tree at St. Mary's Church, and Becky Wimmer, Mary Plude and Alida Klooster worked many long hours on that part of the project.

Churches contributed money, clothes, cookies, cake mixes and frosting, candy, peanut butter and salines as well as many helping hands. Jerry Shupert added to the baskets with a generous donation of apples from his orchard. Scott Kelley and Tory Werth stored groceries at BASIS for us and then transported them to the VFW.

Organizations, as well as individuals, donated homemade knitted mittens, hats, scarves and slippers. Among those was the Barnard Grange, which also have us a generous check. Other groups donated a mountain of socks.

Clubs and businesses donated toys and money, and many individuals sent checks to help the project, which this year benefited 175 families, four nursing homes and many senior citizens who live alone. I think many people in our town do not realize the scope of this project, but we spent about $6,000 on groceries alone.

The Charlevoix Ministerial Association, under whose umbrella we work, donated beautiful hard copies of the story of the Birth of Jesus.

High school students double bagged our sacks for us, spent hours after school helping sort toys and also grudging through the snow and slipped on the ice to carry groceries and toys to the cars on delivery day. Many other volunteers loaded up their cars and delivered groceries and gifts to families who did not have a means of picking them up.

It would be nearly impossible to name everyone, but know that you were appreciated for whatever role you played in the project and will not go without a reward by Him in whose name we undertake this activity every year.

We wish all of Charlevoix a most Happy New Year and peace and prosperity in 2006.

Frame it in lights

Editor:

Breckenridge, Colorado keeps their white lights up throughout the winter. The town looks so warm and inviting.

Charlevoix frames the town with the beautiful petunias in the summer — why not continue to frame our beautiful town in the winter with the sparkle of white lights.

When you put your holiday decorations away this year, consider keeping the white lights shining in Charlevoix the Beautiful.

Strap on your boots and join Charlevoix's biggest winter party for ladies.

The National Subaru Women's Winter Tour is the largest, most unconventional women's winter event in the United States and it is making its third annual return to Charlevoix on Feb. 25.

The Women's Winter Tour includes cross country ski and snowshoe events. This year the party has moved to Castle Farms. The enchanting grounds of the restored, historic farm create a fairy tale setting for the women who participate.

The Women's Winter Tour encourages participants to make a day of the event by sticking around after skiing and snowshoeing for Castle Farms' wine festival.

The celebration features wines from area vineyards, gourmet cuisine, strolling musicians and a night of live music from a dynamic local band. Women's Winter Tour participants will be offered a discount for the festivities at Castle Farms.

The Charlevoix Women's Winter Tour will benefit the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan, Inc., which provides services to women and children who are survivors of domestic abuse.

The original purpose of the Women's Winter Tour is to inspire women of all shapes and sizes to get excited about cross country skiing and snowshoeing. The tour gives women the confidence to get outside and get active in the security of a noncompetitive environment.

County supports township ordinance changes

By BENJAMIN GOHS
 Staff writer

Following unanimous votes by the Charlevoix County Planning Commission, Charlevoix Township Planning Commission and, on Jan. 9, the Charlevoix Township Board, the two sections of the zoning ordinance in question were deleted.

The motion made by planning commission member, Michael Buttigieg, was seconded by Nancy Ferguson at the Jan. 6 meeting.

County planner, Larry Sullivan said the proposed changes to the ordinance will have no effect on the previous election results wherein the Charlevoix Township big box amendment was passed 340 to 215 no votes.

"The language they're proposing to delete is in conflict with state law especially in terms of election law," he said.

Sullivan summarized section 13.4 G of the zoning language for the commission members.

"There has been a lot of argument back and forth as to whether this is in conflict with state law or if it supersedes state law," he said. "That issue has been raised on a previous election that took place."

He added, "I think it's important to realize that the changes that are being made to the ordinance or are proposed to be made to the ordinance at this point in time don't affect what's happened in the past. It's merely making a change so the ordinance doesn't conflict with state election law and allows the process to move forward with any referendum that may result in the future."

Sullivan said the other part of the language proposed to be deleted is the statement that, "in summary states this ordinance supersedes or would take precedent over any other regulation that might exist in both the township or potentially at the state level where there's a conflict."

Charlevoix Township resident, Al Wojan, gave a brief history of Charlevoix Township's zoning ordinance wherein he told the commission the opponents of ordinance zoning amendment 1.73, the big box amendment, didn't bother to advertise their point of view on the matter because they knew how difficult it would have been for the amendment to pass referendum due to the strict nature of the township's zoning language.

"I guess the reason I'm even speaking tonight is because I feel that an injustice in the whole process is happening," Wojan said. "The citizens adopt a law and then later the citizens are told that the law they adopt is ineffectual and it's done by the same people that actually passed the law, not by a court that might adjudicate the law to see if it was right or not."

He added, "I don't object to the changing of the law, they have the right to do that, but my problem is: Do they have the right to tell us that we, the opponents, lost the vote even though the law says we didn't?"

Sullivan said he thinks there might be some unfounded concerns that if the language is deleted then if there is ever litigation surrounding the election results of amendment 1.73.

"If that's litigated it's going to be litigated based on the laws and rules that were in effect at the point and time when the vote took place," Sullivan said.

County planning commission member Randolph Frykberg said, "What stood at the time of that vote was law. What they change now is only from that point forward and that's subject to legal interpretation. (What) we're looking here tonight to consider is, 'Is this the change that makes sense? That's all.'"

Frykberg said the commission isn't going back to some previous controversy to see if they can change it.

Charlevoix Township trustee, Nancy Rajewski said, to clarify things, when the township did housecleaning to fix errors, these two sections of language were missed.

"We can go back through our minutes," she said. "We never discussed or intended to be stricter than state law and I have to thank Mr. Wojan or whoever found it because now we can correct it."

According to Rajewski, mistakes like this happen all the time when townships draft language.

But, opponents to amendment 1.73 feel the inclusion of the language proposed to be stricken from the ordinance was intentional.

The language in question is found in sections 12.3 on page 81 and 13G4 on page 84 of the zoning ordinance.

Wording in section 12.3 which has been recommended to be deleted states, "In the interpretation, application and enforcement of this ordinance, whenever any of the provisions or limitations imposed or required by the provisions of this ordinance are more stringent than any other law or ordinance, then the provisions of this ordinance shall govern. Whenever the provisions of any other law or ordinance impose more stringent requirements than is imposed or required by this ordinance, then the provisions of such other law or ordinance shall govern."

The portion of 13.4G recommended to be deleted states, "The township clerk has determined that an adequate petition has been filed within 30 days of the effective date and has been approved by a majority of the registered electors residing in the township."

The Charlevoix Township Board will have the final say on the fate of these two sections. The date when the board will consider this was unknown at press time.

NOTICE OF SHOW CAUSE HEARING AND JUDICIAL FORECLOSURE HEARING
NON-PAYMENT OF PROPERTY TAXES

On March 1, 2005 real estate with unpaid 2003 and/or prior years property taxes was forfeited to the Charlevoix County Treasurer, pursuant to the General Property Tax Act, Public Act 206 of 1893, PA 206, MCL 211.1 to 211.157, as amended.

The Charlevoix County Treasurer is acting as the Foreclosing Governmental Unit in proceedings to foreclose on this property for unpaid property taxes.

There are two hearings scheduled to finalize the foreclosure process. This publication is intended to provide additional notice to parties of interest in these parcels as to the nature, time, and location of these hearings.

A Show Cause Hearing is scheduled for 10:00am-12:00pm, January 23, 2006 at the Treasurer's Office, 301 State Street, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Any person with an interest in the property forfeited to the county treasurer may appear at the show cause hearing and redeem that property or show cause why absolute title to that property should not vest in the Foreclosing Governmental Unit.

A Judicial Foreclosure Hearing is scheduled for 2:00pm, February 3, 2006 at the 33rd Circuit Court, 301 State Street, Charlevoix, MI.

At this hearing the Foreclosing Governmental Unit shall ask that the court enter a judgment foreclosing the property as requested in the petition for foreclosure. A person claiming an interest in a parcel of property set forth in the petition for foreclosure, who desires to contest that petition, must file written objections with the clerk of the circuit court and serve those objections on the Charlevoix County Treasurer, the Foreclosing Governmental Unit. The docket number of the petition is 05834-20CZ.

If you are a person with an interest in property being foreclosed:

- You have the right to redeem this parcel from the foreclosure process by payment of all forfeited unpaid taxes, interest, penalties, and fees prior to the expiration of the redemption period. You should contact the Charlevoix County Treasurer for the amount required to redeem.
- You may lose your interest in the property as a result of the foreclosure proceeding.
- The title to the property shall vest absolutely in the Foreclosing Governmental Unit unless all forfeited unpaid delinquent taxes, interest, penalties, and fees are paid by March 31, 2006.

PLEASE NOTE:

The following list represents parties that appear to have title, lien, or other apparent rights to the parcels being foreclosed by the Foreclosing Governmental Unit.

This notice is required to be given by law, even if the party no longer claims or desires an interest if it appears they hold any undischarged, apparent, or potential title or lien right to the property.

Listing of a party does NOT necessarily indicate that they are the owner of a parcel, or that they are liable for the property taxes.

This list is NOT an offering of property for sale. These parcels are NOT being sold, auctioned, or otherwise made available by virtue of this notice.

There is no procedure for purchasing these parcels from the Foreclosing Governmental Unit at this point in the foreclosure proceedings. Those parcels that are foreclosed and not redeemed may become available at public auction after July, of 2006. These parcels remain the property of their current owner until redemption rights have expired. No party should make any attempt to inspect or enter upon these parcels assuming them to be for sale. This may constitute trespassing and subject the offender to criminal prosecution. The street address of the parcels listed is based on local records and is not guaranteed to be the actual location of the property.

The amount due listed indicates the balance which was due as of forfeiture on March 1, 2005. The current amount required to redeem must be obtained from the Charlevoix County Treasurer, as additional penalties, fees, and interest have accrued since forfeiture.

Postage cost increases took effect Jan. 8

These Favorite Children's Book Animals stamps wearing the new 39 cent price tag go on sale today, Jan. 11, nationwide. The price of a first-class stamp went from 37 to 39 cents on Sunday, Jan. 8.

Those with late holiday mailings will now spend 5.4 percent more on postage for letters and most packages than if they had mailed them before Monday.

On Jan. 8, across-the-board rate increases for the U.S. Postal Service went into effect.

The change, which was first proposed in April of 2005, boosts the price of a first-class stamp from 37 to 39 cents. In addition, an Express Mail package sent overnight rose to $14.39 from $13.65 and Priority Mail service climbed to $4.06 from $3.85 for a package weighing two pounds.

This is the first jump in stamp prices since June 2002 when first-class stamp costs rose 3 cents to 37 cents.

"The post office spreads the rate evenly across all classes of mail everything has to pay its own way," said Blaise Rivers, postmaster for the Charlevoix Post Office.

Bearing the brunt of the increase will be business mail accounts, which Rivers said currently make up the majority of the mailing industry.

He said eBay users, who typically ship using Priority Mail will also feel the hit.

Rivers explained that the increase will help cover the postal service's fuel costs. He said that nationwide, the U.S. Postal Service uses 88,000 vehicles daily to deliver mail.

"Each penny fuel goes up is major to us," he said.

The local post office uses 12-vehicles traveling a total of about 750 miles daily to deliver mail to Charlevoix and some of its outlying townships.

He said those with excess 37 cent stamps can visit the local post office, located at 6700 M-66 North in Charlevoix, where a large supply of 2 cent stamps are available.

While this may seem like a major hike, the price change is lower than what was initially proposed. The Wall Street Journal reported in November 2005 that the Postal Service was expected to ask for an increase of at least 10 percent — possibly increasing the price of a first-class stamp to 41 cents from 37 cents.

Sheriff investigates satanic ritual sexual abuse

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is investigating a case from the 1970s to the early 1980s involving alleged satanic ritual child sexual abuse.

"We have a reliable victim here and are taking it as a serious complaint," Charlevoix County Sheriff, George Lasater, said.

He explained that the case, which involves one victim and multiple witnesses and perpetrators, has been in his hands for about five years.

"It's time to go public. If we can get assistance from witnesses or perpetrators, we can help the victim put this to rest — closure," Lasater said.

Since first learning of the allegations of satanic ritual child sexual abuse, Lasater and his staff have worked to follow-up on leads, including gathering names of some of the individuals allegedly involved and conducting interviews.

He said thus far, evidence doesn't include videotapes or pictures of the alleged events.

"This is probably our last hope for coming up with suspects," he said.

In a press release Lasater explained that for the most part, persons who took part in this activity who have remained and live in Michigan may be immune from prosecution due to the legal statute of limitations.

It also states that although the victim and participants in this satanic abuse appear to be mainly from the Boyne City area, some subjects may be from other parts of Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

"There are no known Charlevoix ties. That's not to say there isn't, but right now there's not," Lasater said.

Anyone who may have been involved in or has any knowledge concerning satanic ritual sexual abuse of a child during the 1970s or 1980s is asked to contact Charlevoix County detective/sergeant Michael Wheat or Lasater at (231) 547-4461.

The press release states, "This reported activity is linked to another criminal complaint that is currently under investigation by the sheriff's office."

After school programs continue in spite of cuts

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Charlevoix Public Schools managed to maintain the level of after-school programs in spite of not receiving any of the $30,837,919 in federal funds doled to Michigan.

According to Charlevoix Elementary School principal, Richard Swenor, Charlevoix doesn't receive funds for after-school programs regardless of how the economy is doing since the number of at-risk children in Charlevoix is so low.

"We've not really been affected," Swenor said. "Most of our after-school programs are low-cost or free and they have been pretty self-sufficient."

Swenor said minimal fees are charged for some of the activities, but just enough to cover the instructor and/or supplies if needed.

In the past, Charlevoix Public Schools have offered cooking, bowling, foreign language and dance classes as well as cheerleading and basketball workshops to name a few.

"I think after and before school programs are very healthy for kids. It gives them a chance to enrich their education in different ways," Swenor said. "I think we've been very fortunate to offer what we have."

Swenor said, this past year, the schools offered less of the programs than they have in the past due to the lack of an event coordinator.

"The lady that coordinated that isn't with us anymore, but we might have a coordinator before year-end," he said. "In the past we've had a great turnout. It gives the kids something constructive to do. And, in some cases, it has been a good form of solution to daycare on some days for parents."

Cheerleading, basketball, soccer and wrestling are also a part of the after-school programs.

Swenor said, if there was a change of policy which would extend funds to Charlevoix Public Schools, there are some programs he would like to implement.

"I would love to have an after-school tutoring program for kids who are a little bit behind in reading and math to do; one on one program — the research is clear on the benefits of tutoring," he said. "If we had the money to do that, it would be awesome."

Swenor added, "It would be nice to start some decision making programs. There are a lot of things that would be very healthy for kids. We do have our Sunshine Club, which is latchkey program after school, but it would be nice if we had the money to tutor them while they're there."

If a child wants to join a program and cannot afford it, there are some smaller denomination scholarships donated by local families which allow kids to do so.

For more information about after-school programs at Charlevoix Public Schools call Dick Swenor, Kristen Beach or Sue Gengle at (231) 547-3215.

Mayoral history picture project nears completion

The project to recognize City of Charlevoix mayors of the past has moved closer to completion.

The Charlevoix City Hall wall designated to display the official pictures of past mayors has been determined and only a few pictures are still needed.

The working committee includes Arlene Staley, city clerk Carol Ochs, Sam Supremaw and Dean Davenport.

"We have been blessed by having many outstanding mayors. The project will recognize their contributions and may help motivate future mayoral candidates to run for the office," Davenport said.

The Charlevoix Historical Society has made their photo records available and the Artvark Studio has reprinted the pictures so the originals can be returned to the donors.

"The project has drawn support from the entire community," Staley said.

Ochs is coordinating the activities taking place in the recently renovated city hall.

Pictures still needed to complete the project include Leonard Adams who served in 1935; Archie A. Swinton who served in 1921; Simon M. Rose who served from 1917 to 1920; Andrew Ross who served in 1916; Harry Nicholls who served from 1913 to 1914; Oluf Nordrum who served in 1912; and Simon M. Rose who served in 1908.

Those willing to volunteer for this project should contact Arlene Staley at (231) 547-2985.

Momentum, The Troll to consolidate

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Local business owners David and Audrie Michael plan to consolidate their two local clothing stores.

The couple own and operate Charlevoix businesses, The Troll and Momentum. The Troll, located at 305 Bridge Street will maintain its name and signature resort wear core and will take on some of the name brand items from its sister store, Momentum.

"We want to keep The Troll because it was our first store ever. It's the only Troll — it's kind of sentimental," Audrie said. "We won't have room to accommodate that much but we'll still carry many popular name brands and offer great deals on resort wear."

They plan to vacate the existing Charlevoix Momentum store at 211 Bridge Street at the end of March.

Current Momentum store hours are from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday through Thursday, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and from 10 a.m.

to 7 p.m. Saturday. The Troll is only open one day a week, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday. Audrie said hours at The Troll will be extended after Momentum closes and the two stores merge.

She said the transition will not result in the loss of year-round, full-time jobs but some employees' roles have changed.

According to Audrie, the decision to close the large, local Momentum store, which opened about four years ago, was primarily based on a change in the nature of the couple's business which is moving more in the direction of wholesale.

"We're growing. We had to pick a way to grow that made sense and didn't pull us in so many directions," Audrie said.

She said their focus is also on expanding its presence in northern Michigan as they start a new retail store this spring in Glen Arbor and ponder the possibility of two more opening in the area before the busy 2006 summer tourist season.

"Our goal is to have one store per

Momentum stores currently exist here and in Harbor Springs,

A Charlevoix store owner will soon serve customers locally and nationwide.

Mary Faculak, co-owner of Halfway to the Top, a clothing and accessory store located at 403 Bridge Street, recently decided to launch a new Web site.

Faculak, announced the addition of the Web site last week. It will go live at www.marysapparel.com in about two weeks. Site design is being headed up by cyberspace prodigy Nelson Ogden, a 17-year-old junior at East Jordan High School.

Faculak's partner, Halfway to the Top co-owner Dave Guanci, of Charlevoix, opened the store in May of 2004. This marked realization of his dream to open a retail store in town where he could sell his line of Latitude 45 Halfway to the Top clothing and art. The store also carries other art on consignment. At that time Faculak was looking at opening a store in Elk Rapids. She said it was Guanci's drive to open a store here that sealed the Halfway to the Faculak met Guanci while boarding his feathered friend, a goose named Buddy, during the winter of 2003 at her Charlevoix home set on a 265-acre third generation family farm.

She helped in the buying process to get the store on its feet, took a sabbatical while caring for her ailing parents and joined Guanci in this business venture in March of 2005, just under a year after the store opened.

"We are here for the community. Our local clients are critical," Faculak said.

The building is the former site of Ace Hardware and underwent a major renovation to accommodate Halfway to the Top.

Construction gear has been replaced by men's and women's apparel and accessories. Halfway to the Top is a concept store for the Canadian company, French Dressing Jeanswear. Aside from its plethora of moderately priced business, dressy and casual wear, they also carry a wide variety of accessories including a new line of Italian Troll Beads and offer contemporary gift items.

Faculak is the executive director of the East Jordan Chamber of Commerce and also owns and operates Mary's of Boyne in Boyne City and the E.J. Shoppe in East Jordan, both of which are clothing stores.

Guanci and Faculak believe their business has been successful due to their friendly customer service provided through their client care program and by sales representatives Carol Moore, Coreen Henry, Sheila Johnston and Heather Garcia.

"If you don't look good, we don't look good. That's the satisfying part for us," Faculak said.

Faculak has also seen success in promotions like Ladies Night Out which she hosted Dec. 7. She is looking forward to a second promotion party, a Super Bowl shopping event, which she is planning for Feb. 5. She said this will likely include an on-site massage and other possible spa treatments.

Halfway to the Top winter store hours are from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

For more information about the store call (231) 547-9808.

THERE ARE GOOD REASONS WHY

PUBLIC NOTICE

APPEARS IN YOUR NEWSPAPER.

Currently, and historically, it is the responsibility of state and local government to publish public and legal notices here in Michigan's newspapers. This paper you're holding right now is a historical document, printed and published with a date on every page. And its pages hold your right to know what the government is doing in your community. In fact, it's law.

In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. After all, it shouldn't be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look or when to look, let alone to know what you're looking for to be informed. That is why you have, and read, your newspaper, where public notices are published with accountable circulation and presented to you on these pages in clear black and white.

SCRAPBOOK

Making due in Charlevoix in the 1940s

Marilyn Boss
'Days gone by'

As I write about those who lived in Charlevoix in 1940, I find many down to earth people who lived from day to day, not making much money, but being content with what they had, and making due with old items instead of buying new.

There were those who made a living fixing a broken radio, or other items, and today, of course we have a throw away society. Things might have been hard at times, but most everyone was in the same boat, and were thankful for what they had.

Frank Oleksy and his wife, Marian, lived at 419 Antrim Street with their daughter, Constance. Frank was a manual arts teacher in the school.

Mrs. Isabelle Oliver lived at 615 Norwood Road. Her son, Jay, also lived there. He was a presser at Art Dry Cleaners. Another son, Leonard, lived there and worked in the CCC camp.

Miles Olmstead was a fisherman, and his wife, Frances, was a Michigan Bell telephone operator. They lived at 115 East Garfield Street. Franklin Olmstead also lived there. He was a clerk at Fred S. Myers store. Helen Olmstead was a junior high school teacher. She lived at 409 Antrim Street.

Hannah Olney was a widow (George A.) and lived at 402 Sherman Street. Her son, Ernest, was a lineman with the Charlevoix Electrical Department. He drove every day, back and forth to Bellaire to help operate the City of Charlevoix's hydro-electric dam, which generated a portion of electricity.

Harold Olson lived at 807 State Street. He owned the Olson Mattress Company with Roy C. Davis. This company manufactured mattresses and rebuilt them. It was located at 109 Antrim Street.

Anton Olszewski and his wife, Gisela, lived at 409 W. Garfield. He was a mechanic. Their children were Ruth, Margaret and Adeline. Eleanor Olszewski was a maid and lived at 201 W. Garfield.

Amos and Eleanor O'Neill lived at 503 Sherman Street. He was a trucker. Helen L. O'Neill lived at 404 West Upright Street. James O'Neill and wife, Clara, lived at 316 West Huribut Street. He was a laborer. Louis O'Neill and wife Helen, lived at 204 Lewis Street. He was a clerk at the Charlevoix Post Office. Marshall O'Neill also lived there.

Richard and Effie O'Neill lived at 116 East Huribut Street. He was a mechanic at Brown Motors.

Margaret Orłowski was a widow (Louis) and lived at 901 Bridge Street. Her son, Louis also lived there. He was a student, and later became an architect for General Motors. He and his wife, Rita came back to Charlevoix in later years, and retired. He did many drawings free for projects around the community and Rita is still very much involved in charity work in town. Margaret's daughter, Mary Margaret Orłowski, was a teller at the Charlevoix State Savings Bank and lived there also. She later married Cornelius Geiken. Mayne Orłowski was manager of the Blue Post Inn, and lived at 801 Bridge Street. It was located on the corner of Bridge and West Upright streets. The porch posts were painted blue.

Elmer L. Olmstrom was a laborer, and he and his wife, Agnes, lived at 101 Green Street.

William C. Palmer was a school commissioner, and he and his wife, Gladys, lived at 309 West Upright Street. Their son, Benjamin, and daughter, Florence, who were students, also lived there.

Frank Panter was a mason, and he and his wife Rosa, lived at 306 Burns Street. One day, his still, which was in the basement, blew up. Dale was delivering milk door-to-door, so he followed the fire truck over there. Frank was carrying the still out the side door, and putting it in the garage, and one of the firemen asked Frank, "Where's your wife?" Frank replied, "Oh, She's in the house. We've got to get her out."

George and Gretus Pant lived at 101 1/2 Mason Street. He was a clerk at Goldie's Tavern. Goldie Pant owned Goldie's Tavern, located at 101 Mason Street.

Rev. Russell G. Parker and wife, Margaret, lived at 205 State Street. He was pastor of the First Congregational Church. Dale remembers him as a very tall, dignified man, and he always wore a swallow tail coat. Dale must have been impressed, as the Reformed Church ministers didn't dress like that. He remembers that he preached one Sunday afternoon at the Reformed Church on Barnard Road, as a substitute minister. His subject was, "They were first called Christians at Antioch." Quite an impression, I'd say.

James Parsons was an insurance agent, and lived at 106 Belvedere Avenue. Lloyd and Marguerite Parsons lived at 107 West Garfield Street, with their children, Shirley and Donald.

Pearl Partridge was a widow (Frank). She lived at 212 Park Avenue. She also owned a summer home at 2 Boulder Park. Her son was Francis, who became a priest in later years. Dorothy Partridge was a teacher and also lived at 212 Park Avenue. Henry Partridge and wife, Marian, lived at 205 Petoskey Avenue. He was an accountant at Argo Milling Company. Rosanne Partridge was a clerk at F.J. Fessenden and Son, and also lived at 205 Petoskey Avenue.

Minnie Earle Payton was a librarian at the Charlevoix Free Library. She lived at 109 Park Avenue.

Harold Pearl and his wife, Pauline, lived at 111 Michigan Avenue, with their daughter, Betty. He was a painter and decorator. Hiram Pearl and his wife, Selma, lived at 303 Bridge Street, where they owned their own business. He was a barber, and Selma was a beautician. Reuben Pearl and his wife, Bernice, lived at 215 West Huribut Street. Their sons were Bert, Robert and Howard. They were neighbors of mine. Ted Pearl was a barber at 225 Bridge Street. He and his wife, Edith, and son, Donald, lived at 105 Park Avenue.

Ernest Peaslee was a deputy county clerk, and lived on RFD 3. In 1951, we bought a 1930 Model A four-door sedan from him. It had been parked under a tree on his property for 10 years. We refurbished it and drove it as a second car for 25 years. Dale put chains on it every winter, and it never failed to get him to work in the deep snow.

Martin Pedersen was a janitor at the Charlevoix Hospital, and lived at 103 West Lincoln Street with his wife, Minnie, who was a dressmaker. Their daughters, Amy and Hazel also lived there. Their daughter, Dorothy, had married Maurice Dixon. In later years their daughter, Julie was born. She later married David Christiansen. Marvin Pedersen was a laborer and lived at 108 Antrim Street.

Glenn Pemberson and wife, Freda, lived at 402 West Upright Street with their daughter Gleneen. Freda was a Michigan Bell telephone operator. Glenn owned Pemberton Service. He sold Kelvinsators, and serviced them as well as radios. This business was located at 102 Mason Street.

Simon Perron and wife, Hilda, lived at 405 West Huribut Street with their daughter, Shirley.

Daniel and Elizabeth Peters, lived on Division and Meech. He was a laborer.

Peter and Mildred Petersen lived at 213 West Garfield Street. Their sons were William and Larry.

Anna Peterson was a widow (Valdemar) and lived at 211 E. Lincoln Street. Caroline Peterson also lived there.

I knew most of these people, and enjoy reminiscing about them and their families.

Doan named chief of police

By JULIE WITTHOEF
 Editor

Gerard Doan was unanimously hired by city council at its meeting Monday night, Jan. 17.

 "I'm in disbelief. I just didn't think it was going to happen," Doan said. "I knew I was three (council votes) strong, possibly four and I was hoping for six."
 Prior to the meeting it was unclear the direction council would take. Second ward councilmen Gabe Campbell and Gene Beeras as well as third ward council member Shirley Gibson supported Doan vocally throughout the hiring process. However, according to the city's charter, the successful candidate needs four council votes to be brought on board.

At previous meetings council members have agreed that they are looking for a long-term working chief who is visible in

Chamber recognizes local citizens

By JULIE WITTHOEF
 Editor

At the 48th Annual Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce meeting Jan. 12 three Charlevoix residents were recognized by the chamber's board of directors for their contributions to the community.

Linda and Richard Mueller, the couple that has steered a $10 million overhaul of the local historic site Castle Farms were named Ambassador of the Year by the chamber board of directors.

According to chairman of the chamber board of directors, Jim Berlage, the Muellers exemplify the aim of the ambassador's award in all that they do.

"The first thing they said when they accepted the award was, 'We need more brochures.' They are always promoting Charlevoix as well as the Castle," he said.

Chamber president Jacqueline Merta said since purchasing the Castle in 2001 and undertaking its massive renovation project, the Muellers have promoted the spirit of the community.

Linda said she was surprised to have been recognized.

"I'm glad they think enough of me to give me an award," she said.

Sheriff warns of bank scam targeting local senior citizens

According to a recent news release from Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater, a telephone scam has been directed at county residents.

Lasater said multiple senior citizens have received calls from an agency identifying themselves as a representative of a local bank where the senior citizen has an account. The caller claims the bank is merging with another bank and he/she needs the senior citizens' checking account number so they can transfer their account to the new bank.

In the news release Lasater states that, "The caller usually has a foreign accent and attempts to make the senior citizen feel secure, advising them they will receive a packet regarding the merger."

According to Marilyn Joy, vice-president of Charlevoix State Bank, four of the bank's customers have received calls like this.

In a press release dated Jan. 14 authored by Todd Willoughby, vice-president of communications for the Michigan Bankers Association, he states, "The Michigan Bankers Association wants the public to know that banks and financial institutions already have your personal financial information, and they will never make phone calls asking customers for something they already have."

Lasater recommends those receiving a call like this, hang up and call their local bank and law enforcement agency. Lasater can be contacted by calling (231) 547-6720.

Linda said her family's decision to focus their energy on a Charlevoix business venture stemmed from the long Mueller history here.

While the Muellers' efforts at the Castle started recently, their community ties date back to the late 1800s, when the Mueller family first called Charlevoix their home away from home. Richard's grandfather played a role in founding the Belvedere Club.

"It just seems right to give something back after so many years of enjoying Charlevoix," Linda said.

She added that her passion for medieval art and architecture made the purchase of the site a perfect fit for her.

"Little girls have dreams and fantasies of Cinderella dancing in ballrooms fit for knights and queens. Linda Mueller is living that dream as owner of Castle Farms," Merta said.

With renovations at Castle Farms having been wrapped up in the spring of 2005, the Muellers are looking forward to expanding gardens at the site to welcome residents and visitors who will attend many events there.

Linda said the Castle will host 80 weddings in 2006 and the couple is looking to organize a Renaissance festival in the future. On Feb. 25, the Castle will host the chamber's Third Annual Women's Winter Tour, a cross country ski and snowshoe event.

"We want to bring people out to see the grounds and the buildings. It's so pretty," Linda said.

While Linda Mueller was recognized for her contributions to Charlevoix another Linda was acknowledged for her extensive offerings here.

Linda Mason, a visionary who Merta described as, "a dreamer, achiever and most of all a doer," was chosen by the board as the 2005 outstanding citizen of the year.

"She's been involved in the chamber and Charlevoix for many, many years, many times working behind the scenes," Berlage said.

Mason was surprised at the honor and said there are more deserving people in Charlevoix.

In spite of Mason's reserved acceptance of the award, her accomplishments speak for themselves. Merta said Mason is a perfect fit for the outstanding citizen of the year award which recognizes an individual who over a number of years has given freely of their time, talents and resources to make Charlevoix a better place to live. Last year, Marina LaBlance won the award.

Mason, owner and operator of Mason Interiors has been a Charlevoix business owner since 1978. She has also served on various boards including the City of Charlevoix's Historical Study Committee, the board of directors for the Edgewater Inn, seven years on the chamber board of directors and service on its retail committee as well.

"She is innovative and always exploring creative ways to enhance business," Merta said.

Mason was instrumental in the city's street-side tree planting effort as well as establishing the popular Apple Festival 27 years ago. She has been actively involved with Charlevoix Area Hospital's signature fund-raiser Holly Daze since its inception in 1992. In 2005, she co-chaired the event which took place Dec. 1 at Castle Farms and brought in a record setting $137,000 for the hospital.

"Quite a track record and she's not done yet," Merta said.

Of these accomplishments Mason said the most satisfying was watching as she and five other members of the merchants association raised funds to have the street-side trees and accompanying grates planted and installed along Bridge Street.

The chamber also recognized the service of its outgoing board members including Eric Kummerman who was vice-chairman in 2005 and served on the board for three years, and Terry Edger who served on the board for three years and as vice-chairman in 2004.

Judy Friske-Kehr has moved into the vice-chairman's seat for 2006. Jim Berlage will continue as chairman and Ron Agnello as treasurer. Patt Blanchard, Jay Bingham and Linda Bradley are new board members for 2006. Pram Acharya and Jeff Spreckell are returning board members who will continue to serve this year.

Gerard Doan ran a fair race for city chief of police seat

It's time for Gerard Doan to take a breath and a bow.

The local patrolman who has been making the streets of Charlevoix a safer place since 1986 was awarded the chief of police's seat at Monday night's Charlevoix City council meeting.

While every police officer commands respect with their well armed belt, we think Doan has earned his.

During the lengthy, grueling interview process Doan stammered a bit and moved nervously in his chair once in a while but he engaged in a fair process.

He is a man who believes in fairness and consistency.

After not being selected by the professional team to go on to the final round of interviews, he could have mounted a letter writing campaign to area newspapers with his supporters backing him.

But instead he chose to sit back and watch how the cards fell.

In a candid interview he initiated with the Courier staff he had the opportunity to bad mouth the opposition. But again Doan took the high road and said the one thing he had up on fellow candidates John Jarecki, Jr. and Patrick Foster was his long history in town.

That history doesn't include complaints from citizens who were slapped around or cussed at. It does include the Charlevoix

EDITORIAL

Public School children who were taught about the dark side of drug abuse as he administered the DARE program. And lighter times as he took the first slippery steps on the slopes of McSaubia teaching ski school.

No Gerard may not build the fancy, dancy Safety Town Mr. Jarecki spearheaded in Illinois and he may not be ready to introduce the high-tech record keeping project Mr. Foster implemented in Clay Township but he will always put Charlevoix first.

He is raising two children in Charlevoix schools and on the streets of our town, he cares about his friends and neighbors and is ready to take his profession to the next level.

We hope to see him attend the FBI training academy and continue to pursue other field training and management avenues for both himself and his staff.

His lack of management training doesn't scare us, every entrepreneur and CEO had to get a break some time.

With this in mind, we hope community members don't get hung up on the fancy merits listed on the resumes of those who were not chosen and direct that energy to supporting one of our own, Gerard Doan, City of Charlevoix Chief of Police.

Global warming brings with it highs and lows

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

Looking around this January, it is difficult to escape the notion that things are warmer than they have been. There is less snow and more heat.

Whether you consider global warming to be a plot by liberal scientists to thwart the oil business or whether it seems to you the most dire threat currently facing humanity, most everyone considers global warming as a potential negative.

Global warming, if it occurs, would be a bad thing, seems to be a statement almost everyone supports.

In line with our policy of thinking locally and acting globally, I'm here to case a positive light on the eventuality of an overheated earth.

First the botanical news. Walking around Charlevoix in the second week of January, there are plants blooming out of doors and without any human intervention. Chickweed, which blooms in almost every month of the year in southern Michigan puts out tiny white flowers after only a few days of above freezing temperatures and no snow cover. It is blooming now in out-of-the-way, neglected corners of Charlevoix. A plant called Pineapple Weed, a relative of Chamomile not of pineapple, can also be found in bloom along our sidewalks where the ground is bare.

For the botanically impaired there are certainly other positive elements of warming. If you are heavily invested in electric or other energy utilities, don't worry. As the need for winter fuel declines, the need for air conditioning is certain to rise proportionally. We might manage year-round shipping on the Great Lakes if it gets much warmer. Snowmobile sales will surely slump, but should be partly compensated by an increase in mower and lawn maintenance items — my back yard is greener than it has been in any January I can remember. Skiing activity will be way down, but boating should be up. And with the warming there should be more wind — a clear positive for the sailing crowd.

Less salt on the roads would mean longer automobile life. It will not be necessary to search on the Internet for used cars from Arizona or Texas. There will be fewer down coats sold. But sunscreen sales and swimsuit offerings should increase. With less snow to remove, there might be more money available to hire lobbyists. And while intense global warming seems to carry the risk of drowning some of our ocean shores and coastal cities as salt water levels rise, our local lakes will almost certainly evaporate more and shrink back a bit. That means more land for sale right next to the water. There may even be new islands.

Global warming could be a very real economic opportunity if we are ready to take advantage of it.

But seriously folks, all the information available seems to suggest the earth is indeed warming, that we are at least part of the cause and most of the effects will in fact mean more problems than opportunities.

Maybe we should take a page from the story of Joseph in the book of Genesis, who convinced the Egyptian Pharaoh that seven years of plenty would be followed by seven years of famine, and it would be best to plan ahead for that eventuality. Maybe we should plan for the worst effects of global warming just in case they come to pass and the useful phrase is, of course, think globally, act locally.

Recognizing servicemen

Editor: My name is Lynda Roberts. I am Valerie Pedersen's daughter-in-law. I noticed in the December 28, 2005 issue that the Charlevoix County Veterans Affairs awarded Sgt. Country Middleton a Certificate of Appreciation for his time served overseas.

I believe every soldier deserves recognition for their service to this country. However, I am disappointed in the Charlevoix community for not recognizing another member for his years of service, my husband, Sgt. Sean Roberts (Kimble). He has been enlisted for five years now and has been deployed not once, not twice, but three times to the Middle East; including the ground war. His last deployment was 12 months long. When he returned, he came to Michigan to sit with his sister, Danielle Kimble, to end her reign as Venetian Queen during the parade in July 2005. That is the only recognition he has received from the people of Charlevoix, the community he has been a part of for over a decade.

Now, my husband does not do his job for recognition. He loves his job and he loves working for the United States of America, but it makes it hard for him to go and fight for this country when he is not appreciated by the people of the community in which he grew up. During his last deployment, not a single soldier was killed from his company, partly to do with his leadership and his training. If anything, that deserves recognition enough.

I am proud of my husband and I let him know that every chance I get. I hope that the community of Charlevoix recognizes, and appreciates, that Sgt. Sean Roberts (Kimble) stands right next to Sgt. Country Middleton in defending your rights and freedoms.

Board met to review and assess the year of 2005, we realized what great generosity we have experienced from organizations, clubs, groups, individuals and churches this past year.

We hesitate to mention individual names as many people donated money and food items anonymously, but we would like to recognize the churches in the Charlevoix area who donated to the pantry throughout the year.

Among them are: Barnard United Methodist, Bethany Lutheran, Charlevoix United Methodist, Charlevoix Congregational Church, Christ Episcopal, Community Church of God, Community Reformed Church, Greensky Hill, Ironton Congregational, Norwood United Methodist and St. Mary.

As you can observe from this list, this participation in, and support of, the pantry is truly an ecumenical effort and a hallmark of small-town caring about one's neighbor.

We thank every individual who contributed to the pantry in 2005 in whatever way, and, as we do not foresee a decrease in the number of people coming to the pantry in 2006, we hope you will continue to remember us in your giving.

May God grant you a peaceful and prosperous New Year.

Community outreach

Editor:

I would like to thank the members of our local Community Christmas Programs including: Monica Crawford, Kathy Reid, Rosemary Horton, Ardith Hawley, Ruth Wilemski, Bev Boss, Ione Baum, Mary Helen Riggie, Deh Gelderblom, Arlene Staley, Kay Woehrlt, Kay Smith, Mary Eveleigh, Connie Roberts, Roman Hank, Capt. Rob DeGeorge as well as the many other behind the scene helpers for making this such a successful year. I would also like to extend a big thank you to Lois Gilhert for her coordination of the distribution of names and donors for the Department of Human Services. We couldn't have completed this enormous task without the tremendous efforts of Jerry Walker, Russ Bolt, Bob Nolan and Charlie Butcher with the Marine Corps Toys for Tots. They work year-round gathering toys and needed items to provide for a happy Christmas for the less fortunate in our communities.

I would also like to thank the many individuals, businesses and school classrooms who donated items or took entire families and shared their Christmas spirit to make a brighter Christmas for those in need. Without you it would be impossible to provide for so many families.

Thank you to the groups and individuals who also donated money to our agency to help those in need now and throughout the year. Thank you so much.

The Coats for Kids drive this year was incredible. What generous communities we live in. We received over 400 coats, brand new as well as gently used ones as well as snow pants, mittens, gloves, hats and scarves. These items have been distributed throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties as well as to several local schools. We have been able to have coats available in our office for those that come in needing them.

Thank you to all who have donated.

Times are difficult for many and with the continued generosity, care and concern of giving individuals such as yourselves it makes life easier for many.

Thank you again one and all.

Obituaries

Joyce Wheeler: March 29, 1929 - Jan. 4, 2006

Hattie Joyce Clarke Wheeler died Jan. 4.

Joyce was born on March 29, 1929 in Lansing and was raised by parents of devout faith and devotion. The middle child among a total of nine, Joyce skipped even her first steps to the beat of a different drummer. Unique in her interests, talents, outlook and philosophies, Joyce was a true intellectual with a passion for the arts. Few pages, within her grasp, of the great classics in literature and in music were left unturned. She fondly recalled searching behind the bookcases for fallen novels after she had read all on the shelf at her one-room, country school.

One of Joyce's proudest accomplishments was graduating from Vernard College with a major in piano and a minor in voice. This was no small feat for a young country girl working her way through college in a Chicago, Ill. candy factory while attending classes, memorizing countless concertos and sonatas for recitals and traveling the country with Vernard's girls' trio. A few months prior to her passing, Joyce received a certificate inducting her into Vernard's Distinguished Association of Golden Grads, Class of 1955. This certificate was promptly framed and proudly displayed in the little apartment at Sun City, Alma, Ga. where she spent such happy days during the final chapter of her time on earth.

Unquestionably, music was Joyce's greatest passion. While Joyce played organ and piano and sang for countless weddings, funerals and many other services, teaching piano was what she loved best. The pitter-patter of children's feet entering her home for their piano lessons echoed continuously for over 50 years. Joyce loved her piano students dearly teaching was truly her life's calling. Joyce was far too humble even to imagine the legacy she left behind, but how thrilled she would be to know that young scholars studying fine arts could receive a scholarship to help them attend college because of her life's dedication to music and to children.

Contributions to the Joyce Wheeler Music Scholarship Fund may be sent to Alma Exchange Bank, 501 W. 12th Street, Alma, Georgia 31510.

Kur drafts resolution to hire outside civil counsel

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

John Jarema

The author of the proposed resolution to remove Charlevoix County prosecutor John Jarema as the county's civil counsel was revealed last week.

During the Jan. 11, organizational meeting of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, sixth district county commissioner, Shirley Roloff, informed the other commissioners that former Charlevoix County prosecutor Mary Beth Kur, was paid $150 to draft the resolution.

Roloff said she brought the matter to the board's attention because she is tired of not knowing about some of the county business that occurs.

"No one knew where it came from. They didn't know who wrote it and to me, that's not right," she said. "I can tell you exactly who wrote it and I think the people should know it and I think that in 2006 that everything we do everyone should know about so we're all on the same page."

Roloff said she understands most drafts of resolutions come out of the county clerk's office. She said she wouldn't be so upset if the draft hadn't come out of Kur's office.

Kur and Jarema have a long history of public political battles.

Fourth district county commissioner and chairman of the board, Vic Patrick said, "I think a resolution of this nature is probably not something that the clerk's office draws up every day and it's entirely possible that they had to go outside to have somebody draw it up."

Charlevoix Township resident, Carol Martin, asked to know who chose Kur to write the resolution and who authorized the payment.

"It sounds like you guys didn't know this was happening," she said.

Third district county commissioner, Ronald Reinhardt said, "Vaguely yes, we knew that we were leaning in that direction."

Patrick said the bill wasn't reviewed until after Dec. 14, which was the date of the meeting at which the resolution was unanimously voted down.

Charlevoix resident, Samantha Harris said, "The bottom line, I feel, is that you people lied and we can't trust you. You all sat here and said you did not know where it (resolution to remove Jarema as civil counsel) came from."

First district county commissioner, Josh Barnes, refuted prior knowledge of the resolution.

"I did not know where it came from, I knew nothing about it and I don't like being called a liar," he said.

Harris later apologized for using the word liar.

Patrick said farming out work to Kur could be misconstrued in light of the animosity between she and Jarema and the nearly $1 million dollar lawsuit the county was required to pay in May of 2005 to settle a suit filed by two of her former employees.

"If people in this city don't want this firm (Schmoll, Martin and Kur PLLC) or this ex-prosecutor (Kur) to do any work at all, then suppose if our present prosecutor doesn't get elected next time, do we want to automatically exclude him from any work in the county from then on," Reinhardt said.

said. "I say no."

Mary Beth Kur

Fifth district commissioner Dennis Jason said, for what it's worth, he knew nothing of who authorized Kur to write the resolution.

Martin said she believes some people don't want Kur working for the county because of the lawsuit settlement.

"Again, there are other people in this county that have a different opinion," Reinhardt said. "They just don't come down here hollering about this whole thing."

Barnes said he wanted to make it clear that he and Jarema had a major disagreement about the publication of the article which appeared in the Charlevoix Courier which questioned the legality of his commission seat.

"However, I covered it directly with John (Jarema). I did not go to Mary Beth (Kur) or any one else," he said. "John and I resolved the issue and put it behind us and I think he's satisfied."

Barnes added, "I would like you to believe me when I tell you I did not know where that memo (resolution) came from and I was not very happy with it either."

Angermuller family take over Duke's Deli

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

A local family is now serving up deli delights at Duke's Deli on Bridge Street in Charlevoix.

Debbie and John Angermuller took the deli over in September of 2005 and recently remodeled its interior to better serve customers.

The two bought the business from Alma Yaldo. Debbie, who works at local Harbor Wear stores said she developed a friendship with Yaldo when she operated the deli and found out about the business opportunity is their discussions.

"It was one of those spontaneous things," Debbie said.

The Angermuller family opted to keep the name due to other established Duke's Deli locations in the area.

Since taking over the reigns the Angermullers have put their son, Joe, 22, at the helm in the kitchen. Joe, the store manager, has extensive culinary experience and said he prides himself on the meticulously maintained environment at the eatery.

"We pride ourselves on cleanliness. We believe strongly in that," John, who is also a self-employed handy man, said.

They have added hot-dog rollers and sell beef Coney dogs daily. Other than the Coney dog addition, the Angermullers have kept the Duke's Deli menu in tact which features desserts as well as block and barrel cheeses and meats in sandwiches, wraps and salads. They also offer catering.

The Angermullers have daily $5 lunch specials which include half a sandwich, soup or a side salad, chips, a pickle and a small fountain drink. Free delivery is available from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Duke's Deli is located at 216 Bridge Street in downtown Charlevoix. Deli hours are from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

For more information, to place an order or inquire about catering call the deli at (231) 547-7900.

Hilligan takes reigns at Muscle Menders

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Medical massage therapist Jeff Hilligan is kneading and stretching area residents to improve their health.

Hilligan, who bought Muscle Menders of Charlevoix in January 2005 from its owner of five years, Janet Stutzman, said after a year in the biz, he is seeing first-hand the healing capabilities of medical massage.

His interest in the approach to wellness came when he suffered severe neck and shoulder pain from repeated motions he made while washing windows for his business, Window Butler.

"It essentially disabled me," he said. He said after a series of medical massage treatments with Stutzman he could pick up his children, Tucker and Abby, again and resumed normal movement with the injured shoulder.

It didn't take much convincing

"We treat the cause, not the effect. It's amazing, where it hurts generally isn't the problem."

Jeff Hilligan,
Owner of Charlevoix Muscle Menders

from Stutzman for Hilligan to believe in the therapy and he decided this was the new direction his professional life would move in.

"I have a whole new perspective on people's health," he said.

He attended Blue Heron Healing Arts Academy from where he earned his national board certification in medical massage in July 2005.

Hilligan explained that medical massage is cause based where relaxation massage is effect based.

"We treat the cause, not the effect," he said. "It's amazing, where it hurts generally isn't the problem."

To relieve chronic pain and reduce muscle inflammation, spasms and stress, Hilligan uses site specific massage as opposed to focusing on the whole body.

Hilligan said since taking over Muscle Menders of Charlevoix he has been involved in numerous success stories where clients have been able to stop taking pain medication and have found relief through his work.

"People are so disheartened with the medical community. It's either a drug or a test," he said. "I love the challenge of educating them. Giving them the easy thing to do to feel better and heal — implementing quality versus quantity in their daily routines."

While he offers stretch and strength routines to his clients he also touts the importance of drinking water in healing.

"Metabolically what it (water) does for your body is amazing," he said.

Hilligan continues to operate his Window Butler business. He has two employees who do the physical side of the business.

He said the massage business does not impact his shoulder in that it employs gravity strength where window washing is overhead work.

Stutzman offers limited service at Muscle Menders of Charlevoix and is not accepting new clients.

Hilligan is looking to expand his client base and said he's available days or evenings by appointment.

He charges $35 for a 30 minute treatment and $60 for an hour.

For more information, or to schedule an appointment call Jeff Hilligan at (231) 237-0077 or send him an e-mail at musclemendersllc@peoplepc.com.

Muscle Menders of Charlevoix is located at 5951 Loeb Road in the Secretary of State building.

Roger Nesburg awarded chairman's honor

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Charlevoix's Roger Nesburg received the chairman's award at the annual Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce dinner in recognition of the time and resources he has given to the community.

Chairman of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce board of directors, Jim Berlage, who presented the chairman's award to Nesburg, said Nesburg was chosen, "Because of his great contributions to Charlevoix and the chamber of commerce over his many years in Charlevoix."

Nesburg has a degree in metallurgy from Michigan Tech, he is a member of the Charlevoix Yacht Club, Street Legends car club and the Lions Club. He is a t-ball coach, a field trip bus driver, a cub scout troop leader, a member of the St. Mary church as well as a member of the St. Mary School advisory board of directors.

Nesburg has been in Charlevoix since 1978 and worked for LexaLite International until he started Charlevoix Screenmasters in 1984. He lives in Charlevoix with his wife, Annette, and four children, 7-year-old Michael and 6-year-old triplets Danny, Rachael and Natalie.

Nesburg said the honor came as a pleasant surprise.

"I was humbled and honored," he said.

Nesburg said the driving force behind all his work with the chamber and different committees over the years are his children.

"I'm one of those people who are willing to step in. This is one of those things where they are looking for people to step in and help out to make the community a better place," he said. "Adult leaders are needed to step in and take leadership responsibilities and to influence the community in a positive way."

According to Berlage, Nesburg served on the chamber's board of directors from 1999 to 2002 as well as being chairman of the board in 2001 and 2002 and serving on the industrial development committee for several years.

Berlage said Nesburg is invaluable to the success of the chamber coming into the technological age.

"Through his leadership, all the chamber's computers and software programs were updated to make the chamber office more efficient to serve our members to the public," Berlage said. "Thank you, Roger Nesburg. Your leadership and skills are truly inspiring. You are a remarkable person. Your unselfish dedication has made this organization the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, a better place for all who are a part of it."

Nesburg said, "I took great interest in the membership of the chamber. I guess I took a step inside to see how things work and I was amazed at how much time and effort the staff puts into Charlevoix."

"I enjoyed helping the chamber administer their programs for local businesses and the community — they're not just a business organization as I've often heard them described — I see them doing more than that," he added.

Castiglione named to department of emergency services

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners approved the appointment of Linda Castiglione as the new deputy coordinator of the Department of Emergency Services of Charlevoix County.

Jack Messer, director of emergency services, recommended Castiglione for this unpaid, volunteer position which is designed to support the acting director in preparing for catastrophic events as well as responding to them. Castiglione would also act as director in Messer's absence.

Linda

"I'm excited about it," Castiglione said.

"It's a good opportunity to serve the public."

Castiglione, who is a civil engineer by trade, was the emergency plan coordinator at Big Rock Point nuclear power plant where she has been since 1979.

She said she was asked by

Messer to be his assistant to help plan for catastrophes such as floods, terrorist events and even epidemics and pandemics of contagious disease.

In her new position, Castiglione would facilitate cooperation between different entities such as the health department and the police station responding to an emergency situation.

The position is unpaid with training and travel costs authorized by the Charlevoix County Office of Emergency Management.

Children's House awarded scholarship grant

Charlevoix Children's House students Aidan Flynn and Izabel Frey stand with Maureen Radke with the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, school director Barb Godwin-Chulick and school board president Linda Whitley to accept a $1,700 foundation grant to be used for student scholarships.

Scholarship opportunities at the local Montessori school, Charlevoix Children's House were recently expanded due to a $1,700 grant awarded to the school by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

According to school director Barb Godwin-Chulick, the tuition funds will offer partial scholarships to students of families who qualify.

"We would like to help as many families as we can," she said.

This is the first grant the school has been awarded by the foundation since Godwin-Chulick took over the director's position five years ago.

Scheduling for class participation at Charlevoix Children's House is for full or half-day programs.

"Extending our school's programming to a greater population supports the Charlevoix community of families," the author of the school's grant application states. "The continuity and completion of the three-year program provides a solid educational foundation for these children to enter first grade."

Godwin-Chulick said that natural disasters have reduced the amount of charitable contributions to the school and the grant was a needed boost to the scholarship program.

The grant came from the foundation's Youth Fund and was awarded in November after Godwin-Chulick gave a hands-on presentation of Montessori materials to the youth board.

Maureen Radke of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation said the Children's House grant request fit the Youth Fund's mission in that it will be used to enhance the quality of life for children in Charlevoix County.

Founded in 1978, Charlevoix Children's House serves students ages 2-and-a-half to 6. The one-room classroom is state licensed to serve 31 students and currently has 25 enrolled. Godwin-Chulick is joined by certified instructor and co-director Stacey Edwards and classroom assistant Ashley Kughman.

The school is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. weekdays during the school year. Families can obtain scholarship applications by visiting www.charlevoixchildrenshouse.org or through the school located at 08700 Mercer Boulevard in Charlevoix. Applications are reviewed by an independent scholarship committee, headed by school administrator Dianne Dreyer.

Scholarships will be awarded in July. The amount awarded to an applicant will be based on funds available and the student's economic need.

For more information call the school at (231) 547-5599.

Those in the natural sciences keep constant watch on the state of salmon in the Great Lakes, but not too long ago there were no such fish in any of Michigan's waterways.

According to John Clevenger, Fisheries Technician with the Charlevoix division of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR), alewives were an exotic species which came in through the St. Lawrence Seaway. Due to a lack of natural predators, the alewife population increased in numbers detrimental to the environment.

"The population exploded in the late 1950s and 1960s but there were no real predator species to keep them in check," Clevenger said. "They overpopulated and began washing up on beaches and creating a real stink."

Clevenger said the overabundance of nutrients loaded the lakes having a negative environmental impact. He said it took industrial front-end loaders to scoop the hundreds of thousands of fish off the once clean shores.

"There was nobody using the beaches because they couldn't stand to be down there, so the fisheries division brought in coho salmon, then Chinook salmon in the late 1960s," he said. "First they were brought in to control the alewife population then the sport fishing that followed."

While some of the uncontrolled exotic species have had potentially negative effects on the environment, Clevenger said, the salmon have had nothing but a positive economic and natural impact.

Currently, scientists like Clevenger compare fish planted by the Department of Natural Resources from one hatchery

DNR fish program teaches science hands-on to another. During this latest study the Department of Natural Resources has found nothing out of the ordinary in the fish population, but they have proved some things which they had previously suspected.

As a result of the study, he said, "We've made some management decisions. We've seen better survival of different stocking sites so we made some adjustments accordingly. In some sites that did well, we added fish. In some sites that didn't do so well, we reduced fish."

While most salmon existing in the Great Lakes were planted, Clevenger said, "In recent times we are seeing some wild fish or naturally reproduced fish showing up in the catch."

Clevenger said the local salmon have many similarities, but there are some differences from their oceanic cousins, the main difference being size.

Salmon are marked with a coded wire tag which is placed in the fish before being released in specific areas around the lakes.

"Coded wire tags have been used in the Great Lakes since the mid to late 1980s in lake trout and have been used with Chinook salmon since about 1990," he said. "We're into the fifth year of marking. Then it takes another four years of studying the fish."

He added, "These studies can take up to eight or nine years to complete."

In cooperation with the Department of Natural Resources' coded wire tagging program, an average of 100 eighth grade science students in Charlevoix get a chance to experience some hands-on work in wildlife management each year.

"They actually get to do some of the work that the DNR does," said Charlevoix Middle School eighth grade science teacher, Paul Gelderblom. "We tag the fish, we measure them during the school year and we divide how many fish we have in the tank and put them in a cooler with an aerator and each class gets to release some of the fish into Lake Charlevoix."

In the four years his classes have been raising, tagging and releasing fish, this is the first year someone caught a salmon released by one of his classes.

"This is the first one returned with a tag in it," he said. "Which is really special because the amount of fish we tag and release compared with the number of fish out there is really exciting."

Local fisherman Ron Fratrack is the first known angler to land a fish released by the eighth graders and Clevenger said if he sees 500 fish back from 100,000 which were released, that is a high.

For a fisherman to catch a tagged salmon out of a release of only a couple hundred is amazing, he said.

Clevenger said, what the Department of Natural Resources really wants to know is, are fish from one hatchery in better condition than fish from another hatchery.

"One may not be better than the other, but how do they compare in size, fat content and overall condition of the fish before it's released," he said.

Clevenger said, "In fall we take (Chinook) eggs out of fish then fertilize them and raise them in the hatchery for five to five-and-a-half months then they are tagged within the last month before being released when they are big enough to accept the tags."

"Once tagged, they are held in the hatchery and tagged with the same number at each location and brought up in a truck," he said. "At some sites they go directly into the river and some sites they are released into the weir or a holding tank."

As the population of alewives is reduced so too will the number of salmon, which are planted in the lakes.

Because, Clevenger said, "You can't have more predators than prey."

Steering committee discuss school expense cuts

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The members of the Charlevoix Public Schools Financial Steering Committee met for their third of four meetings on Jan. 12 at Charlevoix Middle School to create and discuss a philosophy for expenditure reductions.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Schools, Dr. John Sturock, opened the meeting with a review of the work completed in previous meetings and then explained how the process of ranking expenditures would go.

Sturock said, "Given all are important, which would you rank high, in other words, if the Board of Education were faced with making reductions, these would be the last reductions made."

Sturock then asked the group to rank expenditures which they thought should be low on the list, meaning they would be the first items to go if cuts are made.

The committee members were also directed to rationalize the order in which they put their items just before breaking into groups of five.

Group one thought cuts which result in the loss of students and therefore revenue and anything which would impact core academics should be the absolute last.

Group two's consensus was the administration building is low on the list and should be looked at before anything else is cut.

The members of group three think there should be some restriction and restructuring of teacher conferences since there are so many and they can be costly. They also think selling the administrative building and moving the administration to the high school should be looked at long before any programs are cut.

Group four mentioned the teacher's health care plan and said it could be brought in line with the rest of the business world to help lower the burden on school budgets. The group also thinks the efficiency of block scheduling, consolidated bus runs and privatized lawn care could be explored.

Sturock said this meeting was helpful and he is excited about sharing it with the board.

"I'm pleased with the outcome," he said. "We've ranked the priorities so when the board looks at expenditures at least we'll have somewhere to start."

He added, "The school board is looking for community input and this group's input is sincere."

The committee has their fourth scheduled meeting at 7 p.m., Jan. 26 at Charlevoix Middle School to brainstorm potential ways to generate revenue and put all the information they've come up with together in a package which will be submitted to the board at a later date.

Development planned for Pine River Lane

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Plans are underway for a 12-unit hotel to be built overlooking the Pine River Channel.

The proposed condominium hotel would be built on just under an acre of land owned by Peter Carey, Julie Bandfield and Randy Carey located at 115 Pine River Lane in Charlevoix.

"It was the desire of the families to develop the best possible plan for the City of Charlevoix," said the agent for the property owners, Nancy Carey, of Coldwell Banker Schmidt Realtors of Petoskey and Charlevoix.

Carey said the property is zoned commercial and in that zone there are less desirable things which could be built such as boat storage facilities. She said this proposed "boutique style" project would have 24 underground parking spaces to help preserve the beauty of the area.

Currently a single residence occupies a portion of the property.

Carey refused to disclose the name of the developer of the proposed project and hesitated to speculate on what might come of the existing house but she did mention the developer is a local company.

The property is zoned commercial and the proposed project is within acceptable uses Carey said.

"This plan is in compliance with current code," Carey said. "It's important to the family that the people understand that we are not taking an R-1 and changing it to commercial. The property was zoned commercial as per the city's own master plan. A condominium hotel is the highest and best use for the community."

Carey said there is a beautiful view of the Pine River Channel and the owner hopes to have fountains and many flowers to accentuate the beauty of the proposed construction site.

"Although there is a hotel there already, (Weathervane Terrace Inn and Suites) we wanted it to be residential in nature because we're trying to be good neighbors by respecting the nature of the area," she said.

While the proposed project is still in the early stages, Carey said the owners hope to begin construction if and when they receive approval.

"We hope to assist in the economic growth of the area by improving the infrastructure in that area for everyone," Carey said. "Change occurs and it has to happen. We've planned for it in the best possible way and I hope people understand that."

The members of the City of Charlevoix's government have been more than helpful, Carey said.

"They provided us with all the information we needed to submit a plan," she said. "It's a very detailed process and it can be overwhelming for people, even developers."

She added, "They were absolutely wonderful, while being very protective of the zoning in the city and they (were) very clear about what the community needed and wanted. They provided a great balance in their service to us and the community."

And, Carey said, if this plan is approved, there will also be a new waterline installed, "which will be much improved from the current waterline."

In planning for this project, Carey said, the owners want to offer larger spaces than are available in the downtown area with the hopes that hotel rooms with living rooms, kitchens and overall more spacious surroundings will entice families to stay for longer periods in Charlevoix.

Carey said the family planned this project as a memorial of sorts for their deceased father and grandfather, Peter Don Campbell, who was a local retailer for many years beginning in 1917.

"He wanted more than anything for Charlevoix to prosper. And if he were alive today, I think he would be sad at the empty storefronts and the way Charlevoix appears to be struggling economically," she said. "He wanted the town to be vibrant and he wanted people to live and work and play here."

According to city zoning administrator Dianne Manore members of the city's planning department met Jan. 16 to review a revised plan as the initial plans did not meet the city's code.

A date has not been set when this project will go before the City of Charlevoix Planning Commission for a development plan review. The next planning commission meeting is at 6 p.m. Feb. 13 in the second floor city council chambers at city hall.

Anyone looking for more information may contact Nancy Carey at (231) 645-1234.

Fireman's Ball to take place Feb. 11

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

For the past six years the Fireman's Ball in Charlevoix has been a means of recognizing local firefighters for their sacrifices and efforts as well as helping raise some funds for equipment.

The seventh annual Fireman's Ball will take place from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Feb. 11 at the Charlevoix Country Club. Tickets are $30 each or two for $50 and can be purchased at the fire department or through the president of the Firefighters Association, Winfield Scott.

According to Scott, there will be a dinner, a silent auction, raffles and dancing to tunes provided by DJ the DJ at this year's hall.

And, he said, "We use the money we raise to buy equipment for the department that the city doesn't get for us."

In the past, the fund-raising efforts allowed the department to purchase new handheld radios and an auxiliary trailer for their dive team among other things.

The hall is open to the public, Scott said.

"Last year we had about 200 people — it just seems to be getting bigger and bigger every year, which is a great thing," he added.

For ticket information, call Scott at (231) 547-2821.

This snowmobile and trailer are just two of many items the City of Charlevoix Fire Department was able to purchase with funds raised at their annual Fireman's Ball. This year's event will take place Feb. 11 at the Charlevoix Country Club.

Skiers continue to improve race time

By BENJAMIN GOHS

Rayder volleyball tally conference wins

Charlevoix to host an invitational Jan. 28

By SCOTT RICHARDS
Sports writer

The lady Rayder varsity volleyball team ended a big week of successful play.

They picked up two conference wins when they traveled to a well coached East Jordan team on Monday, Jan. 9 and again to Boyne City on Friday, Jan. 12 where the Ramblers could hardly wait to take them on.

They then traveled to Ludington on Saturday, Jan. 14 and played in the Scottsville Mason Invitational where they placed third.

"The East Jordan game was a big win for us" said varsity coach Liz Grunch. "We really played well, they have a very good coach and a really good program."

The lady Rayders swept all three matches. The first match was a close fought one with Charlevoix just squeaking by 25-23 then 25-18 and 25-20. Sasha Spencey had 14 of 15 serve receives, 10 kills, seven digs and three blocks. Sally Haselschwardt had six kills and three blocks. Emily Heffling had eight digs. Bethany Pearson had four kills and two blocks. And Zita Anderson added 23 assists.

Coach Grunch was very pleased with

Sasha Spencey

to face an eager Boyne City team.

"They were really fired up for us," Grunch said. "They were just waiting for us."

But just like they played against East Jordan, the Rayders soundly swept the Ramblers 25-17, 25-12 and 25-11.

"That was the best team effort yet," seven kills and six blocks. Anderson had 21 assists and 12 digs. Ashlie Bradley had six kills and nine digs.

On Sunday night, Jan. 15 the team returned from Ludington after spending the night there where they placed third against some really big teams at the Scottsville Mason Invitational.

Grunch said. "We are playing better every day, all the hard work is starting to pay off."

The totals for the Boyne City game were Murphy Gillespie with 10 kills.

Pearson had 21 assists and 12 digs. Ashlie Bradley had six kills and nine digs.

There is a lot of volleyball season yet to play. As of this week the lady Rayders varsity volleyball overall record is 10-8-5 and a perfect 3-0 in the conference.

Their next match is against Elk Rapids on Thursday, Jan. 19 at Charlevoix High School.

Charlevoix, 4-4 overall and 2-3 conference, traveled to Elk Rapids for a Lake Michigan Conference game on Tuesday, Jan. 17. Results were unavailable at press time. The Rayders host East Jordan on Friday, Jan. 20.

Rayders take Kalkaska in double overtime

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Trevor Mays hit two free throws with three seconds left in regulation to keep Charlevoix alive as the Rayders rallied for an 89-86 double overtime win over Kalkaska last Friday night.

It was a topsy-turvy game as Charlevoix led by as many as 13 in the third quarter but were victims to a 19-2 Kalkaska run to begin the fourth quarter. The Blazers led at that point, midway through the fourth quarter, 70-63.

The Rayders trailed by seven with 43 seconds on the clock but came back thanks to four consecutive missed free throws by Kalkaska and clutch shots by Mitchell Crandall and Matt Kautz.

In the overtime frames, the lead went back and forth numerous times and the outcome was always in doubt, right up to a Kalkaska desperation half-court three-point attempt at the buzzer that hit the backboard and rim before bouncing out.

Kautz finished with 26 points, eight rebounds, five steals and four assists. Crandall had 25 points, eight rebounds and three assists to lead the Rayders. Mike DiMartino had a double-double with 12 points and 11 rebounds. Mays pulled down seven rebounds.

Earlier in the week, the Rayders snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating Boyne City, 70-66.

Charlevoix used a balanced attack with five players in double figures in the win. DiMartino, Kautz and Dustin Dibble each scored 13 points. Crandall had 12 points and 16 rebounds. Dan Swenor added 11.

Ty Haske handed out seven assists. Kautz had six steals and three assists.

The Rayders led 12-8 after the first quarter, 29-24 at the half and 52-42 after three periods before the Ramblers rallied late.

ISD receives grant for Stepping Stones program

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, January 18, 2006 - PAGE 31

Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District is among 14 communities statewide to receive funding to enhance early childhood development and care initiatives.

On Thursday, Jan. 12 Governor Jennifer Granholm and Marvin McKinney, board chair of the Early Childhood Investment Corporation announced $1.24 million in grants to fund 14 Great Start Collaboratives. Thirty-nine intermediate school districts initially applied for these competitive grants.

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District was awarded $90,000. Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District Superintendent, Mark Eckhardt, said by focusing on early learning and childhood development, the community will reap the benefits in the future as children come to school better able to learn.

"We are proud of our early childhood initiatives that expand well beyond the ISD and include many community partners in health care, the libraries, private businesses, parents, our schools and others," Eckhardt said. "Through this partnership, our most precious resource — our young children — will succeed."

From the day she took office, Granholm has maintained that early childhood development and care is a critical investment in the economic viability of the state. Her dedication to this effort spurred her to launch Project Great Start in 2003. In her 2005 State of the State message, the Granholm expanded Project Great Start with the formation of the Early Childhood Investment Corporation, a non-profit public corporation charged with focusing local efforts at promoting early learning and childhood development activities and connecting those local efforts into a statewide Great Start System.

"Children learn more from birth to age three than at any other time, setting the stage for future success in school and in life," Granholm said. "High-quality early childhood development and care is a wise investment in our children and our economy."

This is the first group of communities to receive funding through the Early Childhood Investment Corporation. Intermediate school districts will act as "fiduciaries" for the grants. In this round of grants, seven of the community plans were designated as Great Start Collaboratives, and seven more were awarded grants to help them build the capacity to become Great Start Collaboratives.

In the Charlevoix-Emmet community, the Human Services Coordinating Body and Stepping Stones to School will bring together public and private sectors to participate in the planning process.

Stepping Stones to School is a network of agencies that provide services to families with children birth to age five. Through its "one-stop-shopping" network of services, families with young children can access a variety of educational and health services to help them ready their child for kindergarten and early success in life.

Stepping Stones to School connects families with free services including: Play groups to meet other families and children; child development and vision screenings; educational and fun activities at local schools; a free event line to call and hear about age-appropriate fun activities in local communities (877) 866-3714; newsletters with information on health, nutrition and fun activities; birthday packets from your local school until a child reaches kindergarten; home visits for infants from a registered nurse.

All services are free and families can register with Stepping Stones to School by calling the toll-free number listed above or (231) 547-6216.

Although the Great Start funds do not pay for services, funds will support additional networking to link more services to the Stepping Stones to School network and support families with children ages 0 to 5.

Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District and the other Great Start Collaboratives receiving grants from the Early Childhood Investment Corporation will conduct community assessments and develop strategic plans for the development of a comprehensive system of early childhood services and supports accessible to all children from birth to kindergarten and their families.

Groups committed to participating in the Great Start collaborative include Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, Department of Human Services, Early On, Northern Lakes Economic Alliance, parents and others.

City council names Gerard Doan chief of police

the community.

Former chief Dennis Halverson announced his resignation in late September. Halverson, the longest serving Charlevoix Chief of Police, accepted the "Safe Schools Coordinator" position with the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District. He started in this position in early November.

Deputy police chief Scott Hankins has filled the role of interim chief during the transition time.

John Jarecki Jr.

Council interviewed the final three candidates on Jan. 11 including Doan and two others who were recommended by a team of area law enforcement professionals. The team picks were Patrick Foster, a sergeant with the Clay Township Police Department in Algonac, and John Jarecki, Jr., the city police chief in Norway, a town in the Upper Peninsula.

The professional team made up of Rogers City Police Chief Matthew Quanne, former Traverse City public safety director, Ralph Soffredine and Mackinaw City Police Chief Patrick Wyman interviewed seven applicants for the local police chief position. Doan was not picked out of the group.

Council and members of the community took issue with the team's decision not to recommend Doan, a long-time city patrolman, and chose to put him back in the running.

Doan said this decision was a boost for him and he was pleased to have the opportunity to continue.

"I'm glad I went through the whole process. I am so thankful for the community support. Without that I wouldn't have stood a chance," he said. "I must be doing a good job and people think I can take it a step further."

Doan also had the backing of his fellow patrolmen. City patrolman Matt Umulis spoke at the meeting.

"I've worked with Gerard for three years. He's taken me under his wing," he said. "He's the man for the job."

From comments made by council the final toss up was between Foster and Doan.

Third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain said Jarecki's strengths were his proven leadership abilities but he doesn't feel he wants to be here.

The City of Norway Police Department is privatizing and Chamberlain said Jarecki is being phased out.

"I didn't feel the passion," Chamberlain said.

While Jarecki didn't have the passion for council, Doan will have to prove himself. Chamberlain said Doan has the least impressive resume of the final three candidates.

"He has a big ladder to go up," he said.

While the administrative side of the working chief's position will have a steep learning curve for Doan, he said he can do it.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't think I could do it. It's a big risk," he said. "The biggest thing I've got going for me is community awareness. The other two candidates don't have the community ties I have. I feel I possess the leadership qualities to run this department."

Education was one place Doan said he could improve. However, he said as a father of young children he can't dedicate a lot of time to school right now.

Chamberlain said he hopes to see Doan pursue continued education opportunities.

"Sometimes you have to hang up the frying pan for another frying pan," Chamberlain said.

City manager Mike Wiesner, who is Doan's supervisor, agreed.

"I know he doesn't have the time right now but sometimes you have to make the time," Wiesner said.

Doan, 43, is a city resident who has been a patrolman for the city since May of 1986. He heads up the city's DARE and child safe lock programs.

Last summer he served as a lifeguard supervisor for the city's recreation department. This is a position he will not fulfill as chief.

He was not at the council meeting Monday night because he was giving ski lessons at the city's ski hill, Mt. McSaubia and returned home to take care of his two children while his wife, Becky, attended.

After council voted, Becky left chambers to deliver the verdict.

Prior to taking the patrolman's position with the city he was a Charlevoix County Sheriff's Deputy for six months.

He is a Charlevoix High School graduate and earned his bachelor's degree in law enforcement from Lake Superior State University.

Foster's uncle, Charlevoix resident, Dave Juilleret, said he was disappointed at the outcome and feels Doan is the less qualified candidate.

"The (professional team) group overlooked Gerard for obvious reasons. If city council was just going to pick the good old boy why go through the application process," Juilleret said.

Foster, 36, began his career in law enforcement in Charlevoix in 1992 when he was a part-time patrolman for the summer.

A lack of full-time positions had him looking for opportunities elsewhere.

He became an Indiana state trooper in 1993 where he stayed for a year before moving to the Clay Township Police Department.

There he supervises two squads of patrol officers.

He earned his bachelor of science degree from Western Michigan University and is currently attending Central Michigan University to earn a master's degree in organizational development.

Foster said his ultimate goal is to become a city manager.

Foster has two children who he said he wanted to raise in Charlevoix. His parents, Nancy (Juilleret) and Jerry Foster who now own a resort in Hessel are Charlevoix

High School graduates.

Had Foster been appointed he said he wanted to bring a "park the car" approach back — with officers walking the town and interacting more with the public.

"I wouldn't come in here like a bull in a china shop. I would get my feet on the ground before I start running," Foster said.

He also aimed to have the department nationally accredited.

Foster was not available for comment.

This week, Doan plans to meet with department heads to see where expectations lie at city hall. In the future, like Foster, he plans to implement community policing with officers walking the beat.

Northern Michigan Review sold

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Ownership of the Charlevoix Courier has changed hands.

After owning the company for more than 70 years, the Schaller family has sold Northern Michigan Review, Inc., the parent company for publications which include the Charlevoix Courier, the Petoskey News-Review, the Gaylord Herald Times, The Graphic, Super Shopper, PhoneGuide and Saturday.

The sale to Schurz Communications, Inc. which has its headquarters in South Bend, Ind., is expected to be finalized by early March. Terms of the sale were not disclosed.

"We are pleased to be joining the Schurz organization," said Elsa Schaller-DeWitt, president of Northern Michigan Review, Inc. "Schurz Communications shares our values and recognizes the vital role our newspapers, PhoneGuide and other publications play in our communities. We are excited about the markets we serve and believe this transaction will provide a strong foundation for continuing to faithfully serve our communities."

The Schaller family has been involved in the northern Michigan newspaper business since the 1930s when William F. Schaller started The Northern Michigan Shopping Review, which later became the Northern Michigan Review.

In 1953, the Northern Michigan Review merged with the Petoskey Evening News and became the Petoskey News-Review. William's son, Albert Schaller, was publisher at that time.

At the time of his death on July 10, 1979, Albert Schaller had been in the publishing business for 56 years, and expanded News-Review interests to include the Gaylord Herald-Times, the Charlevoix Courier and The Graphic.

Pajtas rules against Ways in development struggle

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Plans for development of over 400 residences to be built on a sprawling field in Eveline Township were struck down by Judge Richard Pajtas last week in Charlevoix County's 33rd Circuit Court.

"Their project does not comply with the township's objective to preserve the rural character of the township. It would both fragment and encroach upon the existing rural, residential neighborhoods," Pajtas states in his opinion.

Pajtas issued this 30-page opinion on Jan. 19, ruling in favor of 13 Eveline Township residents who have fought the dense residential development plan since the spring of 2002.

This decision throws out an initial settlement agreement reached in 2004 between property owners Dawson and his son Barney Way and the Eveline Township Board which opened the door for the proposed development.

In March of 2004 the Eveline Township Board unanimously denied the Way request for R-4 high density residential zoning. When the Ways brought an exclusionary zoning suit against the township, the settlement surfaced.

The agreement, which is now moot, included development over a 16-year period of the 157-acre Way property located near Ferry, Brock and Roberts roads. On the northern part of the property, it allowed for 275 manufactured home sites and on the south 150 other residential units including condominiums.

The property is zoned farm/forest. The uses proposed in the settlement would range in zoning designation from R-2, medium density residential to R-4 high density residential.

Nearby residents, including farm operators Sue and Mike Kiteley and John and Nancy Cisne, were outraged by the settlement and on March 19, 2004 stepped forward and intervened. This intervention was granted by Pajtas.

According to attorney for the intervening defendants, Jim Pagets with the Gaylord law firm Benaway and Pagels, P.C., the defendants filed to intervene because they didn't feel the settlement between the Eveline Township Board and the Ways was in the best interest of property owners who neighbor the has four television stations, four radio stations, two cable companies and a printing company.

The cornerstone of the company is the South Bend Tribune, a daily newspaper in South Bend, Ind. It boasts a daily circulation of 72,688 and a Sunday circulation of 100,144. This was the first piece in the Schurz puzzle founded in 1872 by Alfred B. Miller and Elmer Crockett. Family members have held editor and publisher positions at the newspaper for five generations.

Geographically, Schurz Communications Inc. has a presence in Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Pennsylvania, California, Florida, Missouri, Georgia and Virginia.

Northern Michigan Review publications will be the company's only existing Michigan venture.

Courier publisher and Petoskey News-Review editor and publisher, Ken Winter, who has worked with Northern Michigan Review publications for 34 years, including a two-year stint as Courier editor from 1974-1976, said he is uncertain whether he plans to continue in this capacity at this time. He said he will stay on board at least until sale of the company is final in late February or early March.

"I'm using this transition as a time to decide what I personally want to do in my career for the next 10 years," he said. "I just know I've had a good run here and want to have fun in whatever I do. We have a talented staff, as well as a wonderful community to live and work in."

Winter added that the change in ownership will not impact Courier subscribers.

The future may hold changes for the publications of Northern Michigan Review, Inc.

But, Schaller-DeWitt said, "Changes are a good thing. I look forward to drawing on their resources which will allow us to continue to grow."

It's time to talk business in Charlevoix

Gayle Gennett
'A look at life'

"See you in the spring," or "For rent," are two signs appearing a lot in downtown Charlevoix.

In the 30 years I've lived here I have yet to see so many stores vacate the downtown district. Mind you I'm not a business owner but let me share this laywoman's view.

Tenants in downtown buildings have bills to pay just like the rest of us. Heat and electricity are climbing and there is insurance and taxes to pay too. It's inevitable that they may have their rent raised and then pass it on to us the consumer-lack of sales and high rent can leave an empty building. It saddens my heart to see so many vacant stores.

As my friends and family who do not live in Charlevoix read this paper, I just want to give you the heads up that our town doesn't look quite the same. Upon your return visit there may be many new stores or worse yet empty buildings. Being the eternal optimist, I am hopeful that future business owners will take a long hard look at what this town could value from. I also hope that they take advantage of such wonderful programs like Service Corp of Retired Executives that may guide and assist them to succeed.

On another thought, are there fewer chamber members? If so, why is that? Does one person own many buildings for tax purposes? I remember when I first moved here there were archways within the buildings connecting some of the downtown stores. When the walls went up did this create a territorial situation? I give kudos to businesses that can stick it out during the winter months. It's nice to have a few things for the locals.

Scovies Gourmet Deli and Bake Shop has hung in there as one of the new kids on the block. It's nice to know they have some dinner hours and provide a warm atmosphere with great home cooked meals. Kilwin's of Charlevoix will have winter hours so we can still shop for Valentine's Day. The Coffee Shop and Woolly Bugger have given me the little caffeine boost I need just around 3 p.m. My husband and I enjoy the ability to walk down the street and work out at the Harbor Health and Fitness Center. It's a hopping place seven days a week. Candy did her homework on this one.

I love to cook and Shop of the Gulls made a smart addition to their already savvy store by adding a classy kitchen store with cooking utensils for home entertainers like me. I love that I can walk to Central Drug Store and pick up needed medications and gift cards.

With Jim adding coffee to the Bridge Street Book Store, it's even more inviting to read, relax and pick out great books. I am happy we didn't lose our movie theater, Cinema III and that Bill made the smart choice to keep it downtown. If this is beginning to sound like an ad for Charlevoix, well so be it.

We were all up in arms about Wal-Mart but it seems we are still affected anyway. I know it would have been much worse with a big box store but this town is getting down to slim pickings. I may just have to resign myself that Charlevoix is strictly a summer resort. I'm reminded of that when our girls attended Michigan State University and were asked where they came from, replied, "Charlevoix." Many students, responded, "You mean you can live there year-round? Is there even a school?" they questioned.

With the winter months presenting a much quieter town I am forever grateful that so many wonderful people support the new library. By exceeding their campaign goal, it gave me hope that there are people still interested in living here. Each day as I watch them improve and expand the building, I feel proud to say I live here. It will be a state-of-the-art building educationally and architecturally. I envision people from other states visiting our library just to see how magnificent it is.

It's my ray of hope that Charlevoix will return to the bustling little town in can be. I'm not moving any time soon, and not planning on being the last one out and turning off the lights. If anything, I want our town and planners to wake up and smell the coffee. Join me at around 3 p.m., we'll meet downtown for coffee and conversation. Solutions to problems are like crying babies — you need to get them moving. Let's keep Charlevoix beautiful and marketable.

Traversing the windy roads of tax season

Benjamin Gohs
'Staff writer'

Filing day may be a few months off, but most of us will receive our W-2s soon. Some of us will jump for joy and some of us will curse the Internal Revenue Service's existence.

And, while I'll concede taxes used to build schools, roads and bridges are a necessary discomfort, I find it intolerable and shameful when the government robs its citizenry to mask its own failures.

Mark Twain said, "The only difference between a tax man and a taxidermist is that the taxidermist leaves the skin."

Perhaps Mr. Twain was speaking to Michigan, which levies taxes for motor vehicle weight, gasoline, general sales, liquor, horse race wagering, tobacco and income to name a few.

Then your local government levies operating, infrastructure, refuse, public school and sinking fund, home-stead, transit, recycling, library and recreational authority taxes among others.

Had enough? More than 10 states have additional taxes on illegal drugs. Those who purchase goods or services from nude or partially nude performers in Utah pay an extra tax and until a few years ago, Michigan imposed an "intangibles tax." Yes, I said intangibles.

Michigan won't tax you for the dirt on your final resting place, but the state will collect taxes on the casket, vault, monument and flowers.

The federal excise tax we pay for phone service each month (approximately $5.5 billion in 2000) was created to fund the Spanish-American War.

Which reminds me, I need to call Congress and let them know the war is over. Spain's no longer a threat fellas and ladies.

And what do we get for all this taxation?

Well, we get schools, roads, lots of politicians and enough pork projects to make me rethink going kosher.

Once the $315 million bridges to nowhere in Alaska are built and thousands are spent to study the effects of bovine flatulence, there is still a surplus in the billions. But what becomes of it?

Last year, an article in Capitalism Magazine purported some members of the armed services used tax funded credit cards meant for work related items to pay for concert tickets, cruise packages, gambling, strip clubs and prostitutes to the tune of over $293,000 in 18 months.

In addition, the article stated

15 percent of 300 Department of Agriculture employee credit card expenditures investigated revealed $5.8 million in inappropriate expenditures in just six months.

Once again, taxpayers were defrauded by federal employees.

Then there is the $100 million in unused plane tickets and the $20 billion a year in overpayments to program recipients by the federal government.

Meanwhile, $25 billion of your money is still unaccounted for from 2003. Searches conducted under Oval Office couch cushions were fruitless.

And let's not forget about that $8.8 billion still missing in action in the democratic republic of Iraq.

If reports surface of camels wandering the Syrian desert with gold plated hooves and diamond encrusted humps, we'll know Osama got hold of the cash.

Oh, and in a case of one small step for man and one giant bill for the American worker, NASA plans to return to the moon. Yeah, public schools are going bankrupt, but we can come up with $100 billion for an intergalactic joyride just to show some third world country we're still number one.

Does Congress really think Joe-six-pack gives a rats south side about the effects of zero gravity on the nervous system of an eggplant?

Then again, who's accountable? The government? Who is this government? That's just it, no one knows who exactly is wasting this money. I'm afraid as long as government officials have the anonymity to continue unaccounted spending frenzies, tax day will continue to be every day.

Letters to the editor

Let the lights shine

Editor:
Most people love the lights we place in the trees along Bridge Street at Christmas.

So, why not leave them up all year-round? I understand the electric bill might be $17,000, however, this is probably based on leaving the lights lit 24 hours per day as we do now. With timers installed we would only need the trees lighted for an average of six hours per evening, resulting in 75 percent power reduction. If the revised estimate for lighting the trees is only $4,250, then let's leave them trees lit up.

Attend commission meetings

Editor:
On Jan. 11 I was one of the people in attendance at the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners' meeting. I came out of that meeting very disappointed. You see, at the December meeting board member, Shirley Roloff asked who wrote the resolution to hire outside civil counsel as she knew nothing about it.

After much shoulder shrugging, the county clerk squeaked out that she did it. At the January meeting, Shirley revealed that actually Mary Beth Kur had written it. What a low blow. We question (Charlevoix County Clerk) Jane's (Brannon) authority to hire outside help. We either have a clerk who fancies herself as commissioner or commissioners that have given the clerk free rein.

Several times the commissioners were asked who authorized it. We never got an answer, just more shoulder shrugging. They wonder why we get upset, but I don't know what they expect when who did what is not answered or the answer changes from one month to the next. Trust must be earned. Trust is a precious thing and is hard to regain when it is lost.

I want to commend Ben Gohs for his writing of this article (Kur drafts resolution to hire outside civil counsel, page 9 Jan. 18 edition of the Courier). He was accurate and fair. He's always pleasant and respectful. I am sure he took some heat for it, but he must have strong shoulders or he wouldn't be in the business. I think the Courier is lucky to have him.

I would also like to commend Shirley Roloff. She works hard, insists on honesty and keeping county business open and communicated to the public. She's a woman of integrity and realizes she made a commitment to do the best for the people of her district and the county and she will do no less than her best. Residents of District 6 should be very proud to have elected her.

We too wish we could put the Kur-Jarema thing behind us, but when it keeps rearing its ugly head at the county commissioners' meetings we find it hard to do so. Yes, I am the mother-in-law of John Jarema but I have been a resident and taxpayer of Charlevoix County most of my life and I expect honesty, commitment and integrity from all of the commissioners.

I strongly encourage residents of all of the districts to attend the commissioners' meetings. The newspaper can't report everything and the minutes do not reflect the whole story. If just five or six people from each district would attend it would be great. Come and see your commissioner at work. It's very interesting.

Right to life

Editor:
This past Sunday was the 33rd Anniversary of one of the saddest days in America — 33 years ago, the Supreme Court gave its decision to legalize abortion in America.

Since then, more than 45 million innocent children have been killed in the name of choice. That means more babies have been killed than people have died in wars, since World War I to today.

The radicals on the left will have you believe that it is all about a woman's choice concerning her body. But what about the father of this "choice"? What's even more important, what about the voice of the child who can not speak or defend themselves? Who speaks for the children? It is so much more than a choice.

Do you know that the woman in the case has since changed her mind and wants the Roe vs. Wade verdict overturned?

Speaking of choice, it's not really a choice, it's a baby. It's the start of life.

Perhaps the real choice should have been made in keeping your pants on. That's right. Go ahead and laugh, but you know it's true. Kids know how babies are made and if you can't accept the possible outcome, then don't do the act. It really is that simple.

Before Roe vs. Wade, it was a state's decision to allow or deny access to abortion, not the federal government free-for-all it is now. Michigan voters did not approve of abortion 34 years ago and a majority of them still believe that today.

Who knows what or who these lost lives could have become if they were given the right to life.

Our Constitution holds the First Amendment to be the greatest, that being the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Life is the greatest of them all for without life, no other rights mean a damn.

Do I dare say this? But you know I will, be thankful we have a president who has the courage to speak up against such evils. Be thankful for a majority in Congress who have a conscience. Be thankful for a majority in the Michigan Legislature who have a conscience. Be thankful for two new Supreme Court Justices, Roberts and Alito.

Take a moment tonight and say a prayer for the lives lost. Be thankful that you are here today.

The classes are designed to help instructors teach and assess in ways that reflect the new Grade Level Content Expectations in mathematics.

Three Mathematics - Grade Level Assessments and Content Expectations workshops will be offered, each consisting of three concurrent sessions for specific grades. The workshops will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at East Jordan Elementary School. The first will take place Feb. 1 for Kindergarten, third and sixth grade teachers. The second will take place Feb. 8 for first, fourth and seventh grade teachers. And the third will take place Feb. 15 for second, fifth and eighth grade teachers.

Each teacher will receive two sets of materials that are being disseminated statewide. One set will be reviewed in the morning and the other will be presented in the afternoon. Each workshop will provide time for teachers to interact with colleagues to discuss age-appropriate materials and classroom strategies.

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District is co-sponsoring these sessions with SEE-North and will cover the costs of substitute teachers for participants from its constituent school districts.

SEE-North's Michigan Mathematics and Science Center grant will cover all other costs. There is no registration fee. Workshop leaders are experienced teachers who are also members of SEE-North's Michigan Mathematics Leadership Team. The leaders are Bill Allen of Boyne Falls; Kay Wasilewski of Charlevoix; and Gwen Catt and Greg Frey of Gaylord.

Accident delays MDOT traffic light upgrades

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Traffic will continue to be reduced to one lane of traffic coming from the north into downtown Charlevoix as work on the traffic light at the north side of the bridge continues.

The Michigan Department of Transportation initially reduced traffic to one lane of travel in November to facilitate a project aimed at modernizing the lights on the north and south sides of the bridge.

According to Rise Rasch, the Traverse City transportation service manager for the Michigan Department of Transportation, this is part of a larger $450,000 project devoted to traffic signal upgrades in the Traverse City authority's six-county coverage area.

The project contractor, Windemuller Electric, completed work on the south side but was thrown off schedule on Nov. 30 when a dump truck exceeding legal height requirements tore down the north side light.

A temporary light has been put in place.

"The temporary situation is acceptable until the contractor is able to get back in," Rasch said.

Rasch explained that the accident changed the project's scope requiring

The driver of a Great Lakes Excavating 1986 dump truck was cited by the City of Charlevoix Police Department for violating the city's height requirements after he took out this traffic light on the north side of the bridge Nov. 30. A temporary light has since been put in its place but the accident delayed upgrades to the bridge traffic lights being undertaken by the Michigan Department of Transportation.

new materials to be ordered and a new design developed.

She said aside from the wait on materials, Charlevoix will also have to be patient while the traffic light project is worked back into the construction schedule.

"This is not the typical time of year to do something more elaborate," she said. The new project includes resetting pole foundations, Rasch said weather and materials will play a role in the project timeline. And at this time a concrete construction schedule has not been established.

Development rights ordinance considered

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The Charlevoix County Planning Commission was recently asked to review a proposed ordinance which would, among other things, help Charlevoix County maintain its "historic, rural character."

If the Charlevoix County Farmland and Open Space Preservation Ordinance is adopted, said county planner, Larry Sullivan, some of the benefits would be a reduction of road congestion in certain areas, maintenance of quality hunting, fishing and other outdoor recreational activities, incentives for young farmers and a decrease in urban sprawl.

Sullivan emphasized that this would be a voluntary program.

"We're only attempting to make this program available should they (eligible landowners) care to utilize it," he said. "This is not something that's going to be forced on anyone."

He added, "We're probably about 15 percent of the way to getting the program established. We're waiting to hear back from the (county) prosecutor (John Jarema) and then we'll change anything they deem appropriate."

Sullivan said, following the prosecutor's legal opinion on the draft of the proposed ordinance, the planning commission will likely schedule a public hearing, take comments from citizens and send the findings to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

According to Sullivan, the gist of the ordinance is that qualified landowners will have the opportunity to sell the development rights to their farmland or open space.

In exchange for a percentage of what the land is worth, the landowner contractually agrees not to use the land for other purposes such as commercial or residential development.

If passed, Sullivan said, "We would see it as providing the farming community with a vehicle or tool to ensure farming continues in Charlevoix County well into the future."

He added, "Farmers don't generally have 401k or retirement plans. Their retirement plan is their land. Should a person have to sell all their property to enjoy the fruits of their labor a little bit? With this they could maybe have some enjoyment in their later years."

Charlevoix County's draft of the proposed ordinance is similar to some of the open space preservation ordinances adopted in neighboring counties.

"Ours is similar to Antrim's. We have made some changes however," he said. "Antrim (County) made theirs available to go to referendum and we did not do that."

Sullivan said, "We took basically a model ordinance developed under the auspices of and in conjunction with a few groups like the Michigan Farm Bureau and fine-tuned it to fit Charlevoix County — I'm not a big believer in reinventing the wheel."

The Charlevoix County Land Preservation Board will be created as part of this draft ordinance with the mission of developing a plan with a numerical scoring system of how to select eligible farmland, among other things.

Sullivan said Charlevoix's land preservation board will be different in that the county commissioner's seated on the board will be able to vote and there is the possibility that someone outside the county could be on the board since some people with a substantial interest in Charlevoix may not live within the county limits.

Under certain circumstances landowners could purchase the development rights on their property back from Charlevoix County, but the price would be assessed as a development, not farmland.

Another option for landowners who participate in this program and later decide they would like to develop the property is to exchange the restricted piece of property for another, unrestricted, piece of land of similar value.

Sullivan said, because there are so many individuals working at the state and local level who deal with land surveying and the like, he does not see much, if any, cost for developing the land preservation board and the work they do.

And, he said there are enough grants and funds from the state and federal government for the use of protecting farmland and open spaces that Charlevoix County most likely won't be saddled with the cost of purchasing the development rights.

The draft of the proposed ordinance states, "Charlevoix County is experiencing substantial residential development and due to the presence of increasingly urbanized areas, attractive landscapes and excellent public schools, Charlevoix County will continue to be an attractive place for residential and other development in the future."

As a result, the ordinance states county representatives wish to see, "Long-term protection of farmland and open space under the pressure of increasing development."

Filing deadline Feb. 7 for school board election

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Two seats are up for grabs during this year's school board elections and those wishing to run have until 4 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 7 to file.

The seats of school board president, Dennis Halverson and school board member Ardeth Wieland will both expire June 30. The election is May 2. Halverson said he plans to run, while Wieland said she does not.

"I've always enjoyed the educational environment," Halverson said. "This gave me the opportunity to give something back to the community. And I don't think there's any more important effort than trying to ensure a productive and valuable educational experience for our kids here in Charlevoix."

Halverson, who has served on the board for approximately six years, said he has enjoyed watching Charlevoix Public School graduates go on to become productive members of the community.

"I think you can look back and hopefully say that their educational experience in Charlevoix at least formed the foundation for that to happen," he said.

Halverson said one of the reasons he will run again is because there are still things he wishes to accomplish.

"I'd like to be able to work through this budget crisis we're experiencing and still be able to retain our current programs and the level of education we've been able to establish and expect here," he said.

Halverson said anyone considering campaigning for a position on the school board should have dedication and the ability to compromise.

And, he said, "Take the time to be able to learn the issues and the implications for the different decisions the board may make. That hugely speaks to the future budgets we're going to have to work with."

"I don't believe the cutting to maintain the district solvency is over. So as a result of that, unless something changes, I believe some tough decisions are coming to the board in the near future which I think will have huge implications in this community," he added.

Halverson said Wieland will be missed as a board member.

"She brought a wealth of historic knowledge which was beneficial in many of the board's deliberations," he said. "She brought some background and experience as to why things are the way they are today and that was extremely valuable to the board on many occasions."

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock, said serving on the school board is a great way of serving the community.

"If they (citizens) are concerned about the state of public education in Charlevoix, this is a way to serve the community," he said. "Some people join service organizations to serve the community and some people run for public office."

According to the Michigan Secretary of State office, local school board candidates seeking office at the May 2 election must file an affidavit of identity and a nominating petition at the Charlevoix County Clerk's office. Or, payment of a $100 non-refundable fee may be filed in lieu of a petition at the Charlevoix County Clerk's office.

Wieland, who sat on the board for nearly 32 years, said she won't run again due to health concerns, but she is anxious that people are aware the school board seats are up for election.

"We need some new faces there who are interested in educational changes and will spend some time helping our school systems maintain the quality that has been there for many years," she said. "The education that our children receive determines not only their future, but the future of everyone else in our community and our country."

Wieland said she will miss working with such dedicated people over the years.

"There was a close working relationship that made us a school family," she said. "The fact that is that there was a close working relationship among the teachers, support staff and administration. That's what has made our school system a leader."

Tips for keeping babies healthy and safe

It's time for keeping New Year's resolutions, and a public health nurse from the local health department hopes new moms and dads will consider a resolution or two to keep their babies healthy and safe during 2006.

"We're encouraging parents, and parents-to-be, to practice these 'Healthy Dozen' tips from the U.S. Surgeon General," said Suzette Daly, family health supervisor for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the health department that serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Oshtemo counties.

Eat healthy, it's good for you and your baby. Every woman of child-bearing age should consume at least 400 micrograms of folic acid each day. Folic acid can prevent neural tube defects and congenital malformations.

Don't drink alcohol when you are pregnant or might become pregnant. Alcohol can affect an unborn baby even before a woman knows that she is pregnant, and the problems caused by prenatal alcohol exposure are lifelong and preventable.

Get prenatal care early. Immediate and consistent prenatal care can prevent pre-term delivery and improve pregnancy and childbirth.

Don't smoke and don't allow anyone else to smoke around your baby. Smoking during pregnancy can lead to a low birth weight baby and can reduce your baby's lung function.

Breast feed your baby. Breast feeding for at least the first six months of life has significant health benefits. Mother's milk has just the right amount of fat, sugar, water and protein that is needed for a baby's growth and development and it has antibodies to help protect infants from bacteria and viruses and to fight infections.

Place your baby "back to sleep." A baby should sleep on a firm mattress, on his/her back with no fluffy pillows or stuffed animals. Following these simple steps can lower the risk of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS).

Always use a car safety seat. Be sure your baby rides in an age/weight appropriate child safety seat, correctly installed, on every trip.

Never leave your baby unattended. To prevent unintentional injuries, never leave baby alone on a changing table, bed or in a bath, pool, high chair or stroller.

Safety-proof your house. To prevent accidental poisoning, move all medication and cleaning products to high shelves. To prevent burns, set your hot water heater to 120 degrees and never leave cups of hot water or handles to pots on the stove where baby might reach for it. To prevent choking, be sure that toys do not have small parts and never allow infants to play with balloons or plastic bags.

Never, ever shake your baby. Shaking a baby, even a little, may lead to severe brain damage and death.

Fully immunize your baby. Immunizations have prevented death and disease for millions of children throughout the United States and the world.

Learn infant first aid and CPR. For more information about how you can keep your child healthy, contact Daly at (231) 547-6523 or visit www.nwhealth.org.

CHS Winterfest events to begin Jan. 30

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Even the recent warm spells aren't enough to melt the spirit of the 2006 Charlevoix High School Winterfest court as they prepare for the annual cool weather cotillion.

According to Charlevoix High School activity/student coordinator, Gail Cherry, Winterfest, which will begin the week of Jan. 30, has long been a way of keeping the kids occupied during the long winter months as well as giving them a break after a period of tough testing.

"It's a good alternative activity in the middle of winter," Cherry said. "It's right after exams, which is a good time for the students to have some fun."

She added, "Sometimes they do snow sculptures. They'll do dress up days and the theme for this year is cities of the U.S."

The king and queen of Winterfest will be crowned during half-time at the basketball game on Friday, Feb. 3 at Charlevoix High School.

"And, there'll be a Winterfest dance on Feb. 4 at the elementary school," Cherry said.

The dance lasts from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m.

During the week of Winterfest the kids will engage in some wacky events such as Monday hat day, Tuesday college sweatshirt day, Wednesday white T-shirt day, Thursday tie day and Friday the kids will show their Rayder spirit with maroon and white day.

This year's Winterfest court consists of Chantelle Dionne, Michael DiMartino, Jillian Wilhelm, Shannon Gillespie, Madison Ramsey, Jeff Golovich, Stevie Murray, Chuck Mason, Caitlin Cole and Josh Saur.

Dionne is the daughter of Kelly and Jerry Bingham and Steve Dionne. Over the school years, Dionne has enjoyed participating in team sports such as volleyball and track. Dionne works at Catch-a-Tan. After graduation, she plans on attending Chicago State University and majoring in business.

Michael DiMartino, son of Fred and Donna DiMartino, is a four-year veteran of Rayder soccer and the Charlevoix Indoor Soccer league as well as three years playing basketball and track. DiMartino, who co-founded the 2006 Charlevoix High School Chess Club is a member of the Senior Gentlemen's Club. He plans to attend Michigan State University.

Jillian Wilhelm, daughter of Thomas and Christine Wilhelm, is a member of the National Honor Society, a veteran of jazz, marching and concert bands, and an active member of the Harvest Barn Word of Life Church.

Upon graduation, Wilhelm plans to study nursing and business administration at North Central Michigan College.

Business turnover prompts community response

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Business factors

An exodus of retail ventures located along the three Bridge Street blocks stretching from the bridge to Antrim Street have some searching for answers to Charlevoix's retail woes.

"It doesn't look good," said Richard Georgi, a Charlevoix resident who owns several buildings in downtown Charlevoix and is one-third owner of Vacation Properties Network.

In 2005 and into this early part of 2006 numerous new and established businesses have left Charlevoix.

Established names that are gone, or on their way out, include Bahnhof Sport, Cotton Harbor Wear, Trademark, Interior Motives, New World Cafe and The Appletree.

Newer businesses that shut down shop here include Winslow Jones Portraiture, Momentum which is consolidating with The Troll, Bridge Street Clothing Outlet which may reopen in the spring, and Brittany's of Charlevoix.

As Brittany's of Charlevoix owners Terry and Jim Gerou packed up their inventory early this month, which included home decor and gift items, the two said they are disappointed.

"We didn't want to come in, make money, and leave. We can't make it. There wasn't enough people," Terry Gerou said. "We scouted the area for three years and wanted to come into this community and stay open year-round."

After only eight months in business in Charlevoix the Gerous called it quits in spite of having four months remaining on their lease at a building located at the north corner of Park Avenue and Bridge Street.

Jim Gerou and his wife Terry spent the early part of January packing up inventory from their store Brittany's of Charlevoix. This is one of many businesses that closed its doors in 2005 and the early part of 2006 in downtown Charlevoix.

They said it cost more to stay open than if they were to close and pay the rent.

"I can't steal from Peter to pay Paul. It doesn't work in business," Jim Gerou said. "But you aren't producing enough traffic to pay that kind of rent."

The couple own and operate two other stores in the Upper Peninsula, where they live, that are open seasonally, from May to October. They said those two stores produce more sales annually than Brittany's recorded in its eight-month stint here.

"You need people in a small town like this to back up their local businesses. We all need each other to survive, one hand feeds the other," Terry Gerou said. "People come through and ask you to support this or that, but they don't support the local businesses."

Aside from the Gerous' claims that local support just isn't here for retailers, they also said rent was a factor in their decision.

"Rent is atrocious in this town," she said.

Jim Gerou said with employee and building costs the two had to make $12,000 a month just to break even. And they were only bringing in about a quarter of that.

This was a one time experience for the Gerous who said things would need to change dramatically in Charlevoix for them to open another business here.

Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce president Jacqueline

Merta, said, she too has heard through the years that part of Charlevoix's retail turnover equation is high rent.

While the easy target in the rent complaint is the landlords, Georgi, a landlord, said it's not that simple.

"I don't think landlords are more greedy than anyone else. We are looking for a return on our capitol," Georgi said.

Georgi agrees that rents pay a role in turnover downtown but said pressures like high taxes make rent breaks impossible.

"You have to apply a reasonable rent calculation to a property or you're just fooling yourself," he said. "The bottom line is the tenant gets clobbered with this huge tax."

Aside from high rents, Georgi said revenue is constrained by the short buying season controlled by tourism. Typical busy months are from late June to early September with an extra kick coming in October during the Apple Festival.

"There's only so much retail business in town. It's difficult for quality tenants to make money," he said. "Volume isn't so fantastic."

Solutions

Merta said it is also up to business owners just starting out to try and weather the storm. She said some businesses pack up and leave too soon.

"You have to give a business three to five years to work," she said.

Area experts propose solutions to business challenges

BUSINESS

Merta and chairman of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority Hugh Mason said they feel this winter is typical in terms of retail turnover.

Projects the chamber has undertaken in conjunction with the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau to increase off-season shopping include the addition of a snowmobile route into East Park, promotion of Mt. McSaubia as a family recreation destination, lighting of cross country trails at Mt. McSaubia, the June Taste of Charlevoix event and pursuing a local Women's Winter Tour cross country skiing and snow shoeing event.

She said Charlevoix could see an economic boost from new legislation requiring Michigan schools to begin after Labor Day, the new library project and the marina and East Park renovation.

Georgi said it would be beneficial to focus on attracting tenants.

"We are doing nothing to seek out the right tenants," he said. "We can't develop a town with a better quality of life if we can't look outside the box and imagine ourselves as a second homeowner or a tourist and ask, what could cause us to come to Charlevoix."

According to Merta, residents and visitors will soon welcome a new bakery in the former New World Cafe building. Service requests that aren't currently available in downtown Charlevoix which the chamber frequently fields include a bike rental and repair shop as well as jewelry, quilting, music and children's clothing stores.

An opportunity for Charlevoix that Georgi said Petoskey has taken advantage of is hiring a recruiter.

"I'm concerned that our retail appeal has diminished. Someone at the chamber, DDA or even the city level should be assigned to look at this whole thing," Georgi said. "What is missing in Charlevoix is ambience and a concerted effort to find good tenants. As a landlord I recognize that I want to fill the space but I not only want to fill the space, I want to fill them with interesting tenants."

Becky Goodman, is the downtown director for the City of Petoskey, employed by the Petoskey Chamber of Commerce through a contract with the Petoskey Downtown Management Board.

Goodman likened this board to the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority.

She said the bulk of her job is recruiting tenants for vacant retail sites in Petoskey. She said the package she uses in this process doesn't include economic incentives like tax abatements but does include demographic information about Petoskey as well as guides, events and a personal letter expressing the city's interest in the business locating a site in Petoskey.

"My goal is to maintain a vital downtown and to strengthen Petoskey's economic core," Goodman said.

In recent meetings Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority member John Yarech has supported a position like Goodman's being started in Charlevoix.

Merta said she is hoping a blueprint study that the Charlevoix

Downtown Development Authority may pursue will help shed further light on the problem.

The state's Blueprint Program is an off-shoot of the popular Cool Cities initiative.

"It's more of a marketing program that looks at a mix of factors including business improvement, the longevity of businesses and bringing businesses in," city planner Gerry Harsch said.

Under the Blueprint Program, the consulting firm HycuPalma does a week-long market study of the downtown, including visits from the state preservation group and the housing authority. From the results of the study, goals are established and an action plan is developed to meet those goals. About 11 of these programs are done throughout the year in Michigan.

Funding for the Blueprint Program depends on the community's population but is generally a match with the development corporation footing the bill for half and the community paying the other half.

Charlevoix city manager Mike Wiesner told the authority that the program cost is about $30,000 and if an application the city plans to submit in March of 2006 is denied, funds will have to come from elsewhere but the model of the program should still be pursued.

The Blueprint Program is steered by The Michigan Economic Development Corporation which has its headquarters in Lansing.

Eye Health of Charlevoix relocates

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

Doctors Bob and Kim Molter who own and operate Eye Health of Charlevoix have moved their Charlevoix office to better serve customers.

"We have a growing practice," optometrist, Kim Molter, said.

Her husband, Bob Molter, who is also an optometrist, added, "We wish to thank all of our patients for supporting our office and making this expansion necessary. Kim and I are very happy to be part of our hometown business landscape, and look forward to serving the community for many years to come."

The eye care specialists shifted locations from their former office suite at 103 West Hurlbut to 109 West Hurlbut, the former Kusina's Farm Bureau Insurance Agency office.

Farm Bureau moved next-door to 107 West Hurlbut.

Moving Eye Health of Charlevoix necessitated a renovation at the new office headed up by contractors with Builders North. The renovations started in early December and were complete by Dec. 19.

The Molters' Charlevoix practice now has double the space they had before.

Kim said the extra space has provided more room for contact lens training.

The local office will continue to provide services that include comprehensive, diabetic and medical exams as well as foreign body and red eye treatments and contact and bifocal lens services.

They carry a complete line of eyeglass frames including designer brands like Calvin Klein and Fendi.

The couple moved to Charlevoix in 1996 and opened Eye Health of Kalkaska where they worked for three years before opening their Charlevoix office in 1999.

The Kalkaska office, which is primarily Bob's responsibility, is their largest followed by Charlevoix and Beaver Island. The island location is based out of the Beaver Island Rural Health Center. Bob, a licensed pilot, flies the team over quarterly to meet the eye care needs of their island clients.

The local office includes three employees, with Kim Molter at the helm and support staff members Andrea Hoose, a patient technician and optician, and office manager Julie Waterman. Additional employees may be brought on board this summer.

The office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday and by appointment.

For more information, or to schedule an appointment call Eye Health of Charlevoix at (231) 547-7800.

Synergy Investment Group expands banking services

Dan Koffman

Dan Koffman, and Synergy Investment Group, have announced the addition of a full range of FDIC insured banking and home loan services the company offers.

In a move designed to better serve the total financial needs of clients, Koffman and Synergy Investment Group, recently announced that he is now certified to offer a full range of high-value FDIC insured banking services, in addition to guaranteed Great-Rate Mortgages.

"As part of the process we undertake to evaluate our client's financial needs and provide solutions that will help them to attain their most important goals, we were constantly frustrated by the general lack of value offered by most banks, and doubly frustrated because we were unable to assist our clients with more intelligent banking solutions," said Koffman. "It was for these reasons that we decided to ally ourselves with EverBank."

Koffman, whose office is located at 6777 U.S. 31 South Suite C, in Charlevoix, has been serving residents and the business community of northern Michigan for over 10 years. EverBank is a branchless banking opportunity.

"For many of our clients, their home is one of the biggest financial commitments they'll ever make," Koffman said. "As with investments in financial markets, it's critical that our clients have a trusted professional, with their long-term financial interests in mind, to come to when ready to buy or refinance a home. Through EverBank, we're now able to provide this service to our clients."

The innovative banking products now being offered by Koffman through EverBank include: FreeNet checking account, Yield Pledge money market account, Yield Pledge certificates of deposit, FDIC insured world currency accounts, 24-hour customer service and home loans.

"For the first time, we're able to offer our clients a true one-stop shop for all of their financial needs — including high-yielding, FDIC insured bank accounts, and home loans," Koffman said. "This is an exciting opportunity for us to deepen our dedication to our clients by addressing important elements of their financial lives, often overlooked by most advisors."

EverBank Financial Corp is a $3.0 billion unitary thrift holding company headquartered in Jacksonville, Fla. Through its banking and mortgage companies, EverBank services approximately $36 billion in loans, originates $14 billion of annual mortgage production, and serves 400,000 customers nationwide.

Health department offers lead poisoning test

Lead poisoning is often thought to be a problem of the past, but it is still the leading environmental health risk to children.

Lead poisoning is usually caused by months or years of exposure to small amounts of lead in the home, work or daycare environment. It can also happen very quickly with exposure to high concentrations. The most common source of lead exposure for children is lead-based paint/dust and soil that are contaminated by it, especially in older homes and buildings.

Many homes in northern Michigan, built before 1978, contain lead-based paint. The older the home, the more likely that windows, cupboards, doors, porches and outdoor surfaces contain lead-based paints. Lead dust can come from repairing areas with lead paint, opening and closing windows and through normal wear and tear of painted areas. Lead dust settles to the floor, gets on children's hands and toys, and enters their bodies when they put their hands or toys into their mouths.

Lead poisoning does not always produce symptoms, but it can be easily detected by a simple finger-stick blood test, available through the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the health department that serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties.

Has your child ever lived in a home where the plumbing had lead pipes or copper pipes with lead solder joints?

Has your child ever lived in a home where the plumbing had lead pipes or copper pipes with lead solder joints?

Has your child ever lived in a home where the plumbing had lead pipes or copper pipes with lead solder joints?

Agency, recommends parents review the following questions when deciding if their child should be tested for blood lead testing:

Has your child ever lived in or regularly visited a house built before 1950 with peeling or chipping paint? This may include daycare, preschool, baby-sitter or relatives.

Has your child ever lived in or regularly visited a house built before 1978 with renovation or remodeling within the past six months?

Has your child ever had a brother or sister, house mate, or playmate with lead poisoning?

Has your child ever lived near a busy street or highway?

Has your child ever eaten or drank from painted ceramic or imported dishes/glasses?

Has your child ever used any home remedies that may have contained lead?

Has your child ever lived in a home where the plumbing had lead pipes or copper pipes with lead solder joints?

Parents who answer "yes" or "don't know" to any of these questions should schedule an appointment with their child's health care provider or call the health department to schedule a blood lead test for their child. Lead-poisoned children may seem healthy or may have learning and behavior problems, tiredness, headaches, hearing problems, weight loss, hyperactivity and/or irritability.

Treatment for lead poisoning includes removing the source of lead exposure and eating a balanced diet, because adequate nutrition helps prevent absorption of lead. Often this treatment approach is enough to lower lead levels in the body. If blood lead levels are extremely high, medication that removes lead from the body can be prescribed.

For information about blood lead testing, call the local health department office at (231) 547-6523.

Patricia Fralick, director of family health services for Northwest Michigan Community Health

Agency, recommends parents review the following questions when deciding if their child should be tested for blood lead testing:

"The man who fails to advertise just because conditions are a little uncertain is on par with the farmer who refuses to feed his cows because the price of butter has gone down."

County costs up from 2004

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The end of the year budget-to-expense summary for Charlevoix County shows how the county portion of your tax money was spent.

As of Dec. 31, 2005, the county spent $10,975,178.33 of the $11,080,927 budgeted for the year. Spending is up $909,769.13 from 2004.

According to Charlevoix County Chief Deputy Clerk, Cherie Browe, expenses such as capital outlay which increased from $115,853.06 in 2004 to $307,910.12 in 2005 is due to a need for costly items such as cabinets and computer systems.

"If an item costs more than $500 it has to be put under capital outlay," Browe said. "If it's under $500, then it is considered an ordinary operating expense."

Browe said the smaller ticket items would still go through the audit committee for authorization of payment, but wouldn't have to be built into the budget as a capital expense.

Browe said, not including the commissioners' $200 per month pay, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners' salaries for 2005 are as follows: fourth district commissioner and chairman of the board, Vic Patrick, $8,825; sixth district commissioner, Shirley Roloff, $8,725; fifth-district commissioner Dennis Jason $950; third district commissioner, Ronald Reinhardt, $5,300; second district commissioner, W. Randolph Frykberg, $6,300 and first district commissioner, Josh Barnes, $2,125.

Though there were increases in spending from 2004 to 2005, all increases are within the budgeted amounts.

Some of the jumps in spending were in capital outlay, board of commissioners, veterans affairs and emergency services.

Board of commissioners expenditures increased from $156,257.78 in 2004 to $331,323.64. According to County Clerk, Jane Brannon the increase was due to attorney fees associated with lawsuits with which the county was entangled.

Salaries for appointed and elected officials in Charlevoix County for 2005 are as follows: Circuit Court Judge Richard M. Pajtas, $45,724; District Court Judge Richard May, $19,661; Probate Court Judge Frederick Mulhauser, $139,919; Friend of the Court George Ebenhoeh, $52,509; Equalization Director Tom Wolf 48,932; Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema $63,000; Register of Deeds Charlene M. Novotny, $43,013; County Treasurer Marilyn Cousineau $42,697; Maintenance 37,314; Sheriff George T. Lasater, $53,423; Drain Commissioner Marc

City electric bills to reflect a 5 percent rate increase

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

With energy users across the state singing the natural gas bill blues, those in the City of Charlevoix will have an additional verse to vocalize when electric bills arrive this month.

City of Charlevoix electric customers will see a 5 percent increase on their February bill, due in part to an accounting mix up.

In a memo from city treasurer Rick Brandi to city manager Mike Wiesner, Brandi explains that the power cost adjustment the city has applied to its electric user billing since October of 2005 was applied to the dollars billed, rather than kilowatt hours used, as was intended by the formula.

This means there is money due and part of that will be made up with an increase this month.

"The power cost adjustment is designed to recover charges for purchasing power when it exceeds the base amount established in the rates and rebate customers if the cost of power supply is below the base amount," said Mark Beauchamp, the city's consultant with the firm Utility Financial Solutions.

Brandi said the average user is billed for 500 kilowatt hours a month which equates to a hike of $1.90 a month beginning in February.

However, larger commercial facilities, like the schools, will take a big hit with increases between 9 and 10.6 percent.

This new adjustment calculation will remain the same this month and in March but will be recalculated for April through September of 2006 based on the city's costs from October through March of 2006.

Bills reflecting these changes should be in the hands of city electric customers soon. The billing cycle began Feb. 1.

Aside from the misapplication of the power cost adjustment, other factors also play a role in the rate changes.

Brandi explained that the city owns portions of two coal fired electric plants in Lansing and Traverse City as well as a natural gas fueled plant in Kalkaska. Fuel costs related to producing power at the Kalkaska facility, which only runs during high demand periods, increased with natural gas prices.

Rate hikes on the horizon for city electric customers

Rick Brandi

At the same time, the Lansing plant had disruptions in coal delivery forcing the city to buy power from another source on the open market for more money.

"Prices are up for the power that we are buying but prices are up for everyone buying," city engineer, Don Swem, said.

The federal government through the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has also played a role. The commission has allowed transmission companies to temporarily increase charges to recover potential costs of restructuring the electric market. These charges, called Seams Elimination Charge Adjustments are expected to be discontinued this year.

City electric customers can expect further changes in the future as Charlevoix contemplates a major restructuring.

In the fall of 2005 the City of Charlevoix removed itself from the Michigan Public Power Association, a power pool, which is in the process of reorganizing.

Swem explained that restructuring of the electric industry under the Midwest Independent System Operator model has changed how Charlevoix buys and transports power and the power pool, which was set up in 1991, doesn't fit those changes.

Another factor in Michigan is the lack of new energy sources. And Swem said no new plants are being planned.

The city agreed to pull out of the pool in five years, or by 2011, if a new agreement can not be reached.

Swem said the city is currently in negotiations with all the members of the pool to come to a new agreement. He added that this may result in a revamped pool.

However, the city also has another fryer on the burner. The city has joined a committee of 22 cities looking at options for the future. Swem said this could include building a new plant or starting a new power pool.

County budget summary reflects allocation of funds

COUNTY

Seelye, $1; Planning Director Larry Sullivan $45,888; GIS Coordinator Chris Blough $44,158; Veteran's Affairs Director Bob Drebenstedt, $22,640; county clerk Jane Brannon $47,495; and fiscal officer Jane Brannon $10,400.

Veterans affairs spending was up from $33,800 in 2004 to $41,248.95 in 2005 due to an increase in the number of burials it had to pay for.

"Every county across America has to spend money on deceased vets," Drebenstedt said. "We're in a real big bell curve where we've got 2000 World War II vets dying daily in America."

Drebenstedt said the county is responsible for $300 for each deceased veteran.

"Ten people is $3,000 and this is vacation land or retirement land and we have a whole lot of World War II vets who were hometown boys or who moved in here," he said.

Another reason for increase expenditures is the increase in the number of people applying for veterans affairs hospital care.

"The baby boomers are coming up on retirement and they in turn are asking for more health care or losing their health care from their job and come in wanting to go to the veterans affairs hospital and this is an expense on us since we assist vets in traveling to the Ann Arbor or Saginaw hospitals," he said. "The trend that will keep going is this wave of baby boomer retirees."

Drebenstedt said deaths and retirement both are into his 2005 budget and they will again in 2006.

Some decreases in spending included the crime victims fund which was reduced from $1,192.44 in 2004, elections were down to $14,853.11 in 2005 from $46,519.74 in 2004. Postage was down to $44,609.08 in 2005 from $63,174.59 in 2004. Secondary road patrol was down to $36,999.13 in 2005 from $42,554.66 2004. And the mapping project is down to $2,938.28 in 2005 from $10,267 in 2004.

Jack Messer, director of the office of emergency management, said emergency services spending, money used for disaster preparedness, was up from $63,415.33 in 2004 to $286,832.24 in 2005 due to nearly $200,000 in grants from the federal government.

But, Messer said, that number will drop significantly in 2006.

"Homeland security emphasis this year is mainly on urban areas (populations of 60,000 and up)," he said.

The money designated for gas masks, gown or chemical mop suits, interoperable radios and costs for training and testing the readiness of personnel will be merely a few thousand dollars.

State of the State addresses Charlevoix?

Julie Witthoef
'Just a thought'

It was nice to escape budget crunch talk but discussion was anything but cheery at the Jan. 27 legislative luncheon at the Michigan Press Association 2006 Winter Convention in Grand Rapids.

Michigan Governor Jennifer Granholm who has spent two years forecasting service cuts as the state tries to balance its budget was the featured speaker.

I attended the convention and listened as Gov. Granholm offered highlights from her Jan. 25 State of the State address, "Working Our Plan, Securing Our Future." This was her last State of the State before her term ends.

Granholm, who took office in January 2003 riding on promises of privacy in health care, has a much tougher nut to crack now, the ever eroding confidence Michiganders have in the economy.

A key factor in her discussion was providing training for Michigan's unemployed, educating children and keeping those educated students in the state.

This includes a proposal for $2 billion in new spending on emerging economic sectors including alternative energy, life sciences like pharmaceuticals, advanced manufacturing like research and development and homeland security and defense support.

Granholm voiced support for the Michigan State Board of Education which approved the Michigan Merit Curriculum, increasing core curriculum requirements for students in Michigan schools in the areas of science, math, social science and foreign language.

"We are in a global economy. We have to send a message that we get it. A foreign language requirement is a necessity in a global economy," she said.

This mandate is scheduled to go before the Michigan legislature for final approval before March 1.

In an effort to increase the pursuit of higher education by high school graduates Granholm also endorsed the increase of the Merit Scholarship from $2,500 to $4,000.

In the past this scholarship has been awarded to students who score well on the Michigan Education Assessment Program (MEAP), standardized test.

Granholm said under the new model every student will be awarded a scholarship regardless of MEAP scores in an attempt to break down the cost barrier to higher education.

She said efforts the state makes to bring employment opportunities to Michigan are futile without a skilled work force.

I support the governor's efforts to improve the state's economy but question the blanket curriculum she advocated.

In Charlevoix, many students go into the building trades or attend art schools out of high school. By requiring more of a focus in science and math, Charlevoix schools may have to cut building trade or fine arts classes.

Her efforts to keep students in the state should also be a local concern. Many students who graduate from Charlevoix High School go on to college and make their homes in cities and states outside of Charlevoix.

As Charlevoix begins its journey into the state's Blueprint Program to try and solve the local economic problems, I hope to see recommendations as to how we can grow our local economy to accommodate our own children.

While Granholm is a heavy hitting speaker, I hope her plans for growing Michigan's economy don't take the same, "What's good for one is good for all," approach as the state's curriculum plan.

Charlevoix is a unique community with unique needs. We thrive on tourism, let's enhance it further, promoting off-season offerings. Or maybe the state could make some changes so we could see a greater return on fuel taxes. In my opinion, the current formula does not adequately account for tourist traffic.

At the Jan. 27 legislative luncheon at the Michigan Press Association 2006 Winter Convention in Grand Rapids Michigan Governor Jennifer Granholm highlighted key objectives from her Jan. 25 State of the State address.

ism, let's enhance it further, promoting off-season offerings. Or maybe the state could make some changes so we could see a greater return on fuel taxes. In my opinion, the current formula does not adequately account for tourist traffic.

While manufacturing in northern Michigan is challenged by hefty shipping costs, research and development may flourish here.

"We will continue to invest in the 21st century economy by going anywhere and doing anything to create jobs," Granholm said.

I hope this anywhere and anything includes northern Michigan. While southern Michigan was once the epicenter of the automotive industry, that legacy is fading and a new stronghold needs to be discovered.

Disease draws man to trees for a cure

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

The proliferation of new diseases and disorders with catchy acronyms and available medications has troubled me for some time. But now I have found a new disorder that I approve of heartily.

Treatment and even a cure are readily available and cost nothing. The new disorder is NDD or Nature Deficit Disorder. I am not making this up. Psychologists are beginning to believe that our societal loss of direct contact with nature produces harmful symptoms. Proper exposure to the natural world not only alleviates or eliminates NDD, there is growing evidence that the same exposure may reduce problems with ADD or Attention Deficit Disorder. Two disorders cured or alleviated with no medication at all.

Some years ago, when I was teaching ecology to college students in Iowa we would visit an area of native prairie, essentially unaltered since the glaciers left about 12,000 years ago. About 200 acres of this prairie harbored more than 250 different kinds of plants, somewhere in the neighborhood of 80 different kinds of spiders, and literally thousands of different insects. By late summer the vegetation was tall enough to pretty well hide a person sitting on the ground.

My first request of students when we arrived at the prairie was to tell them to separate themselves by 100 feet or so, sit down on the ground and stay there, watching the plants and creatures around them for 10 minutes. For most of them, this intimate contact with a small part of the natural world was a unique experience. They knew a great deal about the biological world, but they knew it had been in electronic and literary contact with nature. Getting close to nature was usually not a part of their education. I did not realize at the time that they were mostly suffering from NDD, and that the experience would aid their mental health.

The entire history of human beings over the past few millions of years has been of the enormous complexity and variety of nature, experienced daily. There is some suggestion from psychologists that our brain and thinking processes develop best with the direct experience of nature as a background. It's not necessary to abandon modern life or to visit exotic locales. The richness, natural complexity and variety exists in any wood lot and even in an abandoned vacant lot.

It seems that both children and adults grow and function best when unstructured contact with the natural world is a part of daily routine. Building tree forts, climbing trees, playing in the dirt or mud, fishing, hunting and solitary nature walks can be seen as both physically and mentally healthful.

Total detachment from real nature in favor of electronic contact can be viewed as a diagnosable disorder that needs treatment. Avoid NDD, save your children from its bad effects. Go sit in the woods and look around. We will be healthier and happier if we do.

Letters to the editor

'Thank you' supporters
Editor:

I would like to express my sincere thanks and gratitude for the outpouring of support that I received during the interview process for the City of Charlevoix Chief of Police position, and subsequently when I received this prestigious appointment.

To have the support of the community, council and the department illustrated to me the importance and impact that I made in "community policing" during the last 20 years of service with the department.

This is truly a great community in which we live, and I will strive to do my best to continue to keep Charlevoix safe and make you proud of your commitment to my appointment.

Business in Charlevoix
Editor:

This past week's edition of the Courier featured Gayle Gennett's article on business in Charlevoix and Julie Witthoef's piece on business turnovers in Charlevoix.

This topic seems to surface every couple of years. I dare say that in reality this has always been a topic of conversation in this town since we have always been a resort community. In Gayle's article she muses about whether we are becoming a resort community, while the truth has been that we have always been such. This, in part, is the problem with both articles.

Let's go back a couple of years in our collective memory. Remember the topic of a convention center for the downtown area? This convention center was to be the salvation to the downtown. It would bring group's into the community who might never have considered Charlevoix as a destination in the winter. Remember the "consultants" who were retained, at no small expense, and the new buzz words which entered our lexicon: words like "the shoulder season."

Now, the truth of the matter is that with Richard and Linda Mueller putting their money where their mouth was, we have a wonderful piece of history that is serving our needs, or could serve our needs better, as this long needed convention center. What has happened to the notion of the convention center and using the Castle for this purpose?

Let's now fast forward in time to the Wal-Mart controversy. We had to keep Wal-Mart out of town since it would ruin our downtown. We kept Wal-Mart out and look what we have — not very much. We kept Wal-Mart out and in turn we kept people out of town. Or perhaps better said, those same people now drive through town headed to Petoskey's Wal-Mart.

Let me borrow from a military analogy. While the military needs "boots on the ground," we need

"feet on the street." Any business person knows that you need foot traffic in order to generate potential sales. In last week's article Terry Gerou, operator of Brittany's of Charlevoix, was critical of the locals for not supporting the local business. That misses the point. Since we are a resort community you cannot expect the locals to keep the downtown alive. As a local I don't need most of the shops downtown. They are, with some exceptions, not part of my daily consciousness. Yes, I haunt the coffee shops, the bookstore, Subway, and have a dinner downtown, but as to the rest I rarely have occasion to visit, much less utilize.

This now brings us to Julie's article and some of the comments raised by Mr. Richard Georgi.

Here is the problem with Mr. Georgi's logic. When commercial real estate is over priced, yet purchased by landlords at these inflated prices, two things happen. A new tax basis is established and the landlord now has to charge more in rent to recapture and make a profit on his real estate investment. It appears that most, if not all landlords in downtown Charlevoix operate under a triple net basis, and thus pass the taxes back to the tenant. While it is wonderful that a landlord, such as Mr. Georgi, is fortunate enough to be able to purchase the property at their over inflated price, it is not so wonderful for their prospective tenants. Mr. Georgi would suggest the problem is not that simple and that what we need is a better class of tenant. I hope none of Mr. Georgi's current tenants are offended by his suggestion. And what exactly does a better class of tenant bring to our little community? More T-shirt shops; more art shops? Mr. Georgi suggests that these better tenants would bring those folks down state to Charlevoix's commercial doors.

I think all this jaw flapping misses the point. There has to be a realization somewhere along the line that we are a resort community and we really have an eight-week prime selling season. If you can't make it in those eight weeks than truly you are going to have a number of businesses close their doors.

In a way we are really no different than Mackinac Island, leaving the water issue aside. We are a destination for thousands of folks during the summer. We have never been a winter destination. If we want more of the down state folks, we have to concentrate, and sell, the benefits of winter. Having more interesting shops as Mr. Georgi suggests, is fuzzy logic, the down state folks already have their more interesting shops in Birmingham and the Somerset collection in Troy.

Finally, part of this dialog goes back to the kind of town and the kind of future we want for Charlevoix. We have always been somewhat schizophrenic, as a community, as to what we want. Clearly there is no consensus, and I dare say that when this generation of civic leaders are dead and gone this debate will continue on without a clear focus.

on the World Trade Center to name a few.

I am fortunate to interview many World War II veterans, to the present serviceperson and talk about how it was when they joined the service. One thing is said by all of them, they were Americans and proud of it. They came from all nationalities and all walks of life, the melting pot of the world, and yet Americans.

"Americans cherish the greatness of our homeland, but many do not realize how extensive and profound are the transformations that are now taking place in our nation's basic moral values, public discourse and political philosophy," states Jimmy Carter in the book, Our Endangered Values.

This is why I would like to state the American's Creed to you.

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people and for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed, a Democracy in a Republic, a sovereign nation of many sov-ern states. A perfect union, one and inseparable, established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to live it, to support its constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag and to defend it against all enemies.

It is the objective of this Office of Veterans Affairs to translate Americanism precepts, principles and ideals in an understanding and practical manner to groups and individuals, including young America, all month long.

State of the State response

Editor:
I watched Governor Jennifer Granholm's State of the State last Wednesday night, as well as the Republican "answers" following her really admirable performance. She is a great communicator, but what sticks in my mind's eye is the choreographed Republican "answers" during her speech.

They and the Democrats on the other side of the aisle gave standing ovations for the wife and children of the Captain in the National Guard still in Iraq and other special guests, and applauded all her carefully identified references to bipartisan accomplishments. Neither side of the aisle needs to be told how to respond to war heroes or to praise.

The Michigan State University camera, however, caught the Republican block time after time sitting on their collective hands. Understandably, they didn't cheer the Detroit Mayor. I could even forgive them not applauding the governor's plea for reversing their legislation on stem cell research if every single one of them believes in throwing away fetuses that could be used to save lives. To a man and woman, they sat on their hands. But their hands must have twitched when Governor Granholm asked them to increase the minimum wage for the first time in nine years or be overridden by voters putting it on the ballot themselves and voting it in with only Democrats to help.

Appeal pending in Eveleigh land dispute with City of Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Attorneys for Charlevoix residents Robert and Mary Eveleigh have appealed a Charlevoix County Circuit Court decision dismissing their claims and granting over $17,000 in sanctions to defendants in the case.

On Jan. 9 the Eveleigh's former representatives from the Lansing based law firm Grewal and Associates P.C. filed an appeal with the Michigan Court of Appeals.

The firm is hoping the appellate court overturns the final judgment made by Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas on Nov. 4, 2005.

In this final judgment Pajtas ruled in favor of the defendants and granted sanctions to them including $6,563.21 to the City of Charlevoix; $3,300 to the Sheffer family that owned the Eveleigh property before them; and $7,257.50 to Northern Michigan Title Company the title company that handled the property split.

In his order Pajtas wrote, "Sanctions are imposed as the court has deemed the plaintiffs' cause of action as unfounded and frivolous."

The Eveleighs sued the aforementioned parties claiming their property was illegally split in the 1980s, thus making it difficult for them to sell it.

The couple considered a property sale about two years ago.

"It's a mess, in essence we don't have a marketable piece of property," Mary Eveleigh said.

According to court documents, the Eveleighs claim the property they bought on land contract from the Sheffers at 208 East Dixon Avenue was illegally split in 1984 from another section of land owned by the Sheffers.

They claim the city did not take action on this matter when it was discovered and did not enforce its ordinances as a result. They further claim Northern Title did not conduct a thorough title search.

In a memo from city attorney Bryan Graham to city planner Gerry Harsch with regard to this matter he states that the city has no record of the split. But in 1985 the city recorded the division on the city tax roll and separately assessed the parcels.

"The city cannot now take legal action to force the recombination of the parcels to their pre 1984 configuration," Graham stated.

Graham said the Eveleigh property is recognized as a non-conforming lot of record and can be sold as such. He said this designation does not limit use of the property.

"There was absolutely no basis for this lawsuit," Graham said.

But the Eveleighs disagree and feel the city acted unlawfully in designating the property as a non-conforming lot of record.

"We need to go by the law," Mary Eveleigh said.

The Eveleighs claim the city also "invoked its zoning powers by creating spot zoning on the (Eveleigh's) property from R-1 to R-2, thereby depriving (Eveleighs) of their property."

The Eveleighs had visited the Charlevoix City Council on the matter in the fall of 2004. They claimed the previous owners of the property, the Sheffers, split the lot without going through the proper procedures that were in place according to city and state law.

However, after several meetings on the matter with the Eveleighs, city attorney Jim Young informed them and city council that the lot was not illegally split according to laws in the city at that time.

There are different laws dealing with lot splits in place now that would make a split such as theirs illegal now, Young said.

But, at the meeting with council, the Eveleigh's said a local real estate agent told them they could not sell their property because it was split illegally. Young disagreed and ultimately Judge Pajtas did too.

The Eveleighs asked the court to award them $25,000, plus costs, attorney fees and "further equitable relief as the court deems fair and just" each from the Sheffers, Northern Michigan Title and the City of Charlevoix.

If the appeal is denied the $17,120, 71 in sanctions Judge Pajtas awarded the defendants will stand.

St. Mary School celebrates Catholic Schools Week

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The parents, students and staff of St. Mary School in Charlevoix continue to celebrate Catholic Schools Week this week as they have since 1987.

According to St. Mary principal, Janet Troppman, 7,800 Catholic schools nationwide participate in the week-long celebration through the National Catholic Education Association.

"Every year we have a theme," Troppman said. "With this year's theme, we're focusing on character, compassion and values."

She added, "Basically what we're saying here is, Catholic schools offer an education infused with these values and the education resounds with the love of God."

The school honors a different group each day of the celebration which began Sunday, Jan. 29 with the students honoring the parish with a liturgy.

"They were the ushers, greeters, altar servers and the gift bearers," she said. "They were also a part of the choir and banner holders."

Following service there was a bake sale with all proceeds going to the religious retirement fund for retired clergy and nuns.

Monday there were physical activities for the students including free-throw contests and relay races.

Tuesday was denim day with all proceeds going to help a woman and her daughter who came to live in the area shortly after Hurricane Katrina hit the mainland. That day the kids and staff also wore hats for hats off to the nation's leaders and the kids played all-American bingo.

Today, Wednesday, the school honors the community by holding a canned food drive with the proceeds to go to help two local families in need.

Thursday, the students of the school will be honored with pajama day, which Troppman said, is always a favorite among the kids. There will be a scholastic book fair all day Thursday which is open to the public.

"And we have a pancake luncheon that the parishioners, Knights of Columbus, Oleson's and Glen's help us put on and we're having what we call game bonanza. We'll have tables of board games and when you finish a game you move on to another," she said. "We'll also do reading buddies where the older kids read to the younger kids."

Friday the vocations and shut-ins will be honored with cards of encouragement.

"That day is also spirit day. We wear our St. Mary T-shirts. Then, we're creating a paper chain and on every chain the students will write a word of appreciation for everyone who has been called by God for their vocation and then we'll link that all through the school because we're all linked together to do what God has called us to do."

Troppman said the cards to shut-ins are well received.

"People are thankful of them," she said. "They love to get communication from people and especially from children."

Troppman said this week-long celebration is more than just some fun events for her 88 students.

"It's the fact that we give them lifelong values such as the character and compassion," she said. "It's the compassion of our students that they have when they reach out to help our less fortunate brothers and sisters — which we encourage them to do."

ANNUAL DRINKING WATER QUALITY REPORT OF THE

City of Charlevoix Water Supply

January 2006

Here is this year's Annual Quality Water Report.

It is designed to inform you about the quality drinking water and services we deliver to you every day. Our constant goal is to provide you with a safe and dependable supply of drinking water. We want you to understand the efforts we make to continually improve the water treatment process and protect our water resources. We are committed to ensuring the quality of your water. The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity. Our water comes from Lake Michigan, considered surface water. The State has performed an assessment of our source water in 2004. A determination of sensitivity and susceptibility to contamination was made by reviewing our source water geology, water chemistry, and potential contamination sources nearby the lake. The State has determined that our source water has a moderate sensitivity rating along with a moderate susceptibility to contamination. You may obtain a copy of the State report by contacting the City of Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant.

We are pleased to report that your drinking water is safe and meets all State and Federal requirements.

This report is a snapshot of the quality of the water we provided to you in the year 2005. Included are details about where your water comes from, what it contains, and how it compares to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and State of Michigan standards. If you have any questions about this report or concerning your water utility, please contact Jim Caldwell at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant, (231) 547-3256, or Don Swem at the Charlevoix Water Department, (231) 547-3278. We want our valued customers to be informed about their water utility. The City of Charlevoix Water Supply routinely monitors for contaminants in your drinking water according to Federal and State Laws. This report shows the results of our monitoring for the period of January 1 thru December 31, 2005. All drinking water, including bottled drinking water, may be reasonably expected to contain at least small amounts of some constituents. It's important to remember that the presence of these constituents does not necessarily pose a health risk.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations and wildlife.

Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals which can be naturally occurring or result from urban stormwater run-off, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture and residential uses.

Radioactive contaminants, which are naturally occurring.

Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban storm water runoff, and septic systems.

The State of Michigan and Environmental Protection Agency require us to test our water on a regular basis to ensure its safety.

We met all monitoring requirements for the year 2005.

Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution System personnel sampled and tested for over 100 contaminants that were NOT detected in our water supply. The following constituents were detected at low but safe levels, well below the MCL (Maximum Contaminant Level)

In the following tables you will find many terms and abbreviations you might not be familiar with. To help you better understand these terms we've provided the following definitions:

Parts per million (ppm) or Milligrams per liter (mg/L) - one part per million corresponds to one minute in two years or a single penny in $10,000

Parts per billion (ppb) or Micrograms per liter (µg/L) - one part per billion corresponds to one minute in 2,000 years, or a single penny in $10,000,000.

Picocuries per liter (pCi/L) - A pico equals one part per trillion; the measurement of radiation in water.

Nephelometric Turbidity Unit (NTU) - nephelometric turbidity unit is a measure of the clarity of water. Turbidity in excess of 5 NTU is just noticeable to the average person.

Action Level (AL) - the concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.

Treatment Technique (TT) - A treatment technique is a required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.

Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) - is the highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG) - is the level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

NA: not applicable

ND: not detectable at testing limit

Sodium (ppm)	NA	NA	8	8	2005	NA	Erosion of natural deposits.
Sulfate (ppm)	NA	NA	27	27	2005	NA	Erosion of natural deposits.

*Lead and Copper - Lead and copper testing is on a three (3) year schedule. Test results reported here are from the 2003 year; next round of testing is year 2006.

NOTES: * Turbidity - turbidity is a measure of the cloudiness of the water. We monitor it because it is an indicator of our filtration system.

Unregulated contaminants are those for which the EPA has not established drinking water standards. The purpose of unregulated contaminant monitoring is to assist EPA in determining the occurrence of unregulated contaminants in drinking water and whether future regulation is warranted.

We're pleased that your drinking water meets or exceeds all Federal and State requirements. We have learned through our monitoring and testing that some constituents have been detected. The EPA has determined that your water is SAFE at these levels.

All sources of drinking water are subject to potential contamination by substances that are naturally occurring or man made. All drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by cryptosporidium and other microbiological contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791)

Call us if you have any questions.

About our system...

The City of Charlevoix operates a Direct Filtration Water Treatment Facility which uses water from Lake Michigan. With a capacity of 3 million gallons per day, water enters the plant through a submerged intake structure. Storage includes a one million gallon above ground reservoir at the plant, and a 300,000 gallon elevated tank (water tower) on Charlevoix's north side. The City has approximately 32 miles of distribution lines serving approximately 5,000 customers in the City of Charlevoix and areas of adjoining Charlevoix Township, as well as, the influx of summer visitors to the area. Present flow rates vary from around 400,000 gallons per day in the winter to as much as 2.5 million gallons per day in the summer. In service since 1987, it is a modern, efficient facility staffed by licensed, well trained operators. Charlevoix is continually improving its distribution system assuring fresh water and adequate pressure throughout our entire service area. An electrical generator at the Water Plant assures normal operation at full capacity in the event of an electrical power loss to the City. We at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution System work around the clock to provide top quality water to every tap.

Please help us protect our water resources, which are the heart of our community, our way of life, and our children's future.

PARENTING

A child's dental health begins in the womb

Jay Balasz
'Kids' corner'

Parents want the best for their children. Good dental health will be a lifetime gift that parents can give their children. Teaching children good habits early will ensure them a lifetime of dental health.

During pregnancy a child's teeth begin to form. Mother's can actually begin caring for their children's teeth during pregnancy. A mother's dental health, and overall health care, affects their unborn baby. When a pregnant mother has an infection in her gums or teeth the body fights the infection. Scientists believe this immune response produces byproducts and chemicals that can travel through the blood stream and may cause the onset of labor before the baby has fully developed.

Infants are usually born without teeth. The eruption of the baby teeth usually begins at about 6 months of age. The front incisors typically erupt first. Many parents expect the teeth to continue erupting from the front to the back in perfect order. Parents are also often surprised when at the baby's first birthday a back tooth erupts alone in the middle of a field of pink gum. This again, is normal and nothing to be alarmed about.

Usually at age 2 the baby teeth have all erupted in the mouth. From 2 to age 6, decay is the most common problem to develop. The American Dental Association recommends a first dental appointment at age 2. At this stage parents should be assisting their child with brushing. After brushing, parents should inspect the child's teeth for small holes that would indicate decay. The family dentist should be alerted if any signs of decay are spotted by the parents.

At this young age parents are often alarmed when they hear their child grinding their teeth. This is a common occurrence and can be partially explained by the anatomy of a young mouth. At this stage the young jaw joint is not fully developed and back teeth are essentially flat which allows the child to grind.

Permanent teeth begin erupting at age 6. Again, the front teeth erupt first with the six-year molars not far behind. The child now has a mixture of baby teeth and adult teeth. The next eruption does not start until the child is approximately 10 years old. This second eruption sequence brings the tooth fairy again and again until age 12 when all of the adult teeth are in. Kids now have all of their adult teeth so they can be free to concentrate on their real job as teenagers—talking back to their parents.

Between the ages of 7 and 9 there are bite considerations where an early phase of orthodontics may be necessary. The American Association of Orthodontists recommends an evaluation at age 7. Early interception of these bite problems can be very important to a child's teenage years and your family dentist may recommend an early evaluation.

Most children will not need orthodontia until all of their adult teeth are in. Crowding teeth, differing jaw sizes, and too much room for the teeth are a few of the reasons braces become necessary as a teenager. When parents make the financial commitment to put braces on their child's teeth they assume that their children's dental health will be all set. While braces are necessary for many children, they are only one part of the dental equation.

Throughout a child's lifetime gum and tooth care are important concerns with lasting ramifications. The mouth doesn't deteriorate by accident. Tooth decay, gum disease and bite problems can still present problems.

Tooth decay remains a serious problem with teenagers. Most parents understand that sodas such as Coke and Mountain Dew contain large amounts of sugar. They may not realize that one serving of these beverages contains 12 tablespoons of sugar. Another surprising fact is that sports drinks and juices contain nearly as much sugar. Sugar causes tooth decay and once a tooth has a filling in it is forever weakened.

Gum disease tends to develop later in life. Early on, a patient may experience light gum bleeding when they brush or floss. This bleeding is a sign of infection. Bleeding gums, or gingivitis, predictably progresses into periodontal disease. 80 percent of people in their sixties have developed at least beginning gum disease. That is an alarming statistic for people in our country. It's also something that can be changed.

Tooth disease and periodontal disease are completely preventable. Both are caused by bacteria in plaque. The healthy 20 percent of the population share one thing in common — they successfully remove plaque from their teeth on a daily basis. It has been said that good oral health can be achieved by visiting your dentist twice a year. While this is certainly necessary, true oral health is achieved when a person spends a small, devoted amount of time removing bacteria from their teeth each day.

It's hard to get people to floss their teeth, but this is as important as brushing. It we can get our children to not drink big gulps of soda or sports drinks, and remove the bacteria from their teeth by brushing and flossing, we will have prepared them for a future of superior dental health.

The last serious problem children can develop concerns their bite or occlusion. We now live longer and keep our teeth for a lifetime. Bite problems are occurring more frequently because of this. Common symptoms which can arise from an unbalanced bite are headaches, tooth wear, muscle tenderness, cold sensitivity of the teeth, fractured teeth and jaw-joint dysfunction. If symptoms such as these develop your child should communicate this to your dentist. Tooth wear and joint problems are irreversible and addressing bite issues early can make the treatment easier and more successful.

We all want what is best for our children. Two of the three problems which can develop in the mouth are preventable when plaque is adequately removed each day. Our job as parents is to constantly monitor our children's brushing and flossing.

The last problem, the bite, is solved by good communication with your dentist and choosing the right orthodontist. Your family dentist can be an important resource here. As parents if we can establish good daily hygiene habits, a healthy diet, and a balanced occlusion our children can have a lifetime of great dental health.

Elementary School.

A light dinner will be served at 5:30 p.m. with the performance scheduled from 6 to 7 p.m. Families with children kindergarten through fourth grade are invited to attend the event presented by Boyne City Elementary School and Stepping Stones to School. There is no charge for the concert or refreshments.

Artist, Heather Collins Sisto, of Michigan Wolf Trap, will lead the presentation of children's stories "The Hungry Caterpillar" by Eric Carle, "The Carrot Seed" by Ruth Krauss, and the African folk tale "How the Leopard Got Its Spots."

Michigan Wolf Trap is an organization dedicated to early childhood educators and professional artists who offer age-appropriate concerts for children and families throughout northern Michigan. The concerts are designed for families with children from birth through fourth grade.

Sisto's background is in dance and theater. She believes in blending words with movement and music to bring stories to life.

"I allow children to create and build the sounds and textures of a story, which brings excitement and energy," she said.

The performance is designed to introduce children to the theater, and have them become active, involved viewers and listeners. Through fun, children will also learn about story making and music.

'Must reads' from library director Valerie Meyerson

The following is a list of age specific books selected by Charlevoix Public Library director Valerie Meyerson for February reading and include winners of the 2006 Newbery and Caldecott awards.

The Newbery Medal was named for eighteenth-century British bookseller John Newbery. It is awarded annually by the Association for Library Service to Children, a division of the American Library Association, to the author of the most distinguished contribution to American literature for children.

The Caldecott Medal was named in honor of nineteenth-century English illustrator Randolph Caldecott. It is awarded annually by the Association for Library Service to Children, a division of the American Library Association, to the artist of the most distinguished American picture book for children.

2006 Newbery Winner:
Lynne Rae Perkins,
"Criss Cross."

Debbie and Hector both narrate this novel that exquisitely defines that moment of decision making when ones' path is forever altered. Both are 14, funny and looking for change. The descriptiveness of Perkins' writing continues throughout the novel as her style changes from prose to poetry to haiku to illustrations to question and answer. The freshness keeps us in tune and interested through the tale, which winds around the path of adolescence.

A Newbery honor book:
Jacqueline Woodson,
"Show Ways."

Show Ways tells the story of eight generations of girls taught to sew by their caretakers. Soonie is a slave girl sold without her parents at age 7. She learns to sew her show way to tell her story of bravery living the life of a slave. Each generation passes on to the next the belief that there is a road to a better pace — just follow the show way.

2006 Caldecott Winner:
Norton Juster, "The Hello,
Good-bye Window."

The relationship between grandparents and their grandchild is magical. The Hello, Good-bye Window is the transformation of that relationship. We are privy to a little girl's hopes and dreams as she watches life through her Nanna and Poppy's picture window. Raschka's illustrations are the perfect match to Juster's song like narrative. The playful watercolors are whimsical and curious. Children, of all ages, will love the way this story takes them back to their special memories of their grandparents.

A Caldecott honor book:
Marjorie Priceman,
"Hot Air: The mostly true story of the first hot-air balloon ride."

Hot Air is the mostly true story of the first ever manned hot air balloon flight. Priceman's introductory text gives us just the right amount of information to know what is coming up a wordless ride over land and sea with barnyard pilots. The antics and trouble the duck, rooster and sheep find are cleverly depicted in Priceman's active watercolors. Young children, especially, will love the bright, moving colors.

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

A local man's ventures in cyberspace aim to bring more business to Charlevoix retailers.

Scott Ewen recently launched four Internet sites from which he plans to sell community-specific goods.

At this time, the Charlevoix site, www.charlevoixshopping.com features 2,000 items from SMC, a California based wholesaler and advertisements of local stores. But Ewen is working toward featuring items available specifically at local stores.

Thus far, he has discussed establishing a business relationship with Bullfrog Light Company Candle Factory and others. Through the site Ewen said he is hoping to collect sales and garner 15 percent while the vendor takes the rest and handles shipping. He said ad space is available as well as positions on the site.

Ewen said this is particularly well-suited to those without existing Web sales sites and those without a physical location for their goods, like artists.

"I have the expertise to get into search engines," he said.

Purchases can be made using PayPal or a credit card.

Ewen's professional career includes a lengthy track record in computer technology, including software and hardware sales and Web development.

Ewen is from the Detroit area and spent most of his life in Ann Arbor. After graduating from Wayne State University in the 1970s he moved to the Petoskey area and worked for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency for four years.

He moved to Charlevoix last winter after his wife Diane's family home, Durance Farm, a centennial farm that has been family owned since the 1880s located off Mercer Boulevard, was flooded with water when pipes burst.

His initial thought was to raise alpacas on the over 20 acres of property the farm includes. He launched a Web site, www.durancefarm.com from which he planned to offer alpaca goods. But after being turned down in November for a Farm Service Agency grant to purchase the alpacas, plans narrowed to community wares Web sales. He continues to explore other funding sources for the alpaca farm.

Durance Farm has a long history as a you-pick strawberry farm which occurred there from the early 1900s through the 1960s. It became a hardwood tree farm in the 1980s and remains a tree farm. For more information visit www.durancefarm.com.

Other sites he plans to personalize for communities include www.petoskeyshopping.com and www.mackinawshopping.com. He plans to add want ads to the existing sites and an auction site that is currently under development at www.northernmichiganauctions.com.

For more information, e-mail Ewen at sewen@semarketing.org or call him at (231) 330-8914.

BUSINESS

Tax season tips and warnings for filers

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Hugh Mason

Charlevoix, while he has some clients who wait until autumn to do their taxes, it's never too early to think about filing.

"Obviously it's easier for us — the sooner you do them (taxes) the better. But I have people who wait to do their taxes in May, June and October and it doesn't seem to increase instance of audits," Mason said. "It would be nice to have at least a week in advance, but when we get closer to April 15, we squeeze them in."

Most of Mason's business consists of audits on personal businesses, non profit organizations and corporations, and as a result, he's familiar with the workings of the IRS tax code.

He suggests being honest and thorough.

"I think keeping good records is the most important thing you can do, because if you end up getting audited and you've taken deductions, the IRS will want to see the documentation," he said.

The IRS Web site suggests retaining most records for three years, while record of purchase or sale of a home, stock transactions, IRA and business or rental property, need to be kept longer. And, you should keep documents which may have an impact on your federal tax return including but not limited to credit card and other receipts, invoices mileage logs and canceled checks.

While it's a good idea to be honest and accurate on returns, the percentage of people audited in the United States is low.

"To be honest, the IRS is not auditing many returns anymore," he said. "A lot of it they can do from 1099s and W2s. It is expensive for the IRS to complete audits and over the last few years, as far as doing individual audits in the field, not very many of them have been done."

They just don't have the manpower."

Some of the new tax law changes in 2005 to be aware of while filing include a new uniform definition of a qualifying child, special rules for car donations, expanded retirement savings incentives and an increase in mileage rates for business use of a vehicle which increased to 40.5 cents per mile from Jan. 1 to Aug. 31, 2005 and 48.5 cents per mile for Sept. 1 to Dec. 31, 2005. The rate for 2006 will drop to 44.5 cents per mile. Standard mileage rate when traveling for medical reasons or as part of a deductible was 15 cents per mile until Sept. 1, 2005 when it increased to 22 cents per mile.

The previous four-month extension for filing income tax forms with the federal government has been increased to six months. Taxpayers may request an automatic extension without giving a reason.

According to the IRS, if you have someone do your taxes, it is imperative to find a reputable tax preparer to avoid financial and legal issues. The IRS warns filers to beware of preparers who claim to obtain larger refunds than others, those who guarantee results or who base fees on the amount of your refund.

But, Mason said, "I would say most tax preparers are proficient in what they do. I think the most important thing is who you feel comfortable with."

As with most accountants, Mason said, tax return fees are charged based on the amount of time needed for completion.

"You may have a tax return that is 20 pages long and you might have return that is two pages long," he said.

In the tax world, Mason said, people are creatures of habit.

"If someone comes to me on March 15 this year, then most likely they'll be back next year on March 15," he said.

For issues with unresolved IRS problems there is an independent tax advocate service within the IRS. Visit www.irs.gov/advocate for more information. Publication 910 offers lists of free tax preparation and advice services as well.

Free tax help is available from the IRS via Web site, telephone, Braille or in person. For the full list of types of free assistance and contact information, visit www.irs.gov.

"The IRS can help many taxpayers prepare their own returns without the assistance of a paid preparer," the IRS Web site states. "Before seeking a paid preparer, taxpayers might consider how much information is available directly from the IRS through the IRS Web site."

Regardless of who prepares your return, the IRS reminds taxpayers that they are held liable for inconsistencies in their individual returns and tax evasion is punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine of $250,000.

For more information on the services offered by Mason and Kammernann PC, call (231) 547-6323.

Rayder volleyball take fourth at invitational

By SCOTT RICHARDS
Sports writer

The lady Rayders varsity volleyball team turned up the heat at the Charlevoix Invitational this past Saturday, Jan. 28, placing fourth.

The Invitational included state ranked teams in both class C and D. The Rayders have put up notice that they are a force that can't be ignored.

When coach Liz Grunch was asked if the team figured to make it all the way to the tournament semi-final game she replied, "This team does not surprise me at all, they have tons of potential."

When Charlevoix needed outstanding play from its individuals to keep advancing it did not need to look further than number 11, Bethany Pearson and number 3, Sasha Spenceley. Pearson was named to the all-tournament team that was chosen by the coaches and game officials. Spenceley was chosen by the Rayders as the team's most valuable player for the tournament.

Spenceley had 21 kills 11 digs 9 blocks for the day and Pearson had five aces, 15 kills, 21 digs and 23 blocks.

Grunch said the whole squad should be commended for its high level of play as noted by the following tournament stats.

Zita Anderson had 73 assists and a flawless 100 percent serving record on the day. Sally Haselschwardt took 15 kills and 11 blocks. Ashlie Bradley had 22 kills and 11 digs. Murphy Gillespie had seven aces, 12 kills and 11 blocks. Emily Heffling had 20 digs. Rohyn Petzak added 19 digs to Charlevoix's great effort.

Coach Grunch was very happy with the tournament results. "This team is believing in themselves," she said.

The Rayders then traveled to Harbor Springs on Monday for a conference game with Grayling and Harbor Springs. Charlevoix took three straight from Grayling winning 25-9, 25-18 and 25-14.

They then took on Harbor and defeated them in three out of five games with the scores of 19-25, 25-21, 23-25, 25-9 and 25-6.

The lady Rayders are now 6 and 1 in the conference and 15-11-7 overall.

School steering committee talks revenue

By BENJAMIN GOIIS
Staff writer

The Charlevoix Public Schools Financial Steering Committee met for the final of four scheduled meetings on Thursday, Jan. 26 to brainstorm and discuss alternative sources of revenue generation.

As in previous meetings, the large group broke into groups of five to explore and cull their ideas and later reported them to the entire group.

Chuck Mason, the speaker chosen for group one said his group spoke of the possibility of starting an endowment fund or starting an alumni association.

Mason said his group also mentioned the Kalamazoo promise, wherein Kalamazoo schools, with financial grants from large businesses in the area, will provide all their public school graduates with up to 100 percent of college "post secondary" tuition.

But, Mason said, "That probably wouldn't happen up here because there aren't enough big businesses."

The amount of tuition awarded to students in Kalamazoo Public Schools depends upon how many years a student attends Kalamazoo. There are some restrictions such as the student must maintain a designated grade point average and attend a university or community college in Michigan.

Mason also said his group mentioned possibly targeting a reduction in dropout level.

"Instead of dropping out at 16, we could raise the dropout age to 18," he said.

Group one also mentioned the idea that drawing students from around the area could be a plus.

In terms of aggressively advertising Charlevoix Public Schools locally, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock, said, "We have an agreement among all the superintendents not to advertise or try to take students from the other schools in the area."

Some of the ideas from the other four groups ranged from renting portions of the school buildings when not in use, selling the central office building and possibly increasing the number and diversifying the types of things the building trades students create and sell to increased pre-school enrollment and allowing the culinary arts students to operate school cafeteria as a type of public lunch diner which would be open to anyone.

The idea of encouraging low to moderate income housing in the hopes of enticing families with children to the area was also discussed.

Sturock said many productive and innovative ideas came out of Thursday's meeting.

"This has been fun group to work with," he said. "These guys have come forward with some good ideas and I've been nothing but pleased and appreciative of the work they have been doing."

He added, "I look forward to giving this info to the board."

Sturock said he feels the committee did a good job of looking at the long and shorter issues facing the school system.

The Charlevoix School Board will likely use this information when preparing their 2006-2007 balanced budget which must be adopted by June 31.

"I think we communicated the financial issues facing the school district given that we've been able to gain input on expenditure reductions and prioritized that which is most important, if in fact, we get into having to make reductions."

Sturock said he feels the community was well represented with this committee which included parents, educators, retirees and parents.

"It's a small but fair representation," he said.

The information from the four meetings will be processed by Sturock, Charlevoix Public Schools business manager, Shawn Biddle and several volunteers from the steering committee so it may be presented to the school board at their Feb. 13 meeting.

Charlevoix County makes recent headlines in the Chicago Tribune

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Alan Solomon

recent article.

Chicago Tribune travel writer, Alan Solomon, visited the area for the first time in his travels nearly 20 years ago and fell in love with the place. So, when he had the chance to return on assignment, he couldn't resist.

"Basically we were looking for place in the Midwest that offered all the good things that winter in the Midwest in winter can offer," he said. "I've been to Charlevoix a few times for other assignments and I always like how it felt. So, when we were kicking around the idea for a destination, I jumped on Charlevoix as a suggestion."

With nearly four decades as a journalist, Solomon has seen more diverse places — every continent including Antarctica — than most people dream about. He said surprisingly enough, the similarities abound.

"People aren't that different anywhere you go," he said. "You always get back what you give to a situation. And that's as true in Paris or Istanbul or New York as it is in Charlevoix."

Solomon's article entitled, "There's more than one way to beat the winter blues: On thin ice in Charlevoix County," appeared in the Jan. 22 edition of the Chicago Tribune.

Solomon said he had hoped to experiment with some of northern Michigan's trademark outdoor winter activities, but was dismayed with the strange weather patterns.

"As I said in the story, I hoped to find frozen lakes and fabulous snowmobile trails and that sort of thing and unfortunately I came when the weather wasn't all that conducive to doing all the great things that I was hoping to do," he said.

Two of the activities Solomon wanted to try for the first time were ice fishing and snowmobiling.

But, as he stated in his article, "Even if there's no snow and the lakes are unfrozen and the snowmobile trails are mostly mud, there's still plenty of reason to come up here. And something else you can do, snow or not: Drive across the river — any river in Charlevoix County — and into the trees."

Hence the focus of Solomon's story shifted from a story about winter in Charlevoix to a story about, "Winter in Charlevoix County when there isn't enough snow except at Boyne Mountain and the ice is thin or nonexistent except in a glass."

Solomon said it is the scale of the county which appeals to him the most.

"There aren't any big high-rise resorts or hotels, with the exception of Boyne Mountain," he said.

Solomon said, the reassuring thing about Charlevoix is that it is the kind of place generations have enjoyed over the years yet it has changed just enough to accommodate today's tastes.

Solomon said he likes the idea of coming back to Charlevoix with his wife, "and just relaxing and shopping the galleries and enjoying a couple of quiet dinners. The area has an amazing variety of really good restaurants which, to me, makes it perfect for a long weekend or a short week."

A native of Chicago, and in his 12th year as a travel writer for the Tribune, Solomon has won 44 national and regional awards for his writing while working for four major metropolitan newspapers, including the Houston Chronicle, Philadelphia Inquirer, Chicago Sun-Times and nearly 29 years in two tours of duty with the Tribune.

Groundhog Day prompts locals to sound off on signs of spring

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The first observance of Groundhog Day in America was in the late 1800s. Since then as many as 30,000 people have flocked to Punxsutawney, Pa. on Feb. 2 each year.

While Charlevoix doesn't celebrate the day of the woodchuck on any official level, the citizens have their own ways of knowing whether or not spring is near and without the aid of a rodent's shadow.

The Charlevoix Deputy Chief of Police, Scott Hankins, said, "Charlevoix citizens are sure spring is here when the carnival rides begin to appear for the Venetian Festival."

The Director of Veterans Affairs, Boh Drebenstedt, said he and his family always watch the Bill Murray classic movie, Groundhog Day.

He added, "If the groundhog sees it's shadow I predict the long handles (long underwear) will be worn in our household for another 90 days."

According to Roger Knutson, he knows spring is near when the tropical flora in his greenhouse perk up.

"They just hang on by their fingernails through January and some of February and then they begin making new leaves and popping up," he said. "And, the seed catalogs arrive with all the lovely pictures of what your garden should look like."

City mayor Norman Carlson said two major events signal spring's arrival for him.

"My friendly Ace Hardware owner goes back to shorts, which he seems to wear from March until December," Carlson said. "And the other is the orange panels come off the Dairy Queen and it opens."

Mark Greyerbiehl, the friendly Ace Hardware owner, said he knows spring is eminent when the snow is below the boot line.

"So we can wear shorts and it won't fill in the boots," he said. "My son has worn shorts throughout the whole year and I would wear them all year, but when it starts to snow, my wife says no you have to have pants on."

Greyerbiehl said another sure sign winter is almost over is the ice shanties are half sunk in Round Lake.

"I can tell when spring is close by when I see movement of the cement trucks and gravel hauling trucks and construction is going again," he added.

PUBLIC NOTICE

If it's not in the newspaper, how will the public notice?

Zoning changes. Tax increases. Legislative proposals. These are just a few topics where government actions can affect your life and community. Imagine if government no longer had the legal obligation to publish this information in your newspaper. How would public notices get noticed? In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. It should not be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, when to look or even to know what you're looking for to be informed. It is government's responsibility to publish and deliver public notice information as it becomes available. So take notice. Your right to know is being served... right here in your newspaper.

Law suit seeks $400,000 from county

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Jacqueline Rozema, one of the former Charlevoix County employees involved in the more than $1 million whistle blower settlement against Charlevoix County and former county prosecutor Mary Beth Kur last May, has filed suit against the county again.

According to documents filed at the Charlevoix County Clerk's Office, on Monday, Jan. 30, Rozema seeks damages of at least $400,000 for future health care costs she and her husband may incur after health benefits were cut despite alleged assurances by the county to the contrary.

However, county officials said the benefits were cut due to Rozema's lack of retired status.

"Mrs. Rozema's health insurance was cut because she has not retired and she's not drawing a pension from the county," said Charlevoix County Clerk, Jane Brannon. "Our rider requires that you draw a pension in order to receive health insurance benefits and that's how it is for every employee that's under that class. No one is getting their health insurance paid for them who has left here that is not drawing a pension."

According to Rozema's Traverse City attorney, Grant Parsons, the county hargained to leave Rozema's benefits intact during the first whistle blower lawsuit.

"We filed a new whistle blower retaliation complaint on behalf of Jackie Rozema because the county (Charlevoix), in writing, told her prior to settling the first lawsuit that she was entitled to health retirement benefits, that she was grandfathered in," he said. "And two days after we entered the agreement settlement, which expressly preserved her benefits, they canceled them. It was clearly a vindictive act."

Brannon said, when Rozema quit in April 2004, she and everyone else concerned assumed that Rozema would get her pension and health benefits at a reduced rate and the county's attorney advised them to let Rozema keep her benefits at that time. But, Brannon said, the county later discovered Rozema was ineligible for her pension due to inadequate number of years in service to the county.

"We've had employees retire and come back and ask for their health benefits at a later date and they couldn't get them," Brannon said. "Mrs. Rozema was well aware of that fact — this is nothing new."

Brannon said the county's retirement policy is 55 years old and 20 years of service.

"I didn't know that she couldn't retire before 55," Brannon said. "I thought it would be a half-percent a month reduction. The retirement office said, 'No, she will have to wait until age 60.'"

State evaluates Big Rock Point for possible purchase

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

According to officials with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, discussions of the state purchasing Big Rock Point, the former nuclear power generation site in Charlevoix's Hayes Township, have taken place.

"There have been very initial conversations with Consumers Energy regarding Big Rock Point. We are in the infancy stages of an initial evaluation of the property to see if it fits the criteria we establish for the DNR to do its work — conservation, recreation and preservation of wildlife habitat," said Mary Dettloff, the public information officer for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

She stressed that the state's initial evaluation of the property doesn't mean they plan to move forward.

"We may have to pass after the evaluation," she said.

Tim Petrosky, Big Rock Point public affairs director, would neither confirm nor deny talks with the state but did say Consumers Energy has maintained support for keeping the property in public hands.

"And we are working toward that end." He added that an extensive appraisal has been done to establish the property's value but would not disclose the results citing it as proprietary information.

This initial direction from the state follows in line with a November 2003 vote of the Hayes Township Board supporting state acquisition of Big Rock Point to create a state park.

"Everything is falling in the favor of public acquisition for that. There are a lot of loose ends here. Nothing is set in stone," Hayes Township supervisor, Tim Boyko, said. "It's gone from liquid to gel right now. You can't stand on it but you can see the surface."

Dettloff said a possible state purchase would be paid for by the Department of Natural Resources' Trust Fund which allocates about $25 million a year in grant funds.

Trust Fund revenue is garnered through oil and gas generation on state land. She said funds should be up this year as a result of rising fuel prices.

She said the grant request may not come from the state directly but could be submitted by a local conservation organization or conservancy.

An ad hoc committee has been quietly working behind the scenes to set the stage for the eventual push to see this property become a public resource. Its membership includes Boyko, Little Traverse Conservancy executive director Tom Bailey and other interested citizens.

Bailey would not comment as to whether he is working with the state on this project.

He did say that the deadline for grant applications to the Trust Fund is April 1, 2006.

Big Rock Point purchase considered by the state

Dentloff said an application can be prepared and pulled if the applicant chooses not to move forward.

At 35 years, Big Rock holds the record as the longest running nuclear power station in the country and is one of 19 nuclear plants either decommissioned or in the process of doing so.

The plant officially ceased providing power in 1997 because it was deemed no longer economically viable and efforts have been taken since it's closing to decommission the landmark.

The property includes about 1.5 miles of Lake Michigan frontage and is zoned industrial and agricultural. It is currently owned by Consumers Energy and consists of 560 acres located along U.S. 31.

Petrosky said the hope is the final site survey will occur this year, which should yield about 1.5 miles of lakefront property for a total of 530 acres of Big Rock Point's 560 acres of land to be salable. The other 30 acres will house the dry fuel storage facility which is approximately the size of a basketball court.

This is expected to be dismantled by 2012 pending the opening of Yucca Mountain in Nevada which is expected to happen in 2010. Petrosky said it will take a year to ship the material and another year to dismantle the dry fuel storage facility.

Big Rock was the fifth nuclear power plant in America and the first high-power-density boiling water reactor in the world and cost $27 million to build. And, Big Rock Point will be one of the first nuclear plants in the United States to decommission back to green field status.

According to officials with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, discussions of the state purchasing Big Rock Point, the former nuclear power generation site in Charlevoix's Hayes Township, have taken place.

Green field status is a term used by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission which basically means that a location which once housed a nuclear plant can have its radioactivity levels lowered to the point that the property can be released for public or private sale.

According to Petrosky, the criteria issued for green field status is that a person may not pick up more than an additional 25 millirem of radiation from the property.

Michiganers annually pickup 100-200 millirem from cosmic rays and other naturally occurring sources. One would need a onetime dose of 50,000 millirem for ill health effects.

When all the work is complete, the Big Rock decommissioning should take less than two decades. By federal law, nuclear power plants have up to 60 years to decommission.

The projected budget was $366 million with the project at $325 million last May.

Whistle blower plaintiff files suit with benefit claim

LAW SUIT

She added, "At the time, I thought the information she got from me was absolutely accurate or I wouldn't have given it to her."

Rozema's lawsuit cites several letters she received from Brannon assuring her she would continue to receive her benefits. However, one of the letters also stated that she would have to retain eligibility to receive said benefits.

In a letter from Charlevoix County Clerk, Jane Brannon, to Rozema dated Aug. 25, 2003, Brannon states, "You are probably aware that you are one of the few employees in a grandfathered group who are entitled to receive health insurance from the county upon retirement."

In the letter from Brannon to Rozema, Brannon further states, "You should also be aware that if there is an interruption in service, for example, if you did not work continuously for the county until retirement, you would not be entitled to receive health insurance benefits upon your retirement. Because health insurance is an important benefit to most individuals, I wanted to make sure you were aware of the necessity to avoid an interruption in service if you wish to receive retiree health insurance benefits."

She added, "Your current leave is not considered an interruption of service, but there would be an interruption of service, for example, if you were employed elsewhere or if your leave continued for longer than the current period."

Parsons said, "Once again, this is a suit for hundreds of thousands of dollars that never needed to be brought."

The initial whistle blower lawsuit lasted seven days, involved 20 witnesses and six hours of deliberation before the jury found Kur's actions as described by Rozema and the other plaintiff to constitute working conditions so intolerable the two women had no choice but to resign.

Rozema was originally awarded $505,713.65 in damages.

Local band rocks Detroit's Super Bowl XL

Julie Witthoeft
'Just a thought'

Hundreds of thousands of people flocked to the Motor City this weekend to watch the Pittsburgh Steelers man handle the Seattle Seahawks in Super Bowl XL.

As a sports abstainer I had a different reason for being there. My husband Charlie, a professional harmonica player, and the boys of Charlevoix's own Mojo and the Boogiemans played the Sports Illustrated Super Party at the Hilton off Gratiot Avenue in the heart of downtown Detroit.

The two-night gig kicked off on Saturday under a tent outside the renowned Hunter House restaurant. Football and beer lovin' Super Bowl fanatics packed the joint and shook their money makers to Mojo's originals and covers.

That night, the who's who from Sports Illustrated hunkered down inside the hotel in an apparent attempt to stay warm and store energy for game day.

Leaving the club that night, we pulled down an alley and were pleasantly surprised to see Detroit native Smoke Robinson, 65, and Chaka Khan packing their crew and gear into a shiny black town car.

They took their time but we didn't mind kicking back and watching one of Motown's greats do his thing.

As the sun rose on Sunday, slushy snow no longer fell and the smell of hot dogs filled the city streets. The VIP crowd, including sponsor representatives and long legged silicone stacked models, swaggered through the Super Party tent as testosterone buzzed super jocks looked on.

They were in heaven — it was game day, they were double fisted, and glitzed out women were working the joint.

The crowd of hundreds didn't include the blue and white jerseys typically seen near Ford Field, the home turf of the Detroit Lions. This weekend, Detroit was Steeler country.

When Mojo took the stage a second time Steelers jerseys, hats and of course those Terrible Towels were everywhere. As the yellow and black buzzed with Mojo fever they swung their towels and cheered.

Mojo wrapped up a high energy infused performance with Muddy Waters' original, "I Got My Mojo Working," just in time for Aretha Franklin to belt out the national anthem.

As the announcers introduced the teams the crowd roared with excitement and we packed up and prepared to head north for an early Monday work day.

During the over four hour sojourn from the city home, we bounced around the AM band listening to scratchy versions of the game on the radio. When the game ended with the Steelers besting the Seahawks 21-10 to win the franchise's fifth Super Bowl ring, we commented on the crazed state of affairs that were likely converging on Detroit — a recipe for yet another evening of debauchery.

As we pulled into town at around midnight discussions of the fun-filled weekend and the retirement of Steelers standout Jerome Bettis had turned into thank heaven we're home. There's no party that beats a good night of sleep in your own bed.

A writer's thoughts on beating the winter blues

Gayle Gennett
'A look at life'

As I sit bundled up in my favorite cozy chair sipping a glass of Merlot, or hot chocolate, reading my latest good book under a lamp lit with warm, bright bulbs, I am picturing myself sitting on our deck drinking in the morning sun that only spring and early summer can offer.

I've been awakened to a reality check as I turn up the heat and listen to the current weather report on the local news. Call me a dreamer but I am trying to beat the winter blues.

I faithfully take our dog, Austin, for a walk and if I dress in enough layers and wrap my beautifully handmade scarf across my face and around my neck I can venture forward and say to Austin, "See it's beautiful outside and those flakes are Mother Nature's wonderful creation for us to enjoy." Another reality check — I'm getting colder and I want to shorten this walk, but I do have layered dressing down to a fine art. Ask any woman politely who is over 50 and she'll explain how to do this.

When our kids were younger and my family members began to look at each other as if we were strangers from another planet we would book a room at a hotel for the weekend and take in the use of a pool and pretend for awhile that we were whisked away to someplace warm and inviting. This is how we'd beat the winter blues. As time has passed we've turned to other avenues to remind us and give us hope that the days are getting longer.

We work out at the gym, rent movies, have candlelit dinners with music, and on occasion cook a meal in the fireplace or on the outdoor grill to spice things up a bit. I think we're in agreement that winters are long and winter sports can be fun but sometimes being warm and having the sun out is such a blessing. Remember the sun? It's that round orb that sits in the sky occasionally and can truly make your day turn around even if you're not having a good one. Nothing beats it, nothing compares, but since we don't live in Colorado or Florida we make the best of it.

Things that help are taking in your vitamin D and St. John's Wort. Dr. Weil, my favorite health specialist, claims that certain herbs are effective for seasonal affective disorder (SAD), a form of depression made worse by the lack of sunlight. Also, there is a theory that not enough fatty acids (Omega 3) in your diet can trigger depression. Your mom was right, you need to eat your hroccoli and take cod liver oil.

If you thought it was only humans who were hit with this winter blues thing, it may surprise you that our pets are afflicted too. Veterinarians report that our pets need fresh water daily and exercise to go with it to improve their lives as well.

Besides a good diet and exercise, it's also important to socialize. Sometimes we get so comfortable at home we just don't want to venture out. Well force yourself, because once you're out visiting friends or family, you'll forget the lack of sun and enjoy life and be glad that you are spending time with others.

Music in your life is always a good thing too. Playing your favorite music while at work or cleaning the house, making dinner, or repairing that project you put off can lift your spirits. A common phrase is, "Music soothes the savage beast." You're not a savage but these long winter days may bring about a personality trait in you that you'd rather not discuss.

As I peruse what I've written so far, I would gander that from all the ideas listed, time with friends would be at the top of my list. If I asked you to list three people who won the Academy Awards for the last three years you might be hard pressed to respond. But if I asked you to list three friends you enjoy spending time with, the names would roll off your lips.

People can make a difference in our lives, particularly when the sun is rarely seen in this neck of the woods. Why not take a few minutes to invite them out for a walk, dinner or a just to visit and chat awhile. I assure you it will lift your spirits and who knows, the sun may come out tomorrow.

Shop Petoskey

Editor:
I am writing in response to several letters I have seen complaining about the lack of stores in Charlevoix and most being seasonal. I would urge people to do like I was told to do when we wanted Wal-Mart to come in and bring jobs, year-round services and development to the community. "Just drive to Petoskey to go to Wal-Mart." That is exactly what I do and when I am there I stop at the nice little stores in downtown Petoskey and get my clothes, food, gas, gifts and everything else I need and would have otherwise bought in Charlevoix.

Funny how Petoskey has a Wal-Mart and a thriving downtown business district, isn't it. The township wanted revenue spent elsewhere and now they are getting it. Why doesn't "This Is Our Town" and "Friends of Charlevoix Township" put the money they spent on their campaign to make the rich richer and the poor spending more than is fair into the downtown economy instead of forcing less fortunate and fixed income residents out of town? The markup on merchandise is so much more in Charlevoix than buying in Petoskey or East Jordan is almost a necessity.

Before Charlevoix decided to cater to the wealthy, transient vacationers, the downtown area had two hardware stores, two drug stores with soda fountains, three clothing stores, a furniture store, a jewelry store, three grocery stores, a bakery and two marinas. That was a real small town. Back then, the stores stayed open all year long and the owners knew most of the customers by their first name.

Now, condominiums are littering the landscape and blocking the view of all the lakes. Ask a local that has lived here for more than 30 years what the town looked like back then. I'll bet they'll say, "It was so beautiful back then, no condos drowning out the view and you could see the lake."

I have also heard Charlevoix Township and the City of Charlevoix are looking to increase jobs in the area. Last Nov. 8 you kissed 300 or more good jobs for our citizens good-bye. If condos, $400,000 houses and even more boat docks choking off the lakes are beautiful and small town, then this place is a knockout.

It's not the small town I remember when I first came here 25 years ago. If you really want to put life back into the town, make it one the average person can afford to live in. Not the high end quasi Club Med, Disney World some would like. I believe I have all the fudge, $200 knick-knacks and silk-screen tee-shirts I need for now.

Successful blood drive

Editor:
The final number of pints of blood collected by the American Red Cross in Charlevoix on Jan. 19 was 108 pints.

I want to thank the donors in Charlevoix for their fantastic support of the sick and injured during the critical shortage of blood products. The units collected at our drive could help at least 320 patients.

I'm grateful to the multitude of persons, organizations and businesses who played key roles leading to the success of our community's blood drive.

Please allow me to thank the groups and businesses who accepted posters and flyers and all my volunteers who made phone calls, worked the blood drive and/or baked for our canteen.

Jennifer Rich, Anna Farrell and Sarah Hagen are members of the National Honor Society at Charlevoix High School. I am pleased they chose to give the American Red Cross a portion of their service hours. They were able to see the Red Cross in action and get a feel for the importance of volunteerism. They made a difference.

There will be a blood drive at Bethany Lutheran Church from 1 until 5:45 p.m. on Thursday, March 16. The next community blood drive will be from noon until 5:45 p.m. on Thursday, May 18, at the Reformed Church. I hope all who read this will consider making a difference by taking advantage of these opportunities to donate blood. Besides, the hot fudge sundaes and homemade treats are worth the effort.

Northwest Academy night out

Editor:
I thought this might be the right time to let you know that the Friends of Northwest Academy are going to be holding a fund-raising event March 18. It will be a "Special Night Out," featuring the talents of our Jazz Band and others.

The menu for this event will include hors d'oeuvres and soft drinks. Full details of the night's events will soon follow.

I would like to also mention that this is Northwest's 10th anniversary as a Public School Academy in Charlevoix. We are currently planning a series of homecoming events for later in the year. We would be happy to hear from any of our alumni or other supporters. Please send any information to my attention at the school at 115 West Hurlbut St., Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Our auction is a community-wide event, which assists us in keeping tuition affordable. It provides our school with the necessary funds to assist our staff with the tools necessary to allow our students to grow mentally, academically, physically and spiritually. Your generosity contributes to our success as a Christian school.

We are truly blessed by the parents, parishioners, clergy, benefactors, sponsors, donors and volunteers who have given their time, talent and financial support to our wonderful school. Your unconditional generosity made our evening a success. The children of St. Mary's School will benefit greatly due to people like you.

Building off-season business
Editor:

I would like to thank Bill DuPont for his crystal clear response to the subject articles of a couple weeks back. As a former retailer of over 10 years with Sweet Sams Java Joint I can attest to his perspective on the subject. The eight weeks from June 15 to Aug. 15 is where a retailer makes it or breaks it for the year.

Sure we stayed open year-round but I can tell you from personal experience that outside the bubble of "eight weeks" sales and expenses were pretty close on the graph, and some years the months of November and April (shoulder months) the expenses outpaced sales.

Charlevoix is a tough town for retailers downtown. The single largest expense of course is rent. As Bill mentioned, the real estate for storefronts in Charlevoix is way over priced. About the same as Petoskey as a matter of fact which draws from the ski areas — amazing that businesses actually make it in this town. The solution is more revenue through foot traffic.

While we have gone virtual with Sweet Sams at sweetsamsjava.com (so we have no vested interest or conflict thereof) I have some ideas to build more attraction to downtown Charlevoix in the off months. It would require open and creative thinking on the part of the Downtown Development Authority and Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

Sponsored events at the Castle, Mount McSaubia, East Park and Michigan Beach, Ferry Beach, the airport, by these two groups and advertised on-line as well as in print and radio to those places where the resorters and visitors live could bring them up when the temperature is not necessarily conducive to tanning.

Soliciting ideas for these events from your readers, chamber members, the school children and others in a contest fashion could fill up the weekends outside the successful summer and fall weekend specials we have already.

Sometimes to solve a problem you have to turn it upside down for a different perspective.

Sales means revenue and revention. While I don't believe we need a Wal-Mart for foot traffic, I do believe we need attractions like more festivals and events for the months outside the two above.

This approach could be fun and profitable for Charlevoix.

Street Legends wins big at AutoRama in Grand Rapids

The Charlevoix Street Legends Classic Car Club gave donations to many charities and took home awards from the AutoRama car show in Grand Rapids.

The Street Legends raised money at their annual car show last July, and donated funds to Camp Quality, Charlevoix Area Hospital, Charlevoix Senior Center, Charlevoix Sheriff's Auxiliary, Charlevoix Humane Society, Hospice of Northwest Michigan, Camp Daggett, Charlevoix Skate Park, Camp McSaubia, Boulder Park Terrace, and a High School Scholarship Fund.

Over the last 13 years they have donated over $50,000 to a variety of local charities.

At the DeVos Place in Grand Rapids on Jan. 13-15, the Street Legends entered two cars in the AutoRama car show: a 1966 moss port green Corvette owned by Jerry and Joan Balch and a 1932 black cherry Ford Roadster owned by Ron and Judy Zednick.

Balch's Corvette took an outstanding award as well as a street achievement award. Zednick's roadster took a best in class award.

Street Legends members attended the event and the club won outstanding club display award as well.

The Street Legends will continue to raise money for charities

The Rainbow Shoppe looks to relocate

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

One of Charlevoix's longest-standing retail stores, The Rainbow Shoppe, is looking for a new home.

The Rainbow Shoppe, has been in business for 22 years in Charlevoix and is a local thrift store operated under the direction of a 20-person board of directors made up of two representatives each from 10 area churches.

Rita Orlowski, a board member and store founder said the board has voted to pursue a move from its current site at #1 Van Pelt Alley in downtown Charlevoix, where it has been in operation for 20 years.

According to Orlowski, the board's decision was made in response to proposed rent increases.

She explained that in May 2005 the board's landlord, Bill Decker of Detroit, approached its members with lease changes to reflect a triple net set-up under which rent would include the lessee's share of insurance, taxes and repairs.

The board opted to decline this agreement.

Decker also offered to sell the board the building for $375,000. However, Orlowski said this is out of reach and would be an undesirable move for the group.

Board president Ceil Doan said, "I wouldn't buy it (the existing building). Why should we put all that money into what we've got when we'll still have an old building that needs repair and has no close parking."

The organization currently pays $2,500 a month to rent the space.

Since deciding to pursue a move, board members have been seeking out vacant property on which to build and buildings a minimum of 10,000 square feet in which to relocate. The existing store is 12,000 square feet.

They would like to find something in the city or stay within a mile of it that meets their size requirements.

"Anything less than 10,000 square feet would defeat our purpose," Orlowski said.

Doan said thus far their search has been fruitless with most costs hitting about the $500,000 mark.

"I know buildings are costly. We just don't have the money. That's why we're looking for an angel or two," Orlowski said.

She added that the board is hoping someone will donate a new facility or funds to buy an existing building or vacant lot.

"We want to know just where we stand with the community. We've been the compassionate contributors and now, we need compassionate contributors," Orlowski said.

By 2003 the group had given away over $1 million to non-profit area programs and in 2005 gave $45,000 to community groups. Those receiving funds in 2005 include BASES Teen Center, Camp Quality, Charlevoix Mt. McSaubia day camp, the Alano Club, Circle of Strength and the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

On a daily basis the Rainbow Shoppe staff also works with the Family Independence Agency and walk-in clients in need, to provide goods quickly and free-of-charge.

The store started at an Antrim Street location with seven volunteers and now utilizes 172 volunteers and seven full and part-time staff members.

"Most of our volunteers are older men and women. This enables them to get out and do something positive for themselves and the community,"

Orlowski said.

According to Orlowski an investment in the Rainbow Shoppe is an investment in the community.

The Rainbow Shoppe is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday. For more information or to donate to the shop's relocation effort contact Rita Orlowski at (231) 547-5518 or Ceil Doan at (231) 547-0376.

Charlevoix Abstract and Title Agency opens

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

A new title company has opened its doors to serve property exchange needs in Charlevoix.

Charlevoix Abstract and Title Agency which handles commercial and residential title work started in late January.

Dick Joseph, Grant Elowsky and Tim Murphy, the agency's owners, had been considering a Charlevoix title business venture for some time.

Elowsky is the former owner of Metropolitan Title and has honed his skills in comprehensive title searches. Murphy currently owns and operates Bay View Title Company in Petoskey.

Joseph said he brings to the table his strong background in real estate law. "Having a title company is something I've always wanted to do. I think it's a natural extension of my practice," Joseph said.

He said what sets his company apart from other title agencies is its depth of knowledge and affiliation with the firm Young, Graham and Elsenheimer in which Joseph is an attorney. Young, Graham and Elsenheimer is an established law firm with expertise in zoning, real estate issues and access.

Joseph said this allows Charlevoix Abstract and Title Agency to offer its customers free legal advice as well as document drafting, including deeds and condominium documents like master deeds and bylaws.

"Together we think we can provide more than just title work. We can help customers solve a lot of problems and help them close the transaction," Joseph said.

Elowsky purchased the name Charlevoix Abstract from the late Mary Feindt, a former surveyor and title business owner. Her surveying business now operates as Advanced Geomatics.

"Our goal is to live up to that firm's reputation," Joseph said.

Hoping to take a commanding lead in the local title market, Joseph said his company specializes in closings, escrow arrangements, refinancing and 1031 property exchanges. Old Republic is the underwriter for the agency.

Joseph, Elowsky and Murphy hope to open a second location in Bellaire this summer which would operate under the name Bellaire Title Company.

Charlevoix Abstract and Title Agency will employ two to three full-time agents.

Four file to run for Charlevoix school board

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

As of noon, Tuesday, Feb. 7, four men have filed to run for the two open spots on the Charlevoix Public School Board.

The candidates include current board president, Dennis Halverson and locals Jeff Stevens, Tom Barnes and John McLean Jr.

Jeff Stevens

Stevens, a lifelong citizen of Charlevoix, is a volunteer fireman of 21 years and an EMT specialist. He works for the local Department of Natural Resources Fisheries.

Stevens is married and has two school-age children.

"I have a real vested interest in the school system," he said. "The steering committee is what spurred my interest. The more information I got, the more interested I became. And, as the seat came available, I decided to give it a try."

Stevens said the financial steering committee devised dozens of great ideas to help the school district tackle its budget woes. And, if elected, his first accomplishment would be to attempt to keep all school staff by implementing some of those ideas.

"Our academic core is the most important thing," he said. "I think we should do anything we can to not lose a teacher or staff member, because they all have a part."

He added, "I just want what's best for the kids."

Stevens said, if elected, he would also like to get the board to work with the city and township governments to try to bring working families into the Charlevoix area.

"Working families have kids and both the community and school could benefit from that," he said.

Aside from coaching numerous sports including the ski team, soccer and softball, Stevens and his wife are devoted to the sports boosters and the enrichment foundation.

Stevens thanked outgoing board member Ardeith Wieland for her many years of service to the board and community.

McLean, also on the fire department, has two children in school.

In his five years in Charlevoix, McLean said he has grown to revere the area.

John McLean Jr.

of committees at the elementary and middle schools."

He added, "I think I've got a good

"I'm a huge advocate for the children," he said. "I think I am super involved with the school system to begin with. I've been doing volunteer work for the last five years on a ton pulse on what's going on with the kids and staff."

McLean said, while he doesn't have an agenda, he does hope to provide some insight and new ideas.

Obviously the budget crisis is one of the biggest issues facing Charlevoix schools, he said.

"Another issue that is pressing seems to be teachers and their medical benefits," he said.

McLean, who plans to retire as the chief officer in charge at the Charlevoix Lifeboat Station late this June, has 23 years in the U.S. Coast Guard in which time he has undertaken numerous leadership roles.

"I can't even count how many committees and boards I've been on," he said. "My military background and upbringing has taught me a lot about solid leadership and mentoring and just making some really solid and informed decisions."

He added, "I chose to retire here in Charlevoix this year because this is such a great community — it's a great place to raise my kids."

Candidate Barnes has a bachelor of science degree in plastic engineering.

neering technology from Ferris State University and has worked for 20 years at Lexalite in sales, sales management and product development.

Tom Barnes

He is past commodore of the Charlevoix Yacht Club, treasurer for the Lake Charlevoix Mariners and treasurer for the C&O Club Association.

"These positions have helped me to understand finances in not-for-profit environments and to practice team-building," he said.

Barnes' wife is Pamela Drury-Barnes and he has two school-age children.

"I have participated on the steering committee which was organized to provide input on community priorities in education," he said. "During these meetings, I gained insight to the substantial changes necessary to balance the school budget."

He added, "I am concerned that the present rate of spending unchecked will eliminate the budget surplus and put our school at risk of financial crisis."

Barnes said he is financially conservative and it pains him to see the once substantial surplus eliminated in such a short amount of time.

Barnes said Charlevoix is blessed with a talented and enthusiastic group of educators.

"I want to see this maintained as best as possible for the remainder of my children's school time and for future generations," he said. "I believe our school system needs to be operated as any other business — with a vision for the future and sound fiscal management."

According to Barnes, if elected, he will focus on a responsible business plan and the maintenance of Charlevoix's academic core.

"It may be necessary to cut some otherwise worthwhile programs in order to remain solvent," he said.

"And I will support doing so. Just as in business, I believe every position must be reviewed based on its value and should be filled with the best qualified individual available."

He added, "There are no sacred cows and nobody gets preferential treatment."

Dennis Halverson

Barnes also said he expects the community to step up and do its part to solve the current situation.

"Paying our taxes isn't enough. We need volunteer help, donations, cooperation and support," he said. "We have a wealth of untapped talent in our area. We need to tap it."

The school board election in which these four candidates will face off for two seats, will take place on Tuesday, May 2.

County commission candidate forum

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Heading into the upcoming Feb. 28 election, the three First District Charlevoix County Commission candidates sound off on what they feel are the most important issues facing Charlevoix.

Unaffiliated candidate Connie Saltonstall, Green party candidate Ellis Boal and Republican candidate John Haggard plan to attend a forum at 3 p.m. on Feb. 12 at the Charlevoix Public Library to discuss their platforms.

Haggard said, though the idea of serving his community is constantly on his mind, he decided to run when Valerie Snyder originally vacated her seat on the county board.

"As a former county commissioner, I have always had an interest in county government," he said. "I feel my background in business and some connections in Lansing I have built up over the years would be very helpful to Charlevoix County."

Haggard said some of his major concerns include the state of the economy and at least one of the main roads in the area.

"In the district I would like to represent, we have a couple of manufacturing facilities that are unfortunately vacant. I would like to get involved with the city and township (Charlevoix) to somehow see if we can get somebody to come in and take over those facilities to start hiring and putting some jobs in the community," he said.

"Another issue that I'm very concerned about is the major artery of the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road."

Haggard said he understands the road commission is doing all they can, but the highway is still in need of serious work.

"If elected, I would like to be able to work with the road commission and other appropriate agencies to do whatever possible to get Boyne City Road upgraded," he said. "And then, I want to basically work with all the department heads and the existing commissioners to put my experience and knowledge anywhere they need it."

Haggard has a degree in business and works for Haggard's Inc. which operates Haggard's Plumbing & Heating which currently employs nearly 30 people.

Haggard said people should vote for him because, as a native and year-round resident of Charlevoix, he knows this area's needs.

"Very seldom do I go away for the winter," he said. "I believe being in business and being an employer trying to work to meet the payroll are the greatest assets I have to fill the position on the county commission."

He added, "I'd like to remind people that I'm there to fill the position and do, to the best of my ability, what is going to be required to represent the people that not only vote for me but live in the district."

Candidate Boal said his program is about the economy, protecting the water and other natural resources in the area as well as regulating smoking in common areas at work sites.

"I will take a stand on important issues and turn down the political volume," he said. "I got the candidates to agree to use no lawn signs because they (signs) are ugly. Who wants to see them? I'd rather campaign on the issues than a lawn sign which only puts a name in your memory."

Boal said one of his best attributes is his high level of community involvement.

"My activity with This Is Our Town stopped Wal-Mart from coming to our township and I was thrilled to see 61 percent of the voters vote for Wal-Mart not to come back," he said. "I've done my part to bring business to the area by putting Charlevoix on page one of the Wall Street Journal at the end of December."

Boal is a self-employed lawyer specializing in labor law.

"I've represented working people all my life, written frequent guest commentaries for the (Petoskey) News-Review, worked for peace and I am the chairperson for the Charlevoix County Green Party," he said. "My family has had roots in this area for almost a century—in six years it will be a 100 years."

Boal said he believes people can make a difference and voters who support his values should vote for him.

"One thing I want to do with this campaign is energize the electorate. I want more people to become involved, that's how I've always worked," he said. "I've been in antiwar demonstrations, I have been involved with marching with the nurses at NMH (Northern Michigan Hospital) and I think it's important that people work not only as individuals but with like-minded individuals."

He added, "No matter how good a person is as an individual, you're not going to be as effective unless you work in groups and that's how I want my campaign to be."

diacy to be seen. And that would be the way I would work if I were elected."

According to Boal, he is constantly in the public arena visiting with officials or people about one issue or another.

"If elected, I would move to bring the smoking ordinance back before the commission," he said.

Boal said he is also working on a plan to possibly stimulate the economy without damaging the environment. And, Boal said, he believes in leaving a paper trail.

"I think it's important if the commission makes a decision one way or the other to be able to justify and explain it to people," he said. "You'll be able to know why I voted after major decisions with a memo."

bility to give back to the community.

"I'm a problem solver and I'm interested in working on county issues," she said.

Saltonstall said, she too, feels some of the big issues facing Charlevoix County include the loss of jobs and the condition of certain roads.

"I hope to work with the county and the townships to create more jobs by creating a marketing plan and recruiting clean businesses," she said. "I hope to work with planning and balanced growth to protect our environment and our resources."

She added, she hopes to talk directly to companies who have the potential to relocate their business to this county and create new jobs and more tax revenue.

"I think we can all work together on that, because even if a business isn't located in the City of Charlevoix, it would still create new consumers," she said.

Saltonstall said she knows health care is almost a cliché when it comes to candidates and their platforms, but it is a concern for her.

"The health department actually has created a program where people who don't have insurance can get basic health care," she said.

Saltonstall said she hopes to support this program so people without insurance can get to the doctor instead of waiting until their condition worsens.

"I'm prepared to spend the time that's necessary," she said. "And I believe that you have to ask questions and create a structure to solve problems — and that takes time and research and talking to people."

She added, "I'm good at that." Saltonstall has experience on the Charlevoix Public School Board. She is a mediator with Northern Community Mediation, is on the Hospice of Northwest Michigan board and is a volunteer for the American Red Cross.

"I'm a professional volunteer," she said. "I've also put a lot of time in on the building committee on the new Charlevoix library and I work in the garden club on community gardens."

Saltonstall said she would turn citizen's concerns into solutions by getting their input and working to implement a plan.

The upcoming candidate forum will be moderated by Mona Bergeon with the help of Charlevoix High School senior government students under the direction of their teacher, Anne Marie Conway.

For further information on the forum call the library at (231) 547-2651.

Car accident claims the life of Mark Baldwin

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is investigating a one-vehicle crash in Hayes Township that claimed the life of Mark D. Baldwin, a 20-year-old Charlevoix man.

The crash took place at approximately 3:15 a.m. Feb. 2 on Quarterline Road, an eighth of a mile east of Burgess Road.

The crash was reported to 911 dispatchers at 3:56 a.m. by the passenger in the vehicle, Justin P. Mosley, 20, of Boyne City, who called family members to report being involved in an accident on Maple Grove Road.

A second call from a neighbor placed the crash on Quarterline Road after the Mosley walked to that residence for help.

Baldwin was ejected and died at the scene.

The initial investigation revealed that Baldwin was driving a 1995 Dodge Neon eastbound on Quarterline Road.

After traveling through a stop signed intersection at high speed, the vehicle became air horn while descending a hill and crashed into trees on the north side of the road causing severe damage to the driver's side of the vehicle.

Charlevoix City Ambulance transported Mosley to Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The Charlevoix County Road Commission assisted in tree removal. The crash remains under investigation.

Rayder basketball team wins Winterfest game

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

After a relatively slow start this season, the Charlevoix Rayders are on a roll with seven straight wins in high school basketball.

In an eight-day span, the Rayders posted impressive wins over Grayling, 81-74, Benzie Central, 85-80 and Harbor Springs, 87-75.

The victory over Grayling Feb. 3 knocked the Vikings out of a first place tie with Traverse City St. Francis and moved the Rayders to within one game of second place and two games of the league lead.

On Friday night, the Rayders, who are 9-4 overall and 6-3 in the Lake Michigan Conference, will host St. Francis, 11-2 overall and 7-1 in the Lake Michigan Conference. St. Francis is ranked ninth in Class C by the Associated Press.

"It's a big week for us," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "We've really been coming together as a team lately. We're so much more balanced now. In the first six games of the season, we relied pretty much on (Matt) Kautz and (Mitch) Crandall."

Earlier in the season Grayling had man-handled Charlevoix, winning by 11, after a 40-15 half-time lead. This time, though, on the Rayders' home court, it was a different story.

In a run and gun contest with both teams utilizing full court pressure defense, Charlevoix's Dustin Dibble was the story early on. The sophomore scored the Rayders' first eight points of the game and a total of 10 in the first quarter.

Grayling's quickness was too much for Charlevoix early, however, and the Vikings led by as many as seven in the quarter and held a 21-16 advantage at the first buzzer. There was a silver lining for the Rayders as Grayling's junior twin towers, 6'8" Jim Boylan and 6'10" Mike Boylan each ended the quarter on the bench as they each picked up two fouls midway through the quarter.

"One of the real keys to the game was Dustin Dibble driving and taking it to their big guys early on," Haske said. "As a result they sat a lot and when they did play, they were more tentative."

Charlevoix chipped away at the Grayling advantage early in the second quarter. Finally the home crowd erupted with 1:39 minutes left in the half as a Mike DiMartino free throw put the Rayders ahead, 31-30. Seconds later, an Austin Wilhelm bucket gave Charlevoix a 33-31 advantage. The Vikings never led again in the game.

Wilhelm keyed a Rayder flurry at the end of the half as he scored six points in the last 70 seconds before intermission. In the spurt, Charlevoix outscored Grayling, 10-2 to leave the court with a 41-33 half-time lead.

The Rayders shot 71.5 percent on 10 of 14 shooting in the pivotal second period.

Defense was the order of the day for Charlevoix in the third quarter as after Grayling scored the first four points of the quarter to slice the lead to 41-37, the Vikings scored only one more field goal in the stanza.

Free throws allowed Grayling to play the Rayders even in the third period, leaving the score, 54-46 headed into the final quarter.

Kautz drained a three to start the fourth quarter, putting Charlevoix up 57-46. Grayling later cut the lead to seven at 70-63 but a Viking foul was followed by a technical foul. The Rayders then took advantage, scoring four straight points for a 74-63 lead with three-and-a-half minutes remaining.

New baseball coaches lead Rayder teams

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Allen
Telgenhof

You will spot two familiar faces in the dugout this spring as Allen Telgenhof takes over as the Charlevoix High School varsity baseball coach and Brian Certa assumes the junior varsity coaching position.

Telgenhof has coached T-ball, softball, little league, AAU baseball and has been varsity assistant coach for a year and coached junior varsity for the previous two years.

"I've been a fan of baseball since I was a kid...for as long as I remember," he said. "I like working with the kids and I love baseball."

Telgenhof said he looks forward to continuing working with the kids every day and teaching them the game because sports can offer kids so many things.

Despite the cold weather, training is already underway.

"We've already been doing a lot of stuff. We had a clinic last weekend and there are other clinics coming up in the next month," he said. "Practice starts March 14 with our first game is on April 10."

Telgenhof said he is excited about the upcoming season.

"As far as being on the field goes, like all coaches, I guess I hope to develop a winning program where year after year, we're competing for championships," he said. "As far as working with the kids, I hope to be a positive influence with them in their daily lives."

He added, "My dad was a varsity basketball coach so coaching has always been a part of my family."

Telgenhof said the most exciting thing about baseball for him was when he saw two games at the 1984 World Series in Detroit.

And, he said, with a trip the baseball team will take this spring, he hopes to instill some of that excitement in the kids he coaches.

"We're taking the kids to Notre Dame for a day while on a four or five day trip," he said. "We're also going to Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn. We'll see a couple college baseball games in both Notre Dame and Vanderbilt, as well as touring both of those schools and we'll get some baseball practice in while we're down there also."

Telgenhof said high school is such an important time in the life students and he wants to be there to help guide these young athletes through these vital years.

As the new junior varsity coach, Certa, who teaches construction technology at Charlevoix High School coached a total of 26 years in football and baseball is also no stranger to the baseball diamond or the kids.

"I've always enjoyed coaching," he said. "I feel sports (are) just as valuable as being in the classroom," he said. "You learn how to persevere and deal with adversity."

And, Certa said, while wins are nice, he just wants the kids to have fun.

he decided to continue.

County medical examiner speaks on bird flu

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Dr. Reed Freidinger, the Charlevoix County Medical Examiner, spoke on the bird flu at the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce weekly business breakfast Friday, Feb. 3 at Grey Gables.

According to Freidinger, a deadly outbreak of infectious disease of a global proportion is inevitable and just because bird flu doesn't strike this year, doesn't mean it won't become a problem in the near future.

"The Spanish flu started several years before 1918. It started in 1916 and disappeared for a few years," Freidinger said. "With Spanish Flu H1N1, you'd have these healthy young military recruits all huddled together on these military transport ships during World War I and they'd be shipped across the country. In one month, a quarter million people in the United States died, many of them 20 to 40 years old."

He added, "Healthy young men died in seven to nine days and the reason the young will die is that the young can mount a tremendous immunity and the young may not have this memory of a virus or any type of influenza in their immune system."

Freidinger said many of the men from rural areas hadn't been exposed to influenza and as a result their bodies weren't ready to deal with it.

"You'd get these farm boys in the army and they'd get an infection and they'd be overwhelmed by these defenses," he said. "And, they would have all this blood in their lungs — and they'd die."

In 1997 there were 18 cases of flu in Hong Kong which had a 33 percent mortality rate. A rate, Freidinger said, which was 11 times more deadly than the 1918 Spanish Flu.

"In 1997 they literally killed all the chickens and other fowl in Hong Kong they could get their hands on and hoped that they had eliminated this," he said. "It shows how we think we're such smart individuals. We think we're smarter than a virus. We think if we just kill all the birds in our presence, that that's the end of it. Well, we found out differently."

The same strain of flu reappeared in poultry in 2004 in eight Asian countries.

"About 100 people got infected in the winter of 2003-2004 — 50 percent of them died," he said. "It's about a 50 percent fatal infection and of course it gets you because of pneumonia."

Citizens shouldn't barricade themselves in their basement over fear of a pandemic just yet.

But, Freidinger said, "I personally have Tamiflu for all my family members because I think it's responsible to have this stockpiled if there is an influenza outbreak."

Freidinger said he saw a speaker on Oprah who said people shouldn't stockpile medication because it isn't fair to those who may need it when the time comes.

"But in this type of epidemic situation, it is almost every man for himself — it's almost a survivalist thing," he said. "They say there won't even be enough masks for doctors to wear to protect themselves or enough Tamiflu for health care workers. The person on Oprah said you can't expect health care workers to walk into the fire of influenza unless they have some type of protection."

Major shifts in viruses are called antigen shifts which are responsible for pandemics.

Freidinger said, "Basically bird flu is a bird virus that has escaped the birds and gotten into the humans. So, every time there is a pandemic, basically it's a bird virus that has become able to enter a human."

Freidinger said the biggest problem with these flu strains is how easily they are spread.

"The biggest problem now is, if you study the SARS virus that started in Hong Kong, he (the first known case) gave his virus to seven other people," he said. "If you look at where they went by plane, it was instantly spread throughout the world."

He added, "The other problem with influenza is that you are maximally contagious before you know you are sick."

Freidinger said the telltale symptoms of influenza are sudden and extreme muscle aches, high fever and cough.

For a pandemic or global infection to occur, Freidinger said, "We need a new virus that people haven't had much experience with. It has to be able to obviously infect humans and it has to have efficient human to human transmission. We make a big deal about the bird flu because it's so deadly."

"There have been no known human to human transmissions," he said. "But I wouldn't be big on feeding ducks right now."

Freidinger said Asians tend to live with their animals which causes these animal to human jumps by the diseases.

"To date, they have killed 100 million birds. And, they even tried poultry immunization. Despite that, much of the bird population is in an area where one-third of the world's population is located, so the next pandemic or global infection with influenza A is certain," he said. "We've had three in the last century — we will see some more."

He added, "People are just scared to death that, if this bird virus becomes efficiently transmitted in humans, it will be a major problem."

Production of a vaccine is about six months long and requires billions of chicken eggs to produce.

"We don't have any immunization," Freidinger said. "If they went all out for virus production, they could only do enough for about 10 percent of the world. The only thing they have now is a pill called Tamiflu and we don't know how effective that is."

Currently, Great Britain has enough Tamiflu stockpiled for approximately 25 percent of its population. The United States has enough stored for 1 percent

Mayor breaks tie to hire city HR director

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Jim Shull

In a tie vote broken by Mayor Norman Carlson, Charlevoix City Council accepted a proposal from city manager Mike Wiesner to hire a human resources director for the city.

At Monday night's council meeting Wiesner requested council hire current part time airport manager Jim Shull to fulfill the responsibilities of human resources manager as well.

Shull currently works about 16 hours per week at the airport. He has said the job requires about 20 hours a week.

Wiesner's proposal was to tack on 20 hours a week which Shull will dedicate to human resources issues like worker's compensation and health insurance.

He said his would reduce turnover in the airport manager's position, which Shull is the third to fill, and would help address holes in the city's human resources program.

The city currently employs 50 full-time staff members, 34 of which are affiliated with one of two unions as well as employing 75 seasonal workers. In 2005 the city issued 191 W-2s.

"The job's just not getting done," Wiesner said of human resources responsibilities.

These duties currently fall primarily on the shoulders of Wiesner's administrative assistant Linda Weller who has worked for the city since 1978 and city treasurer Rick Brandt.

However, Weller said this is taking up 25 percent of her time in the off season and about 50 percent of her time in the summer. She said her other responsibilities do not allow her to dedicate the time needed to human resources issues.

"I'm over my head, I need more help and the city deserves better than I can give it," Weller said. "Regretfully, this is a litigious society and the city deserves this protection."

Kim Swidorski, human resources director for Harbor Industries reviewed the city's situation and supported Wiesner's proposal.

"There are too many cooks in the kitchen," Swidorski said. "Dinner will get done but sometimes it will get messy."

One mess the city is trying to avoid with creation of this position is potential litigation like the whistle blower's case Charlevoix County lost in the spring of 2005 costing $1 million to settle.

"You can continue. The city won't fall apart if you don't fill this position. But remember this — you are running the risk of someone getting hurt when employees are doing things they aren't trained to do," Swidorski said.

Third ward councilman Sherin Chamberlain made the motion to accept the proposal. He was supported by first ward councilmen Bill Haggard and Bob Timmis.

In spite of these assurances from Swidorski and a lengthy memo from Weller explaining how she can no longer devote the time needed to these issues, three council members felt the new position isn't necessary.

"They want to cut services but create another administrative job so that we're top heavy at city hall," said third ward Charlevoix City Council member, Shirley Gibson. Gibson and second ward councilmen Gabe Campbell and Gene Beer voted against the creation of a human resources director.

The tie vote was broken by mayor Carlson.

The position was first pitched to council in September of 2005 when they referred the issue to the Charlevoix Citizens Advisory Committee. This group was created to review city spending and try to find ways to cut corners.

The citizens committee looked at the issue at its Jan. 18 meeting, made no formal recommendation but instead opted to refer it back to council.

Wiesner said he was hesitant to make this recommendation due to the expense involved but said the benefits will outweigh the cost.

Shull's proposed wage is $42,214 with fringe benefits costing $29,972.

Shull will now follow through with the human resources audit created by intern Kristen Hater in 2005 including the compiling information she collected for the employee handbook which was updated last in 1991. He will also draft 75 job descriptions, maintain employment records and coordinate hiring.

Columnist responds to letter writers

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

I received several e-mails this month, and am addressing them in this article.

David Beaudoin, grandson of Bert and Amy Beaudoin, asked if I would mention them in my writings of the 1940s. I thought I had written about them, but after checking my records, found I missed them.

I knew Bert, his wife and his son, Lyle. Lyle was the father of David and Joe. Bert owned Beaudoin's Standard Service, which was located at 1102 Bridge St., across the street from St. Mary's School. Many people from the Belvedere Club traded with Bert. Dale remembers one day a club member asked Bert when he should take his antifreeze out for the summer, which everyone did in those days. Bert replied, "Well, I take mine out on July 4, and put it back in on July 5." In his letter, David told how he and Joe worked for Bert as kids. They were paid $1 an hour. Bert often complained that they spent all the money that he gave them at the Dairy Queen across the street, which was very understandable, of course, with temptation so near. Thanks, David, for another glimpse at Bert.

Marilyn Dane wrote that her husband's grandfather was James Parsons. James and Eva Parsons bought the house at 206 Belvedere in 1906. This house is the third house east of May Street on the bluff above Belvedere. It is very well kept, much in its original condition. This home has been in their family for 100 years this year. It is treasured and enjoyed by their many descendants, consisting of two grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, 11 great, great-grandchildren, and 1 great, great, great-grandchild. Thank you for your interesting information Marilyn.

Ed O'Neill wrote that his parents lived at 204 Lewis Street. Ed and his wife now own a house in Charlevoix on Dixon Avenue. His parents are buried in Brookside Cemetery. He said his uncle, Marshall, now lives in the Upper Peninsula. It is interesting to see how many Charlevoixians move back to the area to enjoy what they knew as kids.

In 1940, Lillie Pfister was a widow (Adam) who lived at 105 Mason St. When Adam was alive, he had a Model T Ford popcorn wagon, and he sold popcorn on Bridge Street every summer. People were innovative then, and of course, there were no restrictions on peddling cats on the street.

Angus Phillips and his wife Anna lived at 303 Bridge St. He was a light-house keeper. Anna Mac Phillips was a beauty operator and lived at 413 Bridge St. Warren and Virginia Phillips lived at 303 Bridge St. He was a clerk at Martin Block Grocery. Ivan Phillips also lived there. He was a sailor. Laurel Phillips lived at 303 Bridge St. also.

Emil Pischner and his wife Delores lived at 316 Antrim St. Their children were Joan, Roger and Barry. He was a game warden. Harry Pischner and his wife, Leona, lived at 108 East Upright St. He was a sailor.

Forrest Plumm was superintendent of the Charlevoix Electric Light and Power plants. He and his wife Mabel, and children, Orlo, Robert, George and John lived at 111 Palmer St. Helen Plumm was a widow (Murley). Helen lived at 204 May St., with her children, Melvin and Calvin. Melvin told Dale that Murley was working under the Belvedere Hotel in the crawl space and was accidentally electrocuted. Melvin said it was in the middle of the depression, and the total funeral service bill was $60.

Elmer Poole and his wife Margaret L. lived at 107 East Garfield St. Dale said he watched Elmer paint a porch, and he was the fastest painter he had ever seen. Elmer and Margaret's children were Elmer E., Wilma, Patricia, William, Frances, Nancy, Margaret and Elaine. Margaret J. Poole was a widow (William). She lived at 407 Mason St.

Daniel Potter worked for the U.S. Bureau of Fisheries. He and his wife, Ethel, lived at 401 May St. Hazel Potter was a clerk at the Dahlquist Store, and also lived there. Harold Potter was a clerk at Fagin's Recreation. Their children were Kay and James.

Alonzo Powers and wife Ada, lived at 210 Belvedere Avenue. He was a plumber. Harry Powers and wife Abba, lived at 701 Grant Street. Donald W. Brown lived with them. Harry was a janitor at the Charlevoix Public School, and also drove the school bus in later years. James Powers also lived there. Leo Powers and wife, Alice lived at 102 Alice Street. He was a plumber.

George Priest and wife Rosella, lived at 201 Clifton St.

William H. Provost and wife, Sadie, lived on Mercer Boulevard. He was a farmer. Ken Provost, a student, and Mary Provost, a laborer, also lived there. Milburn Provost was a laborer, and lived at 301 Stover Rd.

Norwood planners unseat secretary

Norwood Township Planning Commission members Sadie Bartosik, Michelle Cyr, Wayne Wynkoop, Dave Leusink and Denny Way held a special meeting Feb. 8 to determine whether secretary Bartosik should be removed.

Norwood Township Planning Commission secretary Sadie Bartosik was removed for dereliction of duty last week. While assertions which appeared on the front page of the Feb. 9 edition of the Traverse City Record Eagle claim Bartosik was removed due to her opposition to Norwood Township supervisor, Wayne Wynkoop's proposed mining operation, planning commissioner's say that isn't the case.

Wynkoop said his support of Bartosik's removal is grounded in her failure to follow state and township regulations.

"We were very clear on why we were there and I knew that (the mining operation) would be an issue that would come up," he said. "People have a right to their own opinion, but the board still has to do their job."

A three to two vote removed Bartosik as secretary of the planning commission during the Feb. 8 special meeting after trustee Denny Way made allegations Bartosik had destroyed public documents, violated the open meetings act on two occasions and continually kept inaccurate meeting minutes.

Charlevoix Public Schools' employees clear check

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

The staff of Charlevoix Public Schools cleared the recent state-wide background check, with no felons or criminal sexual conduct offenders having surfaced.

While Charlevoix came out clean, the criminal background check of 200,000 employees in about 780 school districts state-wide revealed more than 4,000 criminal offenses of which 2,200 were felonies.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock received the local results from the recent district-wide initiative on Monday, Feb. 6.

"Nothing was found that would warrant us to do anything," Sturock said.

Student Safety Initiative legislation passed in October 2005 requires anyone employed with a Michigan school district prior to Jan. 1, 2006 to be fingerprinted by 2008.

During the hearing, Bartosik admitted to erasing audio recordings in the past, but only after taking notes from them.

"Any audio or video recording of the meeting is not to be destroyed. It is to be retained upon approval of the written minutes of the meeting to which they apply," Way said. "In two cases we have a clear violation of the retention schedule. You cannot arbitrarily go in and destroy that recording."

Way said the accuracy of meeting minutes is paramount, especially if a lawsuit is ever filed against the township. He said the destruction of public documents by itself is sufficient means for dismissal of a public figure.

"This all goes back to the minutes. They are the most important thing at these meetings," he said. "That's all we have to go on folks."

Way said Bartosik also neglected to post meeting times on several instances including the Oct. 6, 2005 meeting wherein the mistake resulted in an inability to hold a public hearing that day.

"It cost the applicant an extreme amount of money (and) inconvenience," Way said.

Bartosik said someone else was posting meeting times prior to that and she did not know she needed to post the meeting.

"What I find interesting is that you went around to the neighbors personally and hand delivered notices to the adjacent property owners of this applicant," Way said. "These seem like small and trivial things, but these things will get us in court."

Way said the meeting minutes, including notes which show an incorrect number of votes cast during a planning commission election, need to be corrected constantly.

"You know what, that may very well have been an illegal election," Way said.

Bartosik apologized for leaving the information out of the minutes.

"Sorry doesn't cut it anymore," Way said. "This is important stuff."

Bartosik's lawyer, Jeff Jocks of Traverse City, said perhaps the establishment of standards pertaining to the upkeep of records and a list of officer duties would prevent future mishaps.

Wynkoop said such standards are already in place. He then read from the township standards and practices text.

"The secretary shall be responsible for preparation of minutes, keeping of pertinent public records, delivering communications, petitions, reports and related materials," he said.

In an interview following the meeting, Bartosik said she was not surprised with the board's decision to remove her.

"I think the decision was made before the meeting," she said.

Way said, over the last three or four months he has seen some serious mistakes made by Bartosik.

"It's becoming very clear that the townships are under an extreme amount of scrutiny. It's very important that all business is conducted properly, which means following procedures," he said. "We are under a microscope. And anything done improperly could possibly be subject to litigation or financial strain."

Bartosik was also the previous Freedom of Information Act coordinator for the township, but tendered her resignation on Nov. 4, 2005 after violating both the Freedom of Information Act as well as the records retention act in October 2005.

The township was sued several years ago for a Freedom of Information Act violation by Doris Pearl, the clerk prior to Bartosik. The township ended up paying a $1,000 fine, something township officials do not want repeated.

"I was told that it could possibly lead to a lawsuit and we had already experienced a lawsuit with FOIA," she said. "I was gun-shy."

Way, Wynkoop and township clerk Michelle Cyr voted to remove Bartosik. Trustee David Leusink and Bartosik voted against the measure. Some members of the audience claimed Wynkoop was trying to stack the board in his favor.

Following a discussion with a representative of the Michigan Township Association, Bartosik said she feels two of the board's charges, inaccurate meeting minutes and improper posting of meeting times, weren't accurate.

Bartosik, who remains a trustee on the Norwood Township Board, is unsure whether she will appeal the commission's decision.

Appointment of a new planning commission secretary will be discussed at the commission's meeting to take place at 7 p.m. Feb. 20.

OPINIONS

Open government and special county meetings

Charlevoix County elected officials tout their belief in open government but recent actions by some, including a possible violation of a Freedom of Information Act request by the Courier and discussion of increased costs to information, show the only service being paid to maintaining open government is lip service.

Last week, the Charlevoix County Committee of the Whole canceled their regularly scheduled meeting and rescheduled a special meeting to discuss creating a county administrator's position. This person would oversee the full gamut of county operations.

We feel this is a big enough issue to be discussed at a regularly scheduled meeting. When meetings are coordinated outside of regularly arranged times — a routine occurrence for county officials — residents and others miss the boat.

In lieu of common special meetings at the county level, on Dec. 8, 2005 the Courier formally filed a Freedom of Information Act request with Jane Brannon, county clerk and Freedom of Information officer. The request was for any and all documents and information pertaining to regularly scheduled and special meetings of the Charlevoix County Commission and a group of sub committees including this Committee of the Whole.

The Freedom of Information Law pertains to the public's right to government records while its right arm, the Open Meetings Law concerns the public's right to attend meetings of public bodies. Both of these statutes are based upon a presumption of access.

"Please pass along any notice required to be posted by way of fax, e-mail or first-class mail," our request states.

EDITORIAL

The meeting was posted at the county building. But we received nothing. How are we supposed to do our job when public officials aren't doing theirs?

County officials did not adhere to our information request with this recent, special Committee of the Whole meeting. This left us wondering how many other meetings have slipped through the cracks. And why, in light of the county's myriad legal issues, are they pushing the envelope on this one?

Last week, the Charlevoix County Commission also discussed possible appointment of an attorney as Freedom of Information coordinator. In our opinion this would bring more charges and further diminish access to information.

Actions like this dampen public debate and diminish government accountability. Two offenses we take seriously.

Since its inception in 1966, government entities have tried to erode the Freedom of Information Act. But without it, scandals like the horrendous abuse of detainees at Abu Ghraib prison may never have come to light.

A common reason heard for tightening the clamps on information is maintaining homeland security. Well, this is hardly something I want to hear from Charlevoix County officials. I don't think your talk of hiring yet another high paid management position would constitute information terrorists could use to devise attacks.

Rather the public might attend, disagree, and foil your plans.

The nature of love in relation to St. Valentine

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

For more than 600 years we have been celebrating in some way the feast day of St. Valentine, but the way we celebrate has changed impressively.

It is not historically certain who St. Valentine was, but we owe him. Not until the 19th century did we begin to send or deliver special greeting cards. Such mementos are apparently the first of any kind of special holiday greeting card, predating birthday cards, Christmas cards and all the dozens of kinds that Hallmark offers us. The cards appear to have no connection to any of the possible martyred St. Valentines in church history, and are mostly a celebration of love or at least affection.

We know a good deal more about love today than we did in St. Valentine's time, but it remains to some degree a mystery. Maybe that's because we use the same word for so many different feelings. Other languages are not so spare. The Greeks had at least four words for love, indicating love of country, brotherly love, love of family relatives and erotic love. All those little Necco Candy Company hearts messages are not about love of country or relatives. "Be Mine" does not suggest brotherly love.

Recent research on humans and other animals provides insight into what we might call infatuation or love of the erotic sort, even though the word "love" is seldom used in scientific papers. It turns out that we more easily love people who smell good to us, people who are healthy and show signs of not having too many parasites. Fervent, lustful love seems to affect our brains in much the way that serious mental disorders do. To be "in love" is to some degree to be crazy, and it can be shut off or damped down by the same kinds of medications that are used to control troublesome mental states.

Twenty years ago, one of my students wrote a paper entitled, "Bucks of the crazy moon." She was a lifelong deer hunter and observer, and was writing about how white tail deer behave in the month of November. One only has to watch briefly to conclude that for much of that month, deer, both male and female, are something like crazy. And we humans most often behave like that for 12 months of every year.

Business in Charlevoix

I am writing in regards to the Bill Dupont letter (which appeared on page 5 of the Feb. 1 edition of the Courier) three weeks ago. I am a native of Charlevoix of 67 years. Charlevoix is a resort town and always will be. As for downtown there is nothing there but the Town House, Central Drugs and Carey's Shoes. The only thing is Thursday night concerts to talk with the people of town and the new people want to change that.

Charlevoix, as I remember it, is Oleson's was Hookers barn with horses and cows in town. Wood Brothers Hardware is now a T-shirt shop, Brown Motors is now three or four gift shops, Shourter's Drug is now Subway, 5 and 10 is a dress shop, Staley Hardware is a T-shirt shop, Fairbanks Bakery is a T-shirt shop and John Slezacek boot repair is a Real Estate shop.

There are two places on the harbor, Ward Brothers Charter Boats Inc. and John Cross Fisheries. The rest of the harbor has changed to condos.

As to downtown Charlevoix for a lifetime resident there is not much left of town, so we go to Petoskey or Traverse City. As for Wal-Mart I hope it comes to Atwood.

The Americanism Manual

The American Legion believes in 100 percent Americanism. In recognition of February as Americanism month I'd like to pull from the "Americanism Manual" printed by the American Legion.

"The characteristic which distinguishes our form of government from others is the recognition of the truth that the inherent and fundamental rights of men are derived from God and not from governments, dictators or majorities," the book's authors state.

These unalienable rights, which are the gifts of man from his creator are freedom of worship, freedom of speech and press, freedom of assembly, freedom to work in such occupation as the experience, training and qualifications of man may enable him to secure and hold, freedom to enjoy the fruits of his work, which means the protection of property rights and the right to pursue his happiness so long as he does not harm others in the pursuit of this happiness. Upon these basic principles, our forefathers established the whole structure of our form of government.

"Americanism is love of America; loyalty to her institutions as the best yet devised by man to secure life, liberty, individual dignity, and happiness; and the willingness to defend our country and flag against all enemies, foreign and domestic," the authors further state.

"Americanism is an ideal of loyal patriotism, religious tolerance, righteous freedom, fearless courage, honest integrity, abiding faith in the commanding destiny of the United States, and a faithless love for the principles, which led our forefathers to found this country. The ideals of government as set forth in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. It is respect for, and ready obedience to the duly constituted authority and the laws of the land. It is freedom without license, religion without bigotry, charity without bias, and a desire to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

Two great Americans birthdays we celebrate this month are those of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, just to name a few. These great patriotic presidents believed 100 percent in Americanism.

Here is another American thing to keep doing in our schools and government meetings. The pledge to the flag.

Women's Winter Tour Feb. 25 at Castle Farms

Strap on your boots and join Charlevoix's biggest winter party for ladies.

The National Subaru Women's Winter Tour is the largest, most unconventional women's winter event in the United States and it is making its third annual return to Charlevoix on Feb. 25.

The Women's Winter Tour includes cross country ski and snowshoe events. This year the party has moved to Castle Farms. The enchanting grounds of the restored, historic farm create a fairy tale setting for the women who participate.

The Women's Winter Tour encourages participants to make a day of the event by sticking around after skiing and snowshoeing for Castle Farms' wine festival.

The celebration features wines from area vineyards, gourmet cuisine, strolling musicians and a night of live music from a dynamic local band. Women's Winter Tour participants will be offered a discount for the festivities at Castle Farms.

The Charlevoix Women's Winter Tour will benefit the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan, Inc., which provides services to women and children who are survivors of domestic abuse.

The original purpose of the Women's Winter Tour is to inspire women of all shapes and sizes to get excited about cross country skiing and snowshoeing. The tour gives women the confidence to get outside and get active in the security of a noncompetitive environment.

For more information on the event and to learn how you can receive a discounted registration fee for the 2006 National Subaru Women's Winter Tour in Charlevoix, visit www.womenswintertour.com.

CPI to expand manufacturing operations

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

As manufacturing jobs continue to leave Michigan, a local manufacturer is planning an expansion that may add about 30 new full-time jobs in Charlevoix.

"This is certainly good news as we look at the state of general manufacturing in Michigan," Charlevoix City Manager, Mike Wiesner, states in a Jan. 30 memo to city council on the proposed project.

Charlevoix City Council will consider a development plan amendment at CPI Products Inc., located at 12501 Taylor Road in Charlevoix industrial park to expand the company's manufacturing area by 11,700 square feet. The project will also include construction of a 3,040 square foot covered parking area. It will be constructed with a similar exterior look to pole buildings.

Council will consider the amendment at a special meeting scheduled to take place at 5:30 p.m. on March 1.

"As always, with the premium we place on industrial jobs, we will be working with them to the best of our ability to develop a timetable suitable to them," Wiesner states in the memo.

According to Casey House, manufacturing and engineering manager for CPI Products, the company has acquired new business and the expansion will make way for manufacturing space to produce new product lines.

"We're really excited. There's a mass exodus of manufacturing companies in Michigan and we have an opportunity to expand," House said.

The project will include the purchase of new equipment. The total cost is expected to reach about $1 million.

The Charlevoix plant has been in operation for 19 years and is the only manufacturing facility for CPI Products which is a division of the global company, Destaco.

At the local site they make automation tooling. House explained this to be the arms of robots that pick up and move automotive components like hoods, doors and body panels.

The company currently employs about 40 people at its sales and en-

As community president, Cuffaro will lead the bank's local market leadership team for consumer and commercial banking and wealth management services, as well as manage community relationships, events, and contributions.

"Chris was the obvious choice for the all-important position of community president," said William R. Hartman, Citizens Bank chairman, president and chief executive officer. "Chris has a wealth of experience serving clients with their banking needs. He knows how to build relationships, connect people with the banking specialists they require, and serve the community."

Cuffaro said the position of community president provides local residents with a clear understanding of the bank's structure.

"I am the person our clients can contact when decisions have to be made, to resolve issues, and to assist our local community as we work together to make this area an even greater place to live, work, and raise our families,"

he said.

Cuffaro comes to Citizens Bank from Irwin Union Bank in Traverse City, where he served as vice-president of treasury management services from 2001 to 2005. He was responsible for deposit growth, branch security and compliance in the Traverse City office, and managed existing and potential client relationships.

Cuffaro had previously served as cash management sales analyst at Old Kent Bank in northern Michigan from 1996 to 2001. He had previously served as assistant branch manager at Old Kent Bank from 1991 to 1996.

Cuffaro holds the following certifications: Certified Treasury Professional Accreditation (CTP), Association for Financial Professionals; Accredited ACH Professional Accreditation (AAP), National Automated Clearing House Association.

County commission candidate forum

First district seat to be decided at the Feb. 28 election

By BENJAMIN GOHS Staff writer

Sunday, Feb. 12 the Friends of the Library hosted a forum for three candidates vying for the First District Charlevoix County Commission seat.

At the forum, Green Party candidate Ellis Boal, unaffiliated candidate Connie Saltonstall and Republican Party candidate John Haggard answered questions they were given in advance, as well as questions from audience members.

Though Boal doesn't always agree with the commissioner's decisions, he said, "In general the county, I feel, is in good financial shape."

"The county has an $11 million-plus budget with over 60 funds to be managed," Saltonstall said. "My job as a commissioner is to scrutinize information we get and to ask questions and make the decisions necessary to ensure the county runs the way it needs to."

Haggard said a few of the departments he looks forward to working with are law enforcement, the road commission and the commission on aging to ensure their needs are met.

"The county is in very good financial condition mainly because of past commissioners that established what I call the tax revolving fund that allows the county to pay each unit of government 100 percent of their taxes," Haggard said.

Saltonstall said her interest in politics and public service pushed her to run for this office.

"Government is only as good as the people willing to be involved with it," she said.

According to Saltonstall, Charlevoix has lost nearly 1,200 jobs in the last five years.

"We need to create a marketing plan which will generate clean businesses and tax revenue," she said.

Haggard said as a born and raised Charlevoix citizen, he has been a previous county commissioner who once again has time to work in the operation of the county.

"We need to increase jobs in the county, but a way to do that is to promote tourism," he said.

Boal said he is running to "protect Charlevoix's natural resources, protect health by limiting smoking, focus on policies, not personalities and instant runoff voting to ensure majority elections."

"I am a candidate who does his homework," he said. "If elected, I will maintain my Web site and continue to post positions particularly explaining on how I intend to vote or how I did vote on issues before the commission."

Asked whether the county needs a manager or executive director, Haggard said, "No."

"I could anticipate spending something in the neighborhood, after you figure in an office and secretary and everything, of $150,000 or $200,000 a year, plus all the benefits that go along with it," he said. "But, a human resource person I'm willing to look into."

Boal said, "I will study it and decide later."

Saltonstall said she believes the county should have a manager.

"The county has an $11 million-plus budget and I believe it needs a trained person to manage that budget on a daily basis," she said. "According to the consultant it will pay for itself in eliminating waste and duplication and improving efficiency."

All three candidates agreed that Boyne City-Charlevoix Road is in need of repair.

Saltonstall said Boyne City-Charlevoix Road will be her first priority while working to ensure Big Rock Point becomes a public park is a close second.

Haggard said due to his political connections it would be a benefit to voters to vote for him.

"I've instituted a dialogue with our state representative to possibly take M-75 and extend it into Charlevoix," he said. "Making it not a county road, but a state trunk line."

Haggard said if it is made a state road, the state would be forced to bring it up to code and then the county would be responsible for maintaining it.

And, he said, he worked for the past five years to help ensure Big Rock Point can be made into a park.

Boal said he agreed with Saltonstall and Haggard that the road is dangerous.

"It makes me wonder if, for right now, signs shouldn't be put up on the theory of openness in government," he said.

And, while Saltonstall and Boal are in favor of workplace smoking regulations for private businesses, Haggard said he would most likely vote against it if it came up.

The election for First District County Commissioner will occur from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., Feb. 28 in Hayes and Bay townships as well as on the north sides of Charlevoix Township and the City of Charlevoix.

Equalization Ratios, as shown, are the percentages of assessed valuations to true cash value as determined by a survey of individual assessments. The Multipliers are those necessary to bring the Ratios to the required 50% of estimated true cash value. The Multipliers, as shown are tentative and subject to change as the result of possible adjustments by individual assessing officers. Assuming that no adjustments are made, the Multiplier may be applied to each individual valuation.

Beaver Island Preservation Association faces lawsuit

A non-profit group driving construction of a community center in downtown St. James on Beaver Island has come under fire.

In January, Cox Medendorp Olson Architects of Kent County filed a lawsuit in Charlevoix County Circuit Court against the Preservation Association of Beaver Island, the non-profit group working to build the center.

The architectural firm claims the association owes them over $135,000 for services it rendered related to construction of the center.

"This is a glitch in the road but the board won't allow this to shut us down," said Judy Lanier-Gallagher, president of the Preservation Association of Beaver Island.

According to the complaint filed by attorneys for Cox Medendorp, the architectural firm contracted with the association in July 2003 "to provide improvements to the property."

Thus far the association has paid the firm $68,820.

The last day Cox Medendorp contractors provided services for the project was Jan. 14, 2005. The company recorded a claim of lien with the Charlevoix County Register of Deeds office, three days later, on Jan. 17, 2005 for $135,329.99.

In lieu of this alleged outstanding bill, attorneys for Cox Medendorp have asked 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas to enter a judgment in their client's favor granting them the money allegedly owed and other costs, as well as an order for a foreclosure sale of the property with proceeds from the sale being used to pay the debt.

Architects claim preservation group owes over $135,000

However, Lanier-Gallagher said the association doesn't owe the firm money. She explained that the association hired Cox Medendorp to design a building with defined specifications.

"We're moving ahead. We think we're standing on firm ground."

Judy Lanier-Gallagher,
President of the Beaver Island Preservation Association

She said the board fired the firm last winter when its architects produced a design that was three times the size of what the group stated in its contract as the building's desired dimensions.

She said in the Cox Medendorp design, the association's established $1.4 million price tag had grown to over $3.4 million.

"We are confident our dismissal of them was appropriate. They didn't follow the contract in multiple ways," Lanier-Gallagher said.

The 14-member association board of directors hired Slocum and Associates of Kalamazoo in March 2005 to handle the scaled back redesign.

The new 9,000 square-foot community center is being built on the property where Dockside Market used to stand, across from the Beaver Island Boat Company dock off Main Street. It will include three main areas. The first is a welcoming center that will include the Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce, and a lobby area. The second is a youth and senior center. The third is an event center.

The total cost of the project is $2 million. So far, the group has raised $1.5 million.

Framing of the building started in October and is expected to be complete in March.

Construction at the site was underway early this week in spite of the recently filed suit. And, according to Lanier-Gallagher, progress won't be disrupted.

"We're moving ahead. We think we're standing on firm ground," she said.

This week, attorneys for the two parties began the process of scheduling arbitration.

Sheriff's department awarded $60,000 grant for rescue boat

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

With nearly $5 million in requests entered and only $1 million in revenue to disperse, the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians recently allotted $60,000 to the Charlevoix County Sheriff Department for a rescue boat.

According to tribal counselor, Sandra Witherspoon, the tribe gives 2 percent of its electronic gaming funds away each year in the form of grants to important community projects.

"We just want to save lives," Witherspoon said.

The $60,000 will be used for a Zodiac brand boat stationed on Beaver Island for search and rescue operations.

The year-round target population of Beaver Island is 150 children, 400 adults and an approximate summer population of 3,500.

According to the application, the existing rescue vehicle is a 17-foot Boston Whaler which is suitable for use in St. James Harbor and Lake Michigan, but only during calm seas.

Charlevoix County Deputy Sheriff, Jim Campbell, who is stationed on Beaver Island, said, "I have been on the island for three years and we have done at least two to three rescues each year."

Campbell said at least four of those were cold water rescues and at least one person had hypothermia.

"This is a benefit to us because we will be able to get to them (the stranded) faster," Campbell said. "We had one rescue that was halfway to the U.P. (Upper Peninsula)."

"In 2004, the sheriff's Beaver Island marine patrol rescued seven persons in three separate events," Campbell stated in his application for the grant. "Two events in St. James Harbor and one in Lake Michigan at the south end of High Island. In 2005, we rescued four persons in Lake Michigan between Beaver and Garden islands and assisted in the recovery of a drowning victim off the north end of Beaver Island. The sheriff's office also responded to several Coast Guard generated calls during this time."

He added, "It'll give us a lot of range and a lot of speed that we didn't have before."

Charlevoix County Undersheriff, Don Schneider said he wanted to personally thank Witherspoon and the other members of the tribe for their contribution to the sheriff's department.

Campbell said the drowning which occurred in Lake Michigan on one of the islands near Beaver Island prompted the department to pursue the grant.

The nearest Coast Guard station to Beaver Island with rescue capabilities is 32 miles and located in Charlevoix.

The 24-foot long rescue boat holds up to 22 people and has the capability of two, 90 horse power motors.

According to the Zodiac technical data sheet provided on the boat proposed for purchase, the Zodiac SRMN was, "originally built for military use so their hulls are reinforced to take the maximum g-forces that are applied when fully laden and powered at maximum speed."

CHS performing arts group miss state contest qualification

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

A group of over 40 students from the performing arts program at Charlevoix High School missed qualifying for the state competition by just two points.

"I think they're disappointed. They've worked hard but they aren't disappointed in what they produced that day. They did a marvelous job. They can't be unhappy with their performance," said Connie Ford, director of the high school's performing arts program.

The students finished third, two points behind second place Feb. 11 at the regional competition. The two schools who successfully qualified for state competition to take place Feb. 17 and 18 in Ann Arbor are Olivet High School and Pigeon Laker High School.

Ford was pleased with the students' performance this past weekend at John Glen High School in Bay City.

"I wouldn't change anything. It was the luck of the draw as far as judges and what they were looking for. Our tech side got perfect scores," Ford said.

At the regional contest, the group performed a shortened version, just under 45 minutes, of their ensemble musical, Isle of Tears. The script is the second written by Ford. It was completed in 1997 with help from her former longtime assistant, Sulane Hamilton. Her first was Homeland written and performed in 1994 and presented again in 2002.

Ford has been director of the school's performing arts program since 1968. Students last performed Isle of Tears in 1998.

Isle of Tears includes various tales of European immigrants with different reasons for emigrating to the United States.

"I wanted to do this show again. You get to the point where you need something different for the kids," Ford said.

The group qualified for regional competition at districts which took place Jan. 28 in Standish. At that contest, judges gave their performance a rating of 2 on a 4-point scale with 1 being the highest.

"They had a good performance. There were a couple of glitches and the judges caught them," Ford said.

She said the district show was the first time the group performed Isle of Tears in front of an audience.

Charlevoix High School performing arts students competed at regionals Feb. 11 in Bay City. The group missed qualifying for the state title by two points.

At the district competition, four students received special honors and the group was recognized as a whole. Michelle Lemond, Nicole Mackowiak, Julie Neider and Sarah Ruhlman each received excellence in acting honors. The group was recognized for superior set design and excellence for props. The set includes a ship and bunk beds and the props include miscellaneous items like passports, blankets and books.

The students have been practicing for weeks and dedicated countless hours to the show.

Mackowiak, a junior at Charlevoix High School who has been in performing arts for three years, said the time commitment to the program makes time management a priority for students involved.

"I try and give it my all and still keep up with school work. It's tough but if you have the dedication you can do it," she said.

The students will present Isle of Tears at their winter performances to take place at 7 p.m. Feb. 25 and at 2 p.m. Feb. 26 in the auditorium at Charlevoix High School. A complete cast live and show overview will appear in next week's Courier.

Rayders fall to Ramblers in tough match

By SCOTT RICHARDS
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders volleyball team will try to rebound from this week's disappointing loss.

The Rayders returned to league play this Monday, Feb. 13, against the Ramblers of Boyne City at home after failing to advance to bracket play at the Suttons Bay Invitational on Saturday Feb. 11.

"It's hard to feel positive about it," said coach Liz Grunch.

Charlevoix went 4 and 2 against opponents at the invitational but did not advance into the final round of play.

After not placing at the tournament they were home against the Ramblers whom they beat in a lop sided match earlier in the season at Boyne.

Boyne City coach Casie Parker was positive about their chances against Charlevoix on Monday.

"I feel ready for this, I think our team is ready," Parker said.

Boyne has also had some up and down play this year.

Parker added, "We split some games with some very tough teams like Rogers City, and then lost to teams that have only won five games all year."

Boyne took the first two games against the Rayders by a score of 25-18 and 25-23 but Charlevoix came from behind to take the third by the close score of 26-24 and then lost a heart breaker in the fourth game 25-27.

"We got down a couple of games and it's very hard to come back from that," Grunch said. "The team played so hard, it was just disappointing."

The totals for the match were Sally Haselschwardt with 19 kills; Bethany Pearson with 12 digs and seven blocks; Ashlie Bradley with seven kills; Robyn Petzak with 12 digs; and Zita Anderson with 36 assists.

Charlevoix is now 19-15-7 overall. The team is 6-3 in the Lake Michigan Conference which puts them in second place behind Kalkaska. Charlevoix has only four more games before district play begins on March 4.

Rayder hoops break winning streak

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

A season of ups and downs continued for the Rayders as Charlevoix lost two games last week, falling to Petoskey, 64-36 and to Traverse City St. Francis, 85-73.

The Rayders who are 9-6 overall and 7-4 in the Lake Michigan Conference, opened the season 2-4, and then won seven straight games before dropping these last two.

"We lost to two very good teams," coach Keith Haske said. "You just think that at home maybe you can win those games. I am disappointed with where we are defensively; we are not where we need to be."

In the first half, Charlevoix gave ninth-ranked St. Francis all it could handle. Although the Gladiators led by as many as six in the first quarter, a put back by Mitchell Crandall cut the lead to two at 18-16 as time expired in the period. Crandall scored nine in the first stanza.

A Matt Kautz three-pointer to open the second quarter gave the Rayders a 19-18 lead. It would prove to be one of only two leads Charlevoix held in the entire game. St. Francis outscored the Rayders, 21-12 over the next five minutes to take a 39-31 lead with just over a minute to play in the half.

Charlevoix wouldn't go away, however, scoring six straight points to end the half on a Ty Haske three-point play, a Mike DiMartino free throw and an Austin Wilhelm jumper.

Kautz hit yet another three-pointer to open the scoring in the second half to give the Rayders their final lead of the night at 40-39. St. Francis was under-terred, going on a 9-0 run to re-establish an eight point lead at 48-40. Crandall and Dan Swenor hit back-to-back threes to cut the lead again to two at 48-46 with 5:25 minutes left in the quarter.

The Gladiators closed out the quarter with a 14-4 run to take a 12-point lead after three quarters of play. St. Francis opened the fourth quarter with another impressive run, outscoring the Rayders, 8-2 in a minute-and-a-half to break the game open with a 68-52 advantage.

Charlevoix fought back gamely but could get no closer than eight, at 76-68, the rest of the way.

Kautz led the Rayders with 29 points. Crandall had 19 points and 12 rebounds. Dustin Dibble finished with 16 points, eight rebounds and four assists.

DiMartino contributed eight rebounds and Ty Haske had five assists.

"They (St. Francis) beat us up inside. We didn't have an answer defending in there," Haske commented. "We didn't shoot the ball well either and against a good team like that, you have to shoot well to win."

Earlier in the week, the Rayders suffered one of their worst setbacks in recent memory at the hands of non-conference rival Petoskey.

The Northmen led only 14-10 after the first quarter and 30-20 at the half, but pulled away to a 52-34 lead after three periods.

Dibble was the leading scorer for Charlevoix with 17 points. Crandall scored nine.

"I was real disappointed (with the loss)," Haske said. "Coming off a big win over Grayling, I thought maybe we had this 'play hard for 32 minutes' thing down. I don't know why it happened but again we were beat up in the paint and couldn't defend."

The Rayders did not play on Tuesday, Feb. 14 but return to action at Boyne City on Friday, Feb. 17.

Charlevoix grapplers head into districts plagued by injuries

Craig Golovich

The Charlevoix Rayder wrestlers hosted Grayling and Elk Rapids at home on Thursday, Feb. 9 finishing 1-1.

Charlevoix won over Elk Rapids 56-15 and fell to Grayling 35-48.

According to Charlevoix head coach Craig Golovich, a number of injuries have put some key wrestlers out for the season, but have also allowed for the younger guys to see mat time.

During this dual meet, freshman Nic Mailloux was named Wrestler of the Week after pinning both his opponents in the 125 weight class. He pinned his Elk Rapids opponent in 52 seconds and his Grayling opponent in 2:54 minutes.

On Saturday, Feb. 11 Charlevoix placed third out of six teams competing in the Petoskey Invitational. Kalkaska finished in first with a perfect 5-0. Petoskey's B team finished in second going 4-1. Charlevoix took third with a score of 2-2.

Charlevoix was followed by Manecelona in fourth, Frankfort in fifth and Kingsley in sixth.

Charlevoix won 54-30 over Manecelona and 48-30 over Frankfort. Charlevoix fell to Kalkaska 35-45 and fell shy one point to Petoskey B 36-37. Joey Left was named Wrestler of the Week for his matches in the day's tournament.

Fastest pins for the Rayders were scored by Jed Daman against Kalkaska with a 16-second pin, Mat Golovich against Kalkaska with a 34 second pin and Woody Nitehman against Frankfort with a 35 second pin.

Joey Left, Travis Burke and Jeff Golovich all scored pins in under a minute.

Charlevoix travels to Rudyard on Thursday, Feb. 16 for Team Districts against Rudyard and St. Ignace and then to Rogers City for Individual Districts on Saturday, Feb. 18.

Charlevoix teachers pass background check

John Sturock

The initiative kicked off with this initial check which cross referenced the state police registry with the school registry using identifiers like name, date of birth and Social Security number. The law requires that any sex offenders be fired immediately and those with felonies be reviewed by school boards for possible dismissal.

The results of the check were sent to the Michigan Department of Education. Shortly thereafter, the Detroit News issued a Freedom of Information Act request with the department requesting all reports be released.

The Michigan Education Association was awarded an injunction by the Ingham County Circuit Court to halt the release of reports.

Sturock supports this attempt to bar the reports from the public record. He said information they contain needs to be verified first.

On Feb. 7 the Michigan Education Association, the state's largest teacher's union, called on

"Nothing was found that would warrant us to do anything."

lawmakers to void the results of the background checks due to alleged errors.

These same reports were released to each individual school district all of whom have received Freedom of Information Act requests by the Detroit News.

Sturock said he has filed for an extension, as the Michigan Education Association is in court fighting to keep the reports closed.

"This puts school districts in a precarious position," he said.

While Sturock doesn't argue against the aim of the legislation, protecting Michigan students, he did say it has many kinks to work out.

"They did a poor job drafting it. They did it in a really fast manner and didn't look at the ins and outs," he said.

While the status of the documents as open or closed to the public is one such kink, cost is another.

School districts across the state are grappling with budget problems. In Charlevoix, employees have been fingerprinted for the past seven years. Under the new legislation those instructors have to have it done again — 150 staff members will undergo this round of fingerprinting costing $75 each for a total of over $11,000.

"Who is going to pay for this," Sturock said.

Legislators have said the cost will fall on each individual school district. But according to the state's Headlee Amendment, if the state mandates it, the state pays for it.

This cost issue has been passed on to the Michigan Attorney General's office. An opinion has not been released.

The legislation was enacted in response to a number of issues facing public school across the state including sex offenders working in the school system.

This reality struck a local tone in the summer of 2005 when Arthur Kirk was arrested by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office on multiple counts of felony weapons charges.

At the time of his arrest he was a contract worker coordinating volunteer operations for AmeriCorps through the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District.

In 2000 and 2001 he was an AmeriCorps volunteer at Charlevoix Middle School and in 2002 and 2003, though not a staff member of Camp Daggett, he was a volunteer counselor there.

Law enforcement were tipped off when he applied for a concealed weapons permit in late May 2005 and the FBI and Michigan State Police background checks revealed several prior arrests and convictions including felonious assault and sex offenses ranging from 1964 to 1980 in Oakland and Macomb counties, and at least three prior sex offense convictions all under an alias name, Arthur Kirkeby.

Kirk's last conviction, for which he was sentenced to 25 years in prison, was for the second offense of first degree criminal sexual conduct with an 8-year-old boy.

Kirk/Kirkeby isn't included on the state's Public Sex Offender Registry because his convictions came through prior to 1995, exempting him from registration.

Charlevoix digs out after storm

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Charlevoix resident Jan McKay makes her way home from Oleson's in blizzard conditions Feb. 18. She was offered a ride but chose to soak in the wintry experience. Just over 8 inches of snow fell during last week's snow storm.

Old Man Winter awoke from his slumber late last week to bring a little over 9 inches of snow to Charlevoix over a four-day period.

"Our last storm was in December. January was quiet — which is not the norm," said Pat Harmon, manager of the Charlevoix County Road Commission.

To date, 74.6 inches of snow has fallen in Charlevoix. This season's total accumulation is on par with the 2004-2005 winter season. At this time last year, the local snowfall total was 74.5 inches.

According to readings at Charlevoix's water and wastewater treatment plants the heaviest cumulus of snow during this most recent storm fell on Thursday, Feb. 16. Jim Caldwell, water and wastewater treatment plant supervisor, reported 8 inches of snow fell that day marking the first snow storm of 8 inches or more this winter.

Harmon said his crew, which includes 22 plow trucks, worked around the clock to keep ahead of the snow. And added that forecasted wind gusts that did not make an appearance made tackling the storm a little easier.

"What really saved us was we didn't get the 50 mph winds they were predicting," he said.

The National Weather Service reported wind gusts reached their 37 mph peak at 3 a.m. Feb. 17.

In lieu of the wintry weather, Vic Patrick, Chairman of the Charlevoix County Commission called a snow day on Friday, Feb. 17 for employees at the Charlevoix County Building. He said after discussing conditions with Harmon and Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater, he made the decision to call off the work day.

"If it saved one person it was well worth it," Patrick said.

The over 100 employees who were off that day will be paid.

Three run for county commission Feb. 28

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Charlevoix must vote at City Hall located at 210 State Street in Charlevoix.

Voters can cast ballots for the First District Charlevoix County Commission seat from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 28.

Registered voters living in Hayes and Bay townships as well as on the north side of Charlevoix Township and the City of Charlevoix are eligible to participate.

The three candidates in the race are Green Party candidate Ellis Boal, unaffiliated candidate Connie Saltonstall and Republican Party candidate John Haggard.

Residents of Hayes Township must vote at the Hayes Township Hall located at 09195 Old U.S. 31 North in Charlevoix. Residents of Bay Township must vote at the Bay Township Hall located at 05045 Boyne City Road in Boyne City. People living on the north side of Charlevoix Township must vote at the Charlevoix Township Hall located at 12491 Waller Road in Charlevoix. Residents of the north side of the City of Boal, 60, is a self-employed lawyer specializing in labor law. He said some of his main concerns are to protect the water and other natural resources in the area, leave

Ellis Boal

Boal was also a member of the This Is Our Town group, who helped prevent Wal-Mart from building a store in the Charlevoix area.

Boal said, before he can give an answer as to whether the Charlevoix County requires an executive or manager, he must first study the issue.

Haggard, 65, has a background in business. He heads Haggard's Inc, which operates Haggard's Plumbing & Heating. And is a former county commissioner.

The main issues Haggard sees facing the county are the condition of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road and the possibility of getting the State of Michigan involved, getting the Big Rock Point property into the State of Michigan park system and working to meet the needs of seniors.

John Haggard

Haggard does not support the idea of a county manager or executive director due in part to the potential high cost. And, he said, he would most likely vote against a workplace smoking ban.

Haggard said he hopes all the voters who are able to vote do so and if anyone needs a ride to a polling place, just call him and he will oblige.

Saltonstall, 60, considers herself a professional volunteer and has experience on the Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education. She is a mediator with Northern Community Mediation and is on the Hospice of Northwest Michigan board of directors. She also does work for the American Red Cross.

Connie Saltonstall

Saltonstall said improvements to Boyne City-Charlevoix Road will be her first priority while working to ensure Big Rock Point becomes a public park is a close second.

She hopes to create a marketing plan to generate clean businesses and tax revenue for Charlevoix. She also said she would support a workplace smoking ban.

Saltonstall supports the idea of hiring someone to manage the budget on a daily basis.

Charlevoix Township resident faces multi-count indictment

A Charlevoix man who sparked concerns about criminal background checks for school workers was recently sentenced in Charlevoix County Circuit Court and was subsequently arrested on a multi-count federal indictment.

Arthur Kirk

in possession of firearms and habitual felon-fourth offense.

Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court

Correction

Due to an editing error it was stated in the article entitled, "Norwood planners unseat secretary," which appeared on page 1 of the Feb. 15 edition of the Charlevoix Courier that the Norwood Township Planning Commission removed secretary Sadie Bartosik from her post. The Norwood Township Board voted to remove her.

Judge Richard Pajtas sentenced Kirk to 365 days in jail with credit for 151 days served while awaiting trial. He will serve 180 days in jail as well as 12 months probation and was ordered to pay $530 in fines and costs.

In December 2005 Kirk pleaded guilty to one count each of felon in possession of a firearm and providing false information on a concealed weapons permit application. While both are felony charges the state's sentencing guidelines preclude Judge Pajtas from imposing longer sentences. In exchange for the guilty pleas, three perjury charges were dismissed.

Kirk was arrested following the sentencing by deputies from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office on a multi-count Federal Grand Jury indictment from the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Michigan.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater, Kirk was turned over to the U.S. Marshal's Service Feb.

7 and taken to Grand Rapids.

In October 2005 a federal grand jury issued a three-count indictment against Kirk accusing him of falsifying information on an application for a federally funded program. The charges are punishable by up to five years in prison.

Kirk was originally arrested by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office this past summer on multiple counts of felony weapons charges.

At the time of his arrest he was a contract worker coordinating volunteer operations for AmeriCorps through the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District.

In 2000 and 2001 he was an AmeriCorps volunteer at Charlevoix Middle School and in 2002 and 2003, though not a staff member of Camp Daggett, he was a volunteer counselor there.

Law enforcement were tipped off when he applied for a concealed weapons permit in late May 2005 and the FBI and Michigan State Police background checks revealed several prior arrests and convictions including felonious assault and sex offenses ranging from 1964 to 1980 in Oakland and Macomb counties, and at least three prior sex offense convictions all under an alias name, Arthur Kirkeby.

Kirk's last conviction, for which he was sentenced to 25 years in prison, was for the second offense of first degree criminal sexual conduct with an 8-year-old boy. Kirk/Kirkeby isn't included on the state's Public Sex Offender Registry because his convictions came through prior to 1995, exempting him from registration.

A lieutenant with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and a police officer with the City of Charlevoix Police Department executed a Charlevoix County 90th District Court search warrant at Kirk's condo in Charlevoix Township on July 30. During the search, three handguns were seized including two .357 caliber revolvers and one .40 caliber semi-automatic pistol.

On Thursday, Feb. 16, many schools announced early release of students as conditions worsened. Charlevoix schools were not included in this early dismissal.

Supervisor of the Charlevoix Public Schools' bus garage, Gordie Russell, said his drivers did not report any problems in safely returning students to their homes. Bus service was delayed by about 5 to 10 minutes.

"It's just winter. We've been lucky so far this year," Russell said.

Other drivers in Charlevoix County were less fortunate. Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater said his deputies spent much of the day, Thursday, responding to cars stranded in ditches. No injuries were reported.

Lasater said the challenge his deputies faced was getting themselves from point A to point B safely to make sure citizens were OK.

According to City of Charlevoix Chief of Police Gerard Doan, city patrolmen did not respond to any weather related accidents.

He said he was on patrol until 9:30 p.m. Feb. 16 and the only cars on the road were plow trucks.

Snowfall has steadily declined since last Thursday and is expected to let up today, Wednesday and tomorrow.

But forecasters are saying it will fall again on Friday.

"Who knows, March might be the worst month of the whole winter. I've seen some nasty Marches. I hope not though.

I hope this is the last major snow event of the year," Harmon said.

Winter's saga: man versus snow blower

Benjamin Gohs
'Staff writer'

No one seems to know exactly when the dead of winter is, but you can get a fair estimate by multiplying the number of icicles hanging from your nose by the number of sharp, deep breaths you take when your spouse tries to warm their icy feet on your back — a maneuver also known as the Wisconsin alarm clock.

Another sure sign of the dead of winter is when middle-aged fathers venture out to teach their teenagers how to drive in the snow. You will often see them in an empty grocery store parking lot doing backward donuts. Be sure to listen for the high-pitched screams of, "The brake is on the left! The brake is on the left!"

Some would differ on when the dead of winter actually occurs since, according to the groundhog, we have only four more weeks of the white stuff to look forward to.

Of course, anyone familiar with the frozen tundra of northern Michigan knows the hog lies.

Which is why I'm thinking we need our own cold weather mascot. Perhaps it could be Charlevoix Carl, a manic-depressive chipmunk who suffers bouts of both unbelievable glee when he sees you trying to dig your car out of a snow bank, and downright disgust if he happens to catch you and the family making a snowman.

Since shivering doesn't count as conversation, Carl knows the only thing you can really determine on Feb. 2 is how long your marriage will last if one of you doesn't get out of the house for longer than it takes to check the mail.

Tensions only increase when you open the mailbox to find a picture postcard from the Caribbean with the greeting, "If you shovel my roof I'll bring you back a coconut. Love, uncle Bob."

Shoveling one's roof, another sure sign of the dead of winter. Sure, I say that up here and nobody flinches. Try laying that one on them down south and you might as well say you wax your lawn.

I knew it was the dead of winter last week when we endured the blizzard that never was. Only tender types from southern Ohio refer to last Thursday's flurries as a blizzard. Not because of the cold, gray sky or the few inches of snow, but because I was back in the trenches fighting with the snow blower that never was.

The novelty of owning my very first snow blower vanished when I realized it was only a snow blower in the theoretical sense.

Back in autumn when the salesman told me I was getting, "All the snow moving capacity you can get for $149.99," he meant it. But, at the time, I didn't realize he meant that as a bad thing.

When I purchased the unit back in October I also bought 100 feet of extension cord. And, at the time, the idea of lugging 45 pounds of bright orange cord through knee-deep snow didn't enter my penny-pinching brain.

Not until the first heavy snow did I realize the ejector on my four slice toaster packs more of a punch than the motor on this thing. And, I'm not sure who decided to put the old-time baby carriage wheels on it, but he or she needs to be slapped.

The box boasts this unit to be self-propelled. It was apparent from the get go that by "Self," they mean "You," and by "Propelled," they mean, "Not so much."

This unit moves with the ease and grace of a steel shopping cart on two bad wheels.

And then there is the "durable" construction — their word, not mine. The housing is plastic. The blade is plastic. The handle is plastic. The wheels are plastic. In fact, the only metal on the entire contraption is the oblong sticker warning me not to get it wet.

I'm sure those of you with the fossil fuel guzzling, 800 horse power, gear-driven, snow eating monsters with built-in hand warmers and cappuccino dispenser are laughing yourselves into asphyxia at this point, and I don't blame you.

I'm reaping the ills of being cheap and much like Aesop's grasshopper, learned to prepare for the dead of winter.

Charlevoix's resort tradition is alive and well

Edith Gilbert
'Behind the news'

spend a few days up north this summer and it would be great to see the few friends that I still have left in Charlevoix," he wrote.

Believe it or not, one telephone call and I was able to e-mail him the answer.

Yes, this is the time of year people are sorting through piles of old photographs and stacks of memorabilia to create family albums for their children. The homesick sentimentality of former Charlevoix summer residents is as strong as ever.

Recent letters in the Courier suggesting that Charlevoix has become a "new" resort town, are completely wrong, as old timers well know. It's my pleasure to inform newcomers that Charlevoix has been a lively family resort town for over 100 years. It has lived through the horse and buggy era, the flapper girl, Prohibition, the Great Depression and World Wars I and II.

When checking dates in my book, "Summer Resort Life, Tango Teas and All," we're reminded that the Belvedere Club was founded in 1878 and the Chicago Club in 1880. The S.S. Manitou brought summer visitors on its first trip through the channel in 1896, and The Inn, a posh summer hotel, was built in 1898. The Beach Hotel, called "a new haven of splendor," built in 1899 was seven stories high and located on the present site of the La Croft Condominiums, while the elegant, only "honest" gambling casino in the country called Koch's was booming in 1920. Here, with few exceptions, only summer visitors were allowed to gamble and lose.

Mark Smith, whose grandparents' boarding house overlooked Lake Michigan, wrote in his book, "The Middleman" in 1967, that "The summer way of life as I knew it was to go out with the limousines and chauffeurs, the maids, cooks and nurses, who on sunny days would paint the streets with the colors of their uniforms."

Earlier in 1918, when Charlevoix was known as the queen of Northern Michigan summer resorts, the Courier wrote, "On the high hills on the north bank of Pine River where the ancient Indian factories for making arrow heads were once located.. the skies of Italy are not more genial. France is not more fruitful. Venice presents no more beautiful waterscape than does Charlevoix."

These are the memories that make up the essence and charm of this small town. The trend today reflects that more summer people have winterized their cottages into year round homes and offices and thanks to winter sports and snow blowers the season has no beginning and no end.

Outreach during tragedy

Editor:
Thank you just doesn't convey how we feel regarding the love and concern you, as a community, showed our family at the untimely death of Mark.

We do not have any immediate family in the area, and we are especially grateful to those who have shown their support for us.

Mark was a cherished gift we were blessed to enjoy and share for too brief a time.

Your expressions of love and caring allowed us to continue through this time of tragic circumstance.

Vote for Saltonstall

Editor:
Charlevoix County residents deserve a commissioner that supports healthy initiatives for all community members, especially children. We need a commissioner that will work to adopt the smoking regulations along with Emmet, Antrim and Osego counties.

Adopting the smoking regulations along with these three counties is the right thing to do for our community. Who can argue with any policy that tells the children and adult members of our community that smoking is not a healthy choice and will not be allowed in an area where non-smokers are at risk to inhale the fumes.

A vote for Connie Saltonstall on Feb. 28 for Charlevoix County Commissioner will tell our communities that we want a representative that is working for our best interests. Connie Saltonstall will be a fresh voice that will serve us by working to bring jobs to the county.

Connie Saltonstall supports the formulation of a marketing plan to promote an interest in our area that will bring improvements that are planned ahead of time and serve all community members.

Vote for Saltonstall

Editor:
It's so refreshing to see democracy in action. The voting public already has decided they've had enough of the good-old-boys on our school board and the common council, and come Feb. 28 they have the chance to put a fresh new face on the Charlevoix County Commission.

Connie Saltonstall, like her father who served the community as a doctor for many years, is ready to serve and is the most capable nominee for this position. She will bring new and fresh ideas about employment, the environment, highways and balanced growth. So, do what's right and vote for Connie Saltonstall on Feb. 28.

Vote for Saltonstall

Editor:
It was my pleasure to serve as Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools while Connie Saltonstall served on the Board of Education. She was an excellent board member. Many community members may also remember Connie as an excellent teacher.

The qualities she exhibited as a school board member will serve her constituents well as a county commissioner. As a school board member, she expected each administrative recommendation to be presented with supporting evidence and a funding plan to assure that any new project would be funded within the budget. She was a visionary who wanted to know the long-term implications for any new plan. While serving on various committees, she welcomed input and was well informed.

Connie worked diligently to assure that all students, parents, school employees and taxpayers were treated fairly.

In this election we should forego party affiliation and vote for a proven, well-qualified, dedicated, independent candidate who will represent all citizens and taxpayers.

Connie Saltonstall has my wholehearted support and hopefully yours also.

Candidate forum response

Editor:
The Charlevoix Courier reported last week "Haggard said due to his political connections it would be a benefit to voters to vote for him."

This referred to Republican John Haggard's remarks at a candidates' forum on Feb. 12 sponsored by the Friends of the Library, for the First District Charlevoix County commission election to take place next week.

Though not mentioned in the Courier piece, at the forum, John specified the "political connection" as Richard DeVos, if DeVos is elected governor. The specific benefit he mentioned was accelerated state money for needed repair of the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road.

John Haggard has a distinguished record of public service to the county. And I take him at his word that he has interested fellow Republican DeVos in the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, and more generally in the problems of Charlevoix County.

But I am troubled that repairs to a road would be decided by political connections, and to hear John say this is the way life ought to be.

If DeVos is elected it would be because of support from key Republicans in many counties. He will owe favors to all. Perhaps he will owe other counties more if they out-hustle Charlevoix Republicans in garnering votes. Who's to say we will be the winner?

Letters Policy

Readers are encouraged to write letters to the editor addressing pertinent topics of community interest.

The Courier editor reserves the right to edit or reject letters for length, correct grammar, libel and content.

Letters to the editor must be signed by the author, and the name of the author will appear with published letters. Letters should only have one author, but we will accept up to three separate signatures on Then again, DeVos might not win. Where would the county be then?

I am the Green candidate for the same commission seat. The election is this Tuesday. Who are my own political connections? The Green Party doesn't have any. We believe the next governor should allocate funding according to the counties' needs, not their politics.

Council reviews resort hotel project

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

The City of Charlevoix's definition of hotel came under fire at Monday night's city council meeting.

City council members were presented with a recommendation from the planning commission to approve a development plan for a 12-unit resort hotel to be built at 115 Pine River Lane, overlooking the Pine River Channel.

The commission voted 5-1 in favor of the recommendation at their Feb. 13 meeting. June Cross was the lone "no" vote.

In this proposed development, each of the units would be sold individually and would possibly be included in a rental pool.

Currently, a single residence occupies a portion of the property. This house will be removed.

The proposed resort hotel, to be developed by Carr Development of Gaylord, would span over 30,000 square feet and would have 24 underground parking spaces. The lot is 7 tenths-of-an-acre of land and is owned by Peter Carey, Julie Bandfield and Randy Carey.

The property is zoned commercial and the city's zoning ordinance allows for hotels/motels in this district.

As council considered the commission's recommendation, Doug Mansfield, president of the project's architectural firm, Wells Mansfield, drew council's attention to similar uses in the same area, like Pointes North Inn and the Weatherlane Terrace.

He said both have exterior entrances to rooms and further commented that similar projects including Ship's Watch, a condominium rental development to be built on Charlevoix's north side, was recently approved by council in the commercial district.

"This is the same use, the same zoning and the same intent," he said. "You've done it before. You've allowed it. And it's good for the community, property owners and business."

However, Boh Grzech, an attorney with the Charlevoix office of Running, Wise and Ford, representing the resident group opposed to the project as presented, disagrees with the notion that precedent should guide council's decision.

"Two wrongs, three wrongs, four wrongs, don't make a right. What was allowed before is of very little concern to my clients," Grzech said.

The project does not require any variances from the city's zoning ordinance or code.

However, some argue this project doesn't fit the definition of hotel as outlined in the ordinance.

"This project, as drawn is not a hotel just because the developers say it is. It does not comply with the legal description of a hotel that is available," said Alberta Beyers, a Charlevoix resident whose Dixon Avenue property abuts the proposed project. "There is no office, no lobby, no common area, no amenities normally offered by hotels."

According to the ordinance, hotels must have a central lobby or office area from which users enter and exit supervised by a person in charge at all hours.

The office area for this project is located in the parking level.

Mansfield said there will be an on-call box and a manager in residence seven days a week.

Grzech, who represents Beyers and other surrounding residents, will enter an appeal to the Charlevoix Zoning Board of Appeals to have the city's definition of hotel in relation to this project reviewed. This evaluation will likely take place at the board's March 15 meeting.

In light of letters they received from concerned residents, council voted 5-1 to send the project back to city planner Gerry Harsch for further review of its findings of fact. Harsch's main focus will be on the project's impact.

"I think people just want to be assured it won't be detrimental to their neighborhood," second ward councilman, Gabe Campbell, said.

Third ward councilman Sherrin Chamberlain was the "no" vote. He said in conducting a topographical survey at the site a few years ago he also superimposed a development similar to Edgewater Inn on the property. He said the lot would allow for a 20-unit development similar to Edgewater and the proposed project has minimal impact in comparison to what the property could accommodate.

"I think the planning commission did a fine job reviewing it. It's consistent with other projects we've approved in the last few years," he said. "I think it's just a matter of addressing the concerns of the neighbors and making sure all (zoning) interpretations are correct."

Residents argue that the proximity of the project to their homes could pose a risk to their home's structure during the construction process. Other concerns include soil erosion issues, light pollution, mechanical noise, trash removal, walls and fencing.

"We do not need Fort Charlevoix built right next to us and that's what this is," Beyers said.

Harsch plans to take comments from the community and surrounding property owners as to how the proposal would impact them. Those written comments are due by 5 p.m. today, Feb. 22.

Council will review the revised findings of fact and address the development plan at the next regularly scheduled council meeting to take place at 7 p.m. March 6.

According to city mayor Norman Carlson, at that meeting council will likely do one of two things — examine the project and make a decision pending the zoning board of appeals review or postpone the decision to follow the board's determination.

Charlevoix County considers hiring administrator

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

While they haven't decided on a title, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners are in favor of exploring the idea of some type of administrative head for the county.

The number one thing which came out of the Feb. 7 meeting of the whole was that that commissioners want to retain their voting rights and ability to oversee the operation of the local government while possibly putting someone in charge of day-to-day operations.

Fourth District Commissioner and Chairman of the Board, Vic Patrick, said whatever you want to call the position, "executive comptroller, coordinator, administrative assistant or county manager. I don't think it would hurt to talk to a few other counties to see how far we ought to go with this thing."

He added, "I don't want to get into a situation like East Jordan was in a few years back where they controlled everything."

Second District Commissioner, Randolph Frykberg said it's no secret he's been a proponent of this for many years, though he is revising his concept of what the county needs in light of new challenges which face the county.

"By far the majorities of counties in the state have some form of administrator, comptroller, coordinator as you put it," he said. "I don't know that we're ready to jump in. I guess I strongly agree with you...let's be careful and move slowly on the authority aspect of it."

He added, "I guess at this point I'm leaning more to the coordinator position."

According to Frykberg, at least 50 of the 83 counties in Michigan have some form of county administrator.

First District Commissioner, Josh Barnes, said he would like to see a couple volunteers take on the challenge of looking at the pros of their particular approach to what might be needed in a county administrator.

"It sure seems that one or two people can do a lot better job of research than a room full of us," he said.

Third District Commissioner, Ronald Reinhardt said, "When I was first elected and this first came up, I was definitely against it. But since then, as far as my personal slant on it, we need someone to look at the finances for the simple reason of what we know is coming down the road."

"I still don't think we need somebody who has absolute control like a controller does," he said. "The chairman and the board still need to run the county. As far as I'm concerned, I'm looking at an administrator or a coordinator."

Fifth District Commissioner, Dennis Jason, said he would like to see someone in an organizational role.

"He or she would do as the board tells them to do," he said. "And I think we need continuance. And when you have this type of position, you get some of that continuance, even if you don't have the same person, you have job title and duties."

Sixth District Commissioner, Shirley Roloff supports the idea of looking into this issue, but she wants to see some type of job description early on.

"What do we want them to do?" she said.

Frykberg agreed that this shouldn't be something the board rushes into.

"We need to realize the validity of the point that Shirley made," he said. "We're not going to go through this and suddenly it's going to be here."

He added, "We need to have a better concept and work through a committee and the whole board and get that worked out before it's even advertised."

Jason said he supports a slow and thorough approach to the investigation of an administrator's position.

"You can't hire somebody and then develop what you want that person to do," he said.

Patrick added, "We seem to have a unanimous decision that we need some type of a coordinator, administrator or administrative assistant. What we call them is really irrelevant."

The committee of the whole did not take action on this issue at the Feb. 7 meeting.

Mild winter hits business owners in the pocketbook

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Snowflakes floated to the ground like pennies from heaven as Charlevoix was hammered by the white stuff last Thursday.

Despite having already received 1 tenth-of-an-inch more precipitation than last season at this time, most of this winter has been mild in temperature and low on snow—a fact which has not escaped those who earn part of their living from the winter wonderland.

According to Vince Currier, owner and operator of Currier Lawn Maintenance, even a good winter won't make him wealthy, but it is usually enough to survive the slow season.

"Snow removal will usually generate just enough cash flow to stay afloat," he said. "You generally do enough to cover your expenses but it's not a get rich thing."

Currier, who owns two plow trucks and a salt and sand spreader truck, said he hasn't seen winter business so bad in nearly 20 years.

"In 18 years this is the worst winter

I've ever seen," Currier said.

Currier said his everyday fixed costs such as fuel, phone, electric, heat, gas, groceries and sand still take a bite out of his checkbook.

"We're looking for an outstanding spring and an outstanding summer," he said. "Being a seasonal business, we have to make hay when the sun shines and we try to do as much landscaping and lawn maintenance in nine months as we can to make it through the slow times."

And, Currier said, it isn't merely his business which suffers from a warm winter.

"This is the first year in 30 years that I have not gotten my snowmobiles out due to lack of snow," he said. "In talking with people who repair snowmobiles and sell them, I feel terrible, because they are extremely slow."

He added, "Its economical affect is felt on the entire community, not just the restaurants and ski hills. Snow brings in tourism and we need tourism in this town to stay afloat."

Currier said the more snow there is, the more people come to Charlevoix in the wintertime.

"Charlevoix is a four season town and everybody loves Charlevoix," he said. "There is a big difference in tourist population. On the weekends, the traffic is just not here and everybody is saying the same thing."

For the first time in years, members of the local Boy Scout troop were unable to earn their Polar Bear Patch. Scouts usually build an igloo of sorts out near Bell's Bay Road in which they camp overnight, but the lack of snow prevented them from doing so.

The Charlevoix Snowmobile Club was forced to cancel their event for the year, which was supposed to be held in February.

The club generally sets up at either Ferry Avenue Beach or in East Park and gives hot beverages and hot food to snowmobile riders for free. There are also usually door prizes and gifts contributed by local businesses.

"We've been doing the ride-in for probably about six to seven years," said club secretary, Scott Way. "We offer snowmobilers a destination to ride on a Saturday where they can get some free food and it gives us a chance to promote Charlevoix."

Recent snowfall boosts local winter business

He added, "It lets people know Charlevoix is a great destination for snowmobilers. We remind them that the downtown of Charlevoix can be accessed via the trails and it's also a way for us to showcase that there is a snowmobile club in Charlevoix."

But, according to Way, this year's snowfall was just too sporadic to attempt to play an event in advance.

The food station generally draws approximately 100 snowmobilers on an average year.

Located near the water, Nanny's Motel Restaurant & Lodge is usually a magnet for snowmobilers. But, according to owner Tom Brown, the lack of snow is in direct correlation with the lack of snowmobilers visiting his establishment.

"We usually get some in the motel and so far this year we've had two. And that was back when we had snow," Brown said. "It really picked up this last week with the snowmobilers and people coming for lunch last Friday, Saturday and Sunday."

Brown said many of his customers come across Lake Charlevoix but the lake isn't safe to travel.

"Last year was like this, but it was colder and at least we had people coming up the river," he said.

Last week, Brown warned a couple people not to travel across the lake to Boyne City.

"I told them it just froze over last week," he said.

"We have quite a few usually, but this year the business just hasn't been here due to lack of snow," he said. "As of this last weekend we actually got some snowmobilers and it's great."

Charlevoix Road Commission Manager, Pat Harmon, said despite mild weather and hit and miss snow, it's business as usual around the road commission.

"December was normal, January was far from normal with all the precipitation and rain we got that wasn't snow and the temperatures were above normal," he said. "Then it looks like February is like winter is supposed to be."

Harmon said when his workers aren't out plowing, sanding or salting, they are clearing brush and patching roads.

"There is plenty around here for them to do," Harmon said.

The road commission budget for winter maintenance is approximately $1 million a year and, so far, roughly half-a-million dollars has been spent.

It might seem like the road commission would spend less money in a winter season like this, but Harmon said freezing rain and icy roads take more resources to deal with than snow alone.

"With ice, there is three times the material of salt and sand that you put out versus the days when there is heavy snow," he said.

Charlevoix High School presents 'Isle of Tears'

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

A group of over 40 Charlevoix High School thespians will bring performing arts director Connie Ford's original script and score, "Isle of Tears," to life.

The performing arts students will present their wintertime show, "Isle of Tears," at 7 p.m. Feb. 25 and at 2 p.m. Feb. 26 in the auditorium at Charlevoix High School.

"Isle of Tears" is an ensemble musical set in the late 1800s and early 1900s and includes various tales of European immigrants with different reasons for emigrating to the United States.

The production is based on the journey of a boat filled with immigrants leaving its home port and arriving at New York's Ellis Island.

"The students have taken a period of time and made it believable for the audience," Ford said.

The script is the second written by Ford. It was completed in 1997 with help from her former longtime assistant, Sulae Hamilton. Her first was Homeland written and performed in 1994 and presented again in 2002.

Ford has been director of the school's performing arts program since 1968. Students last performed "Isle of Tears" in 1998.

She added that this show is out of context in comparison to other shows this group of performers have participated in, like "Sound of Music."

"It's a challenge in that respect," she said.

She said she is hoping community members attend this weekend's show dates.

"They've worked hard and I hope the community comes to see it. Everything is original, including the music," Ford added.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 students and seniors and are on sale at the school.

Wine tasting and Women's Winter Tour

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Enophiles and admirers of the co-coa bean will soon have the opportunity to explore their love of both as the Women's Winter Tour and the second annual A Winter's Night at the Castle kick-off on Saturday, Feb. 25.

"A Winter's Night at the Castle is a wine tasting festival which started last year at the Castle," said Castle Farms director of marketing and shows, Stephanie Sayre. "This is the first year we will have it in conjunction with the Women's Winter Tour."

Wine tasting runs from noon until 8 p.m. with cuisine provided by Grey Gables.

"We have about eight to 10 Leelanau wineries bringing about five wines each," she said. "Short's Brewery from Bellaire is bringing five or six different brews and Ron Getz, who plays a lot of different genres of music, will be playing live acoustic guitar."

The Women's Resource Center will host a silent auction throughout the morning and evening.

"The ladies will get to ski on Castle Farms property," Sayre said. "The wine tasting is for anyone. We encourage the ladies of the winter tour to kick their skis off at the door and join in the celebration."

She added, "We really wanted the ladies who participated in the ski tour to really experience all that Charlevoix has to offer — the scenic downtown, the cute little shops and of course, the Castle."

According to Charlevoix event manager, Sara Klebba, the National Subaru Women's Winter Tour is designed to celebrate women, winter and chocolate.

"And we do it all for a good cause, because domestic abuse is an issue in every American community," Klebba said. "We're women helping women with a smile on our face and chocolate in our mouths."

Chocolate ruffles will be available on the trail from Charles Layton and a chocolate fountain and items for dipping are provided by the Chocolate Buzz.

Klebba said many women aren't active when it comes to winter outdoor sports and this is a way of trying to get them interested.

"We try to use the chocolate as a carrot at the end of the stick," she said. "Once they get off the trail they say, 'Hey I can ski or snowshoe. I don't need to be a professional athlete to do this.'"

Klebba said 100 percent of the proceeds from the auction will go to support the Women's Resource Center.

Auction items include sports apparel, art from local artists and coffee.

There will also be local and national sponsors on-site, as well as free skiing and Nordic walking mini lessons.

From 8 a.m. to 11 a.m., a trolley will shuttle women to and from downtown Charlevoix to the Castle. From 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., a limousine will shuttle women to and from downtown Charlevoix and the Castle.

"And we're also handing out tiaras," Klebba said. "They (women) get to be queen for the day."

Klebba said the tour doesn't exclude men, but the focus is on women of all ages.

"We have men on the trail as marshals. Basically they ski the course and make sure everyone is safe. And, they hand out chocolates," she said. "Many women are new or just getting back into the sport and it's nice to know someone is out there to help you up when you fall down."

Klebba said the Castle was chosen for this year's event for several reasons.

"Castle Farms has not had a cross country ski event before," she said. "We'll be skiing in and around the property on the Castle and there will be a food court setup halfway through at a barn."

Klebba said they encourage women to participate in both the ski tour and the wine tasting festival.

"A lot of women are coming up from down state and are staying in hotels here and eating in Charlevoix restaurants," she said. "We're trying to create some business during the slower winter season."

But, she said, "Our initial goal is to raise awareness and funds for domestic abuse and have fun."

Sayre said the turnout for the event should be high.

"There is a buzz. People are excited about it," she said. "Last year we had over 500 people just for the wine event and they had a couple hundred at least for the ski tour."

She added, "I know that this year we've got some great media coverage, so I think you can be pretty safe to say we will be increasing our attendance for sure."

There is no RSVP for the wine tasting festival. Admission is $10 which includes a commemorative wine glass, two tasting tickets good toward wine, food or beer. Additional tasting tickets are $2 each.

Skiing is from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. with flexible start times from approximately 9 to 11 a.m.

Women may register ahead of time online at www.womenswintertour.com or they may register the morning of the event beginning at 8:30 a.m. for a fee of $50. Of that registration fee, $5 goes to the Women's Resource Center.

Charlevoix Elementary School tackles Olympic Web project

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Logan Eckhardt smiled when asked whether he watches curling events from the 2006 Olympic Winter Games.

"It's on right over there," he said, pointing to a small computer set up in the tech lab at Charlevoix Elementary School.

Eckhardt, a fourth grade student at Charlevoix Elementary School, along with his classmates, are creating Olympic Web pages connected to the school district's official site, www.rayder.net.

While the students aren't reporting live from Turin, Italy they are following the day-to-day excitement of the events which started Feb. 10 and are scheduled to end Feb. 26.

Each student has been assigned one of 14 sports and will report on its background, competitors and other research they've discovered.

Eckhardt said curling, the art of sliding a 42-pound granite stone along textured ice, is his Olympic project subject. But, on his own time, Olympic snowboarding is his favorite.

"Snowboarding, curling, luge — I'll watch whatever is on," he said. The Olympic fan enjoys watching American alpine skier Bode Miller but Eckhardt said snowboarding guru Ahti Antti of Finland is amazing.

"It's awesome how he can do all those cool tricks," he said.

According to elementary school computer technology teacher Dana Frank the students are learning some cool tricks as well, like elements of Web design.

Frank has tackled this Web page design project each year with her fourth grade students in conjunction with the Michigan Technology

Charlevoix Public Library welcomes youth librarian

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Christine Hauke

Rapids, Hauke has lived in other states including Europe. And, after 40 years of visiting Charlevoix, she and her husband decided to make it their home.

"My parents and brother live up here," Hauke said. "It's nice not to have to visit anymore."

Hauke's background includes work as a librarian in schools for 11 years, public and university libraries, and, she was the youth librarian for the United States of America Air Force Europe library while her husband was stationed overseas in the United States Air Force.

"There's always something exciting going on. I'm never bored," she said. "I just love it."

Hauke has already started working for the library.

"I had my first story time and that was fun," she said.

Hauke said the best part of being a youth librarian is working to inform children of all ages about the importance and enjoyment of reading books.

Hauke will be responsible for reading programs, story hours, summer reading and more.

"I like to get them excited about books," she said. "And, answering reference questions is always fun."

Community outreach by way of working with schools, pre kindergarten classes and home school students is one of Hauke's goals in her new position.

"The resources we have in this community are amazing," she said. "It doesn't matter what your job is, there is always something you can do to excite kids about reading."

According to Hauke, while she loves to read anything and everything, "my popcorn books, which I like to read for goofing off, are mysteries."

Hauke said, as beautiful as Colorado was, she couldn't stand being away from northern Michigan any longer.

"I missed my Lake Michigan sunsets," she said. "When I was in college, I used to drive three hours across the state just to see the sunset and the 1 d turn around and drive back home."

She added, "There's no water in Colorado, so it will be nice to use my flat water kayak more."

The goods and bads of Merit Curriculum for Charlevoix

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Michael Flanagan

Charlevoix freshmen could find themselves working under a new, more stringent high school curriculum if legislation passes prior to March 1.

The Michigan State Board of Education approved the Michigan Merit Curriculum which consists of four years of English language arts; one year each of Algebra I, Geometry, Algebra II, and an additional math class in the senior year; one year each of Biology, Physics or Chemistry and one additional year of science; three years of social science, which must include a semester of civics and a semester of economics; two years of world languages; one year of health/physical education; and one year of visual and performing arts.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock said, "I think we provide that kind of curriculum already and probably about 69 percent of our kids are taking that. I think our concern is for that 31 percent that take the vocational class offerings."

Sturock said college track classes are great for kids who wish to go into a field requiring a college degree but he doesn't want to see kids who don't want to go that route trapped in a curriculum that they don't want or need.

"There are a lot of ways to make your way through the world — building trades, health services, culinary arts," he said.

The proposed legislation would be the first change in high school curriculum since 1995, when Michigan adopted the model core academic curriculum content standards meant to establish common educational expectations across the state.

In Gov. Jennifer Granholm's State of the State Address she said, "For years, we have told our young people that a high school diploma is enough to get you a perfectly good job. In fact, that used to be our strength. People flocked to Michigan precisely because you could go right from the high school graduation line to a factory line and get a good job with good benefits. Unfortunately, with globalization and competition, those days are over."

Granholm said all children in Michigan must continue their education after high school regardless of what field of expertise they enter.

"Whether it is a four-year college degree, or a two-year associate degree, or other forms of technical training after high school," she said.

"Continued learning will be a requirement for all who seek a good-paying job in this new century."

Sturock said "The benefit of (a more vigorous curriculum) is maybe it will focus on those students that would look to take the easy road out of school. A lot of times kids will take the easy road out and those kids will no longer have a choice but to take a harder curriculum."

He added, "My concern is for those kids that can't hack it. And, in the end, it's going to hurt your extras — art, vocational education, music, performing arts — these are instrumental to some kids."

Sturock said, at a time with budget problems and cuts to support staff already in place, extending the school year to give kids the time necessary to enjoy the elective classes could be costly.

"If you get a longer school year, who's going to pay for it?" he said. "What about staffing you might have to add? How are they going to get by when money's not there?"

He added, "That's the piece of legislation our legislators don't talk about."

According to Granholm, a commission she appointed in 2004 to look into the state of Michigan's educational system made 19 recommendations with the most important being continuing education and a curriculum which will prepare high school students for the rigors of a college work.

To help promote her plan, Granholm announced a new Merit Scholarship which will offer $4,000 for every high school student in Michigan who completes two years of college beginning with the class of 2007.

Granholm also plans to replace the current high school assessment exam with one which doubles as a college admissions test.

"To support this achievement we will provide financial assistance to school districts that adopt a high-expectations curriculum for all students," she said in her speech.

The requirements adopted are similar to those proposed by State Superintendent of Public Instruction Michael Flanagan to educators in Charlevoix in November of last year. The only difference is the addition of two years of foreign language. And, the board requires high school students to complete the Michigan Merit Exam and a minimum of one on-line credit or non-credit course or learning experience to fulfill graduation requirements.

When Flanagan showcased the new curriculum he blamed poor curricu-

Local woman offers Vacations with Heart

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

A Charlevoix woman's long history of volunteerism coupled with her love to vacation in South Africa inspired her to create an opportunity for others to enjoy both.

Marge McGoff

Currently in the development stages of Vacations With A Heart, owner and operator, Marge McGoff of Charlevoix, hopes to have trips available by this summer.

McGoff said, people wishing to combine an exotic vacation destination with the fulfillment of helping others will soon have their chance.

"A tour would be planned for three weeks with the first week to be spent in the northern part of Africa seeing the sites and learning about the culture in that part of country. The middle week would be a volunteer project and the last week would be in the southern part of Africa taking in Cape Town and garden country," McGoff said.

Statewide curriculum to be decided by March 1 lums for failing school districts.

But, Sturock said, Charlevoix isn't one of those failing school districts.

"When you legislate, you put a blanket on everybody and not everybody is experiencing that problem," he said. "Once again, the legislators try to mandate something through a law."

Sturock said all the schools he has been involved with through his career have had a rigorous curriculum.

"I think there are a lot of issues here — universities wanting to get people in the door — in my opinion that's part of this game," he said. "The whole idea of mandating something with legislation bothers me. They don't want to go to the real problem so they try to take care of it with a broad brush."

Sturock said there was a time when there was local control of schools.

"If we're about local control and pride ourselves on that, then why are we getting away from that?" he said. "The state is mandating things we're required to do and we've never really had that problem. Our kids are already successful."

Travelers would spend a portion of the trip at McGoff's Monyela Lodge, located in a mountainous region in South Africa.

"The lodge is at 3,000 feet, which gives us quite a vantage point. There is a waterfall which supplies water to the lodge and baboons will come right up to the lodge because we have half a dozen marula (similar to plums) trees which attract them when in season," McGoff said. "Guests can hike to a riverbed and in that particular area there is a rain forest which is in tremendous contrast with the bush country that leads up to the lodge."

She added, "We're supposed to have leopards on the property but I've never seen one since the leopards are basically nocturnal. We hear baboons barking at night, so we know they're in this mountain."

McGoff said the tours can be customized to each group and the volunteerism section of the vacation could revolve around work at the Moholoholo Wildlife Rehabilitation Center or helping with AIDS education to name a couple.

McGoff said there are safaris and photo tours and a restored gold mining town named Pilgrims Rest.

"You can see where the mines were and you can actually pan for gold if you want," she said. "All these things can be customized to the group depending on what they want."

She added, "If people are into bird watching, there are over 300 species of birds identified in the northern part of South Africa."

McGoff said those who go on safari can see the big five of Africa: Elephants, lions, rhino, buffalo and leopards.

"Kruger National Park is one of the largest wildlife parks in all the world, Blyde River Canyon is the third largest, and only green canyon in world. And then there's a wildlife rehabilitation center where National Geographic filmed for two years," she said. "The vacation would be the first and last week with the center being a giving of themselves or giving of their hearts to the project."

She added, "Another interesting project in the area is how this one trainer has worked with elephants and is training them to take people dealing with addictions on elephant safaris." McGoff said those who lack experience with volunteering shouldn't worry since the projects will be tailored to anyone wishing to give of their time and energy will be able to.

"This is for anyone in the community who would like to experience South Africa with a heart," she said.

McGoff, who lives in Charlevoix, said she has been visiting Africa since the 1960s and the lodge has been in her family since the 1970s.

"This whole project has really given me a new lease on life," she said. "It has brought about a great deal of satisfaction and I would like to share it with other people."

McGoff said there are limitless sites to see on the continent.

"Depending on what their interests are, there is plenty to see and plenty to do," she said. "If they want to go after the wildlife or nature we can do that. If they enjoy hiking and studying indigenous plants and game drives where they see animals in their natural habitat we can do that too."

She added, "And then there is also some of the geological phenomena considering the canyon and panoramic natural beauty of the setting of the lodge which creates certain peace and definite privacy."

McGoff said there would also be a day of enrichment at the lodge wherein guests could discuss spirituality and listen to a guest speaker.

"And also we will learn about the culture in the two different areas and I'll have some tribal dancers or local cultural entertainment," she said.

While McGoff loves the idea of sharing this business with others, it is her partner's dream to develop the lodge into what it is today.

"I feel like I'm a professional volunteer almost," she said. "I've done volunteer work for the last 30 years."

Some of McGoff's volunteer work has been with the Michigan Garden Club as a past president wherein she helped with the handicapped, conservation projects and environmental issues.

McGoff said the trips will be planned once a year for a maximum of 16 people.

Fund-raiser maintains field trips at elementary school

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Charlevoix Elementary School may have eliminated all field trips from its budget to remain financially fit, but the field trips continue thanks to fund-raising efforts.

Those wishing to help local youngsters continue to reap the advantages of curriculum friendly field trips and assemblies may do so while purchasing some unique products during a fund-raiser which will last until 3:45 p.m. this Friday, Feb. 24.

"There are over 100 items for sale," said elementary school principal, Dick Swenor. "There's creams and heds and bath stuff, pet toys and beds, Easter candy, nice chocolates and covered nuts, magazines at discounted prices, candles, cheese and sausage and even plants."

He added, "There's really a good variety of items to appeal to many people's interests."

Swenor said thanks to fund-raising efforts like these, the third graders get to go to Fort Michilimackinac and Old Mill Creek to learn about Indians, the logging industry and the fur trade. First graders will visit conservatories and the AuSable Institute to learn about nature. And, kindergartners visit local sheep and dairy farms to learn about the agricultural business.

"All our field trips are curriculum based, so they correspond with something the kids are learning at the school," Swenor said.

According to Swenor, people often remember the fun, excitement and learning they experienced during field trips as a child, well into adulthood.

"The research says that the kids retain the information they get when it's real and they see it and feel it," he said.

Swenor said it's imperative these programs survive the budget crunch.

"They enhance the curriculum and create a high level of interest in the kids," he said. "Like the third graders who go out to the cement plant and see the different types of rock first hand. It makes it all more clear to the kids and gives them a heightened sense of interest about the subject they are studying."

Swenor said fund-raisers like this one also help to ensure the schools can continue to put on four paid assemblies a year.

"One is usually a math and science type — we've brought in astronomers and mathematicians," he said. "One is a language arts/drama type. One is a history/social studies assembly where people sometimes come in and dress up like historical characters. And one is for character building and motivation."

For more information on the fund-raising effort, call Jill Baier or Sue Gengle at the elementary school at (231) 547-3215.

Ski team performs well at regional in spite of weather

By BENJAMIN GOHS

Rowley

The Charlevoix boys' and girls' ski teams met for competition at the Regional Ski Meet at Boyne Mountain on Thurs. Feb. 16.

According to ski coach, Sue Miller, the kids started off well at the meet, but strange weather conditions hampered their efforts.

"Everything ran smooth until after lunch," she said. "Then the weather started to increase and it was snowing and the visibility was poor."

"Everything ran smooth until after lunch. Then the weather started to increase..."

Sue Miller,
Head coach
Charlevoix High School Ski Team

Miller said due to lightening and thunder, there was a mandatory Michigan High School Athletics Association delay for 30 minutes. Poor visibility for much of the afternoon with too much snow on the course and hill made racing conditions difficult.

Miller said she is very proud of the way Katherine Rowley raced considering she is just coming off a knee injury.

In the giant slalom event, the boys placed 6th with 111 points overall. The boys were led by Mac Brennan in 18th with an overall

Nancy Bottomley retires from health department

Nancy Bottomley

Nancy Bottomley, the health department's director of Adult Health and Aging Services, was honored at a retirement open house Feb. 3 at the Weatheravane in Charlevoix.

Bottomley manages home health and hospice programs for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the health department serving Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties.

"Nancy has touched so many lives in the 25 years she has worked for us," said Gerald Chase, health officer for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency. "We want to give advocates for older adults, clients' families and others the opportunity to wish Nancy well as she begins retirement."

When Bottomley first started working at the health department, in 1975, she was the only public health nurse in Antrim County. Her duties were varied, from well-baby care to school nursing to treating sick and disabled clients in their homes. In 1979, she was promoted to Home Health Coordinator, a new position at the health department.

At the time, the health department did not offer hospice services, although she recognized the need for them, Bottomley said. In the mid-1980s, a hospice was getting organized in Charlevoix. Bottomley represented the health department on the Hospice Planning Board to establish Hospice of Northwest Michigan, then called Charlevoix County Hospice.

"By the early 1990s, more and more we found our home health clients wanted our nurses, therapists, and aides to continue to care for them when their doctors recommended hospice," she said. "We decided the time was right to launch a certified hospice program in the health department's four counties and we couldn't have done it without the volunteers from Hospice of Northwest Michigan. We've been partnering with them ever since."

The work of the nurses, therapists, aides, and the other members of the health department's home health and hospice teams are growing increasingly complex," Bottomley said. "Keeping up with the best practices for wound dressings, IV care, and medications is ongoing," she said.

"At the same time, the basics never change. It takes a special person to do what my staff does every day. Each member of our home health and hospice teams is a professional, with excellent clinical skills and the self-confidence to work independently. And they all have a big heart for our clients. They keep our clients and families the focus, despite the obstacles. I am very proud of my staff and I will miss them."

Health department home health and hospice staff are unique in the geographic area in that each one provides both skilled home health services and hospice services.

CHS Class of 1984 offers a $1,000 scholarship program

The Charlevoix High School class of 1984 has started an annual $1,000 scholarship program to benefit future graduates.

In 2004, while planning the group's 20-year class reunion, the reunion committee decided to create a scholarship as a way to celebrate and honor the anniversary of their graduation from Charlevoix High School.

The theme they chose for the scholarship is education and the importance of qualified, motivated teachers. Thanks to the generous donations, each year, from class members the program has evolved into an annual scholarship.

The first year, the group awarded two scholarships to 2004 graduating seniors including Alyssia McDonough who is attending the University of Michigan and Tess Hoagland who is enrolled at Grand Valley State University. In 2005, the award recipient was Anna Taylor who is currently attending Michigan State University.

Seniors who plan to attend college in the fall of 2006 are eligible to apply. Interested applicants have to write a personal essay describing a teacher, coach or support staff member at Charlevoix Public Schools, that has impacted or motivated them in some way.

The essay must include details of how this person made a difference in their education and tell what qualities make them successful in their career as an educator.

A local selection committee of 1984 graduates will choose the best candidate based on their written statement. The recipient will be asked to read their essay and be presented the scholarship check by their "nominated educator" at the Charlevoix High School awards ceremony in May.

Interested seniors can pick up information from Deb Devitt at the high school counselor's office. Applications must be turned in to Devitt by April 13, 2006.

Area law enforcement form drug task force

A new task force, named the Drug Death Team, has been formed as a collaborative effort with every law enforcement agency in Charlevoix County to vigorously investigate and prosecute the person(s) who deliver controlled substances to another person which ultimately results in death.

Formation of the new task force was recently announced by Charlevoix County Prosecutor John A. Jarema, who is working in conjunction with Charlevoix County Sheriff George

The team's formation, is a result of a new law passed in Michigan which became effective on Jan. 1. The new law states that it is a felony to deliver a controlled substance (except marijuana) to another individual, that is consumed by that person or any other person and that causes the death of that person. The penalty is imprisonment for life or any term of years.

"This new law allows a prosecutor to charge the person who delivers the controlled substance to another person which results in death. Prosecutors now can effectively go up the chain of the delivery and prosecute all the persons who distribute drugs that resulted in a death," Jarema said.

"In 2005, Charlevoix County had at least four deaths attributable to methadone. I have personally worked with federal prosecutors to charge one individual who delivered this to a young adult that died. This new law in Michigan mirrors the federal law. Now, I have the ability to prosecute these cases locally," Jarema added.

"The implementation of the DDT (Drug Death Team) allows a local police agency the resources of county-wide officers to assist the local agency in the investigation and prosecution of these cases. This is an example of law enforcement in Charlevoix County being pro-active in drug deliveries to bring persons who deliver drugs to swift justice."

Voters choose Saltonstall

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

After months of campaigning for the First District Charlevoix County Commissioner seat, the race has ended and the term of Connie Saltonstall begins.

Independent candidate Saltonstall won with 333 votes overall while Republican candidate John Haggard had 299 votes and Green Party candidate Ellis Boal had 43 votes.

Saltonstall, who won the election by a large margin, said she was surprised to have captured the majority of votes.

Connie Saltonstall

"I knew I had a chance but I really didn't want to be overconfident. It wasn't until the numbers came in that I said, 'I really did win,'" she said.

Saltonstall took the majority vote in Hayes and Bay townships as well as the City of Charlevoix. In Hayes Township Saltonstall received 101 votes, Haggard received 82 votes and Boal received 18 votes. In Bay Township, Saltonstall received 61 votes. Haggard received 40 votes and Boal received 4 votes. In the City of Charlevoix, Saltonstall received 86 votes, Haggard received 57 votes and Boal received 11 votes. Haggard carried the north side of Charlevoix Township, receiving 120 votes, while Saltonstall claimed 85 votes, and Boal received 10 votes.

These are unofficial totals. The Charlevoix County Board of Canvassers will meet at 1 p.m. today to verify this information and certify the election.

This election comes nearly a year after first district commissioner, Valerie Snyder, resigned and moved out of the area leaving the seat vacant.

Overall voter turnout was 17.5 percent of the 3858 registered voters in the four precincts. Saltonstall took 49.33 percent of the total vote.

Saltonstall thanked those who voted for her and said her first order of business when she takes office March 8 is to ask her fellow commission members to include summaries of the meaning and possible impact of resolutions prior to voting on them.

Lockman requests modified injunction to sell assets

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Karla Sue Lockman, a Boyne City resident, charged with embezzling over $750,000 from a local business, has requested an injunction freezing her assets be modified to allow her to pay her attorney fees.

"Significant preparation has already gone into this case. However, there is significant work yet to be done. Unfortunately, the defendant is without funds to continue the retention of an attorney, let alone come up with funds to pay other costs," Fred Gibson, Lockman's defense attorney from Clinton Township, states in his motion to pay attorney fees and costs from sale of assets.

Gibson declined to comment on the amount of money he is owed by Lockman at this time.

Lockman is charged with two counts of embezzlement by an agent or trustee of $20,000 or more, punishable by up to 10 years in prison and/or a $15,000 fine or three times the amount embezzled.

According to Gibson, in light of the charges Lockman is facing, Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas previously entered an injunction

City Council approves $564,540 East Park design contract

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

On Monday night, Feb. 27 Charlevoix's City Council unanimously approved a contract for over $560,000 with Pollack Design and Associates of Ann Arbor to provide professional services for the East Park renovation project.

Of that over half-a-million-dollar contract, the city will pay $447,540. The project's state funding source, the Waterways Commission which has agreed to pay 75 percent of the park's renovations as they relate to boating, will pay $177,000.

These fees are 12 percent of the $4.7 million total East Park project cost. The fee schedule has been capped at 12 percent.

City manager Mike Wiesner said Pollack's fee is higher than the 7 to 8 percent range Waterways typically allows.

"I think it's fair," Wiesner said of the cost. "We hired him using a quality based selection process where you don't consider price, you consider product. Is he going to provide a high-end product? He better."

Correction

Due to a reporting error in an article by Courier editor Julie Witthoef that appeared on page 18 of the Feb. 15 edition of the Charlevoix Courier entitled "Beaver Island Preservation Association faces lawsuit," it was stated that the group's community center project had been scaled back under the design leadership of Slocum and Associates. The project is a little bit larger than the original design drafted by Cox Medendorp Olson Architects. The cost has been scaled back significantly.

Embezzlement suspect seeks to sell assets to pay attorney costs

Karla Lockman

under which funds from any sale of her assets must be directed to an account Gibson established and cannot be extracted without court approval.

Gibson would not comment as to whether Lockman has sold any assets thus far.

At 1:30 p.m. this Friday, March 3 Judge Pajias is expected to hear the motion to modify this injunction to allow her to use funds from the sale of assets to pay Gibson.

Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema plans to file a brief opposing this request and argue against it that day in court.

"How can you steal from someone and want to use the proceeds of the embezzlement trust to pay to get you out of trouble," Jarema said.

The alleged time period during which Lockman embezzled funds from Northern Preferred Title Company LLC took place between January and May 2005. At that time, she was a closing agent with the company and collected closing funds from purchasers and deposited them into the escrow account.

According to a press release from the Boyne City Police Department, a lengthy investigation determined a minimum of $670,000 was converted into Lockman's personal bank account and was used to purchase a new home and furnishings, new vehicles, horses, trailers and other personal possessions or expenses.

Jarema maintains that she embezzled about $775,000.

Two civil suits, which were filed in United States District Court Western District of Michigan in 2005 allege Lockman may have embezzled as much as $975,023.64.

In previous interviews John Taylor, a representative of Northern Preferred Title Company LLC, said the embezzlement scandal forced the company to severely curtail its activities and 14 employees at the company's three offices have been laid off.

In December 2005, Lockman's trial which was set for January 2006, was postponed to June 5 following a forensic evaluation which questioned the status of her mental health.

According to the report authored by Lockman's examining physician, Dr. Jeffrey Wendt of the Center for Forensic Psychiatry, Lockman meets the statutory criteria for legal insanity.

"To summarize, it is my considered opinion that Mrs. Lockman suffered from a substantial disorder of thought and mood, meeting the statutory criteria for mental illness at the time of the alleged offense. As a result of her mental illness, it is further my opinion that Mrs. Lockman did not appreciate the nature and quality of her conduct, the wrongfulness of her conduct and could not conform her conduct to the requirements of the law," Wendt states in the report.

Gibson said a major issue in this case is Paxil, a prescription drug used to treat depression and anxiety disorders. Lockman was prescribed Paxil in August 2004. When her prescription was renewed by a physician in November 2004, Gibson said a mistake by a pharmacist resulted in her dose being doubled from 12.5 milligrams to 25 milligrams a day.

He maintains that it was during this time period when Lockman took double the prescribed dose of Paxil that the alleged embezzlement occurred.

"Once the error was discovered, she was brought back down and everything changed," Gibson said. "She came back to her normal."

Lockman remains free on a $50,000 surety bond.

Jarema's office determined Lockman is a low flight risk and therefore will remain free on bond until her trial.

Connie Saltonstall elected to the Charlevoix County Commission ELECTION

"So people have an idea of what is going on in the county," she said.

She attributes her win to first district residents wanting a fresh voice.

"I heard that over and over again. They feel I communicated with them with my brochure, mailings and meetings. They feel I'll do a good job and open things up," she said.

The term for Saltonstall's seat ends Dec. 31. Petitions to run in the August primary race for this first district seat must be filed by mid-May.

Haggard, who said he will consider whether he will run again in the August primary race, hopes Saltonstall will be able to work closely on the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, Big Rock Point and senior citizen issues.

"I wish her well. She ran a very good race and I ran a very good race and Ellis ran very good race," he said. "Hopefully she'll step into a position to look out for what is best for the county and get the resolution that I submitted to the board of commissioners passed and step forward on other important issues."

Haggard said he will remain active in political work throughout the county.

Boal, an attorney who ran for county prosecutor against John Jarema in 2004, said he is open to running for other political positions in the future.

"It's not that I didn't work hard enough and it's not that I made mistakes in the campaign," he said of the loss. "It was an issues oriented campaign unlike what we've seen in the county in the past. I congratulate Connie and wish her the best of luck."

OPINIONS

Kudos to City of Charlevoix's cooperative effort with schools

Skiers and snowboarders have reaped the benefits of fantastic winter conditions at the local small, but mighty ski hill Mt. McSaubu.

With these fabulous conditions have come countless hours of work from staff and volunteers. Thanks to these individuals the runs at McSaubu have been open since late December without missing a day.

January's warm weather was matched by cold weather days perfect for snow making that were capitalized on by McSaubu staff members.

Most recently we learned of a cooperative program between the local schools and the City of Charlevoix to get students on the slopes.

On two different afternoons McSaubu was open in the morning to Charlevoix Middle School kids and on another, to those attending St. Mary School.

This is a trade the city, owner of Mt. McSaubu, makes with the schools. Under the agreement the city uses school gym space for recreation league sports while school students take advantage of its winter sports park.

It's great to see two entities like the school district and city working cooperatively for the betterment of children.

McSaubu staffers donate their time to make sure things run smoothly on the student ski days and city EMT Jeff Stevens volunteers his time to keep things as safe as possible.

The three-day event saw some major and minor injuries to students braving the slopes.

In spite of these bumps, bruises and breaks, we feel the opportunity for students to be introduced to the sports of skiing and snowboarding at both beginner and intermediate levels should be applauded.

Adam Russell hones his snowboarding skills at Mt. McSaubu Feb. 22 in conjunction with the City of Charlevoix's cooperative effort with local schools.

These children often return on the weekend to participate in former Charlevoix High School ski coach Erik Lundteigen's weekend Fun Races. These races take place every other Saturday and are open to all ages and skill levels. Lundteigen and others have volunteered their time to make the program a reality.

The next race day is this weekend, from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, March 4 at the ski hill located off Mt. McSaubu Road.

Too often our local school district and municipalities are bogged down by business leaving "think outside of the box" projects like this on the back burner. Congratulations to those involved who have made this possible.

Election theory: Candidate with the biggest signs wins

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

The following article was written a week before the Feb. 28 election.

Predicting the outcome of elections is a chancy business.

Most often such predictions are on polling of potential voters or exit polls after voting. I believe I have discovered a new way to predict elections, and not surprisingly, it is based on the examination of biology and evolution. Specifically, how many kinds of female birds and mammals select their reproductive partners.

Why a male peacock has such an enormous and elaborate tail puzzled people for many years. The tail is large and heavy enough to complicate the bird's life. It's more difficult to fly with such a tail. It's more difficult to escape from predators. What value such an appendage might have remained a mystery until someone noted that, when choosing a male partner, female peacocks preferred males with the largest and most elaborate tail. Speculation suggests that they do so because being able to carry and display such a troublesome structure indicated that the male bearing it was particularly healthy and might thus be a good choice as the father of offspring. Females clearly did the choosing, and once they had begun such choices, each generation was likely to be fathered by males with even more elaborate and larger tails.

If only peacocks showed such selection, the mystery would not be completely solved. But there are a large number of birds in which it has been clearly demonstrated that males with long and elaborate tails have more reproductive success than those with shorter feathers. Cruel experimenters have even modified the tails of male birds including swallows and African long-tailed widow birds, by either cutting of some of the tail feathers length or gluing on additional feather lengths. In all cases, males with the longest tail feathers were more attractive to females and produced more offspring in the next generation, assuring that long tail feathers would be inherited. There is even a tiny Peruvian hummingbird in which males have 12 inch long tail feathers that seem to perform the same function as the tail of a male peacock.

Birds are not the only creatures where males grow or display elaborate structures that seem to be attractive to females. Deer, elk and moose come to mind. A prehistoric Irish elk had antlers that spanned sometimes 10 feet, which must have been particularly fascinating to female elk at the time. All such male structures have mostly the function of assuring reproductive success by demonstrating that the male has sufficient energy to build and carry around elaborate, unnecessary things. Bigger or more expensive to make may be better.

If you like to consider people, think of BMW convertibles or Ferrari sports cars.

What does all this have to do with political elections? I note that the local candidates for First District Charlevoix County Commissioner have advertised their fitness for office with yard signs. One of the candidates has displayed larger yard signs than the others, and on that basis I am willing to predict that the candidate with the largest yard signs (not the most, but the largest) will be the winner.

Voters are not consciously choosing the largest yard signs, but it is difficult to find any evidence in recent national elections that they are choosing on the basis of substance rather than appearance.

Maybe voters are smarter than female peacocks and will not mistake size for substance. But if size really matters, our political future will have larger and more expensive yard signs. It's already true that nearly all winning politicians are those that spend the most money. Maybe we are not really any smarter or more observant than female peacocks.

Senior center is a blessing

Editor:

One of the blessings of living in a town like ours is the Charlevoix Seniors Citizens Center and the programs it institutes for the benefit and pleasure of the community.

One such event occurred last Tuesday evening as they hosted a marvelous Valentine's Day dinner. A wonderful menu, quick, unobtrusive service, music by a live band, and great company were all afforded to those who made their way to the center to celebrate the year's salute to romance.

Thank you to one and all who hosted such a celebration. It was delightful.

City of Charlevoix proposes new sign ordinance

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Gerry Harsch

Nearly a couple decades after it was adopted, the City of Charlevoix's sign ordinance may get some aesthetic and functional restructuring.

A public hearing on the proposed sign ordinance amendments is scheduled to take place at 7 p.m. on March 6 at City Hall.

Proposed changes include altered definitions, clearer intent and elaborating on the purpose of the ordinance from simply regulating outdoor signs to, as it is stated in the proposed ordinance, "Recognizing the mass communications needs of both businesses and other parties. Protecting property values and neighborhood character. Creating a more attractive business climate. Promoting pedestrian and traffic safety by reducing sign distractions, obstructions and other hazards. (And.) Promoting pleasing community environmental aesthetics."

According to Charlevoix City Planner, Gerry Harsch, there are nearly a couple hundred proposed changes to the ordinance amendments.

Who: Charlevoix City Council

What it is: Public hearing on sign ordinance

When: 7 p.m. on March 6

Where: City Hall

"It is essentially a rewrite of the entire ordinance, so the ordinance is significantly changed in terms of verbiage, but what is being provided for in the regulatory impact of the changes is not that great," Harsch said. "We changed things where we thought the definition could be made clearer."

He added, "It has not had a major revision since it was adopted sometime in the early (19)80s."

Another of the proposed changes to the ordinance is the issue of where billboards may be used within the city.

Harsch said, "Right now, there is no provision for highway advertising signs, which is considered exclusionary to anybody that would be concerned about the sign ordinance."

The state's City and Village Zoning Act states that a city cannot exclude a sign use as long as there is a demonstrated need and appropriate location for the sign.

"By saying in the ordinance (that) we do allow signs, they are limited to 32 square feet," he said. "We have included them in the ordinance, but regulated them to the extent that are only allowed in the industrial district."

According to Harsch, if passed, the only two places where a billboard would be allowed would be on one lot north of the city near the city limit and on the property occupied by Harbor Industries.

Harsch said since the current ordinance prohibits highway advertising signs, the city could be opening itself up to potential problems.

"This needs to be addressed," he said.

While there are many proposed changes to the sign ordinance, Harsch said the allowance of certain types of signs are some of the bigger changes.

"The fact that we are trying to address the issue of highway advertising signs is so we don't end up where the city is exclusionary about highway advertising. Until now, we couldn't regulate it because we haven't addressed it," he said. "Another significant change is providing for business center signs, where we don't currently, so at a shopping center we can have a legitimate sign for that as a center."

He added, "And then, we've basically tweaked some things such as wall signs to make them more realistic in keeping with what is actually the practice."

Harsch said, although he can't be certain, 25 years ago when the ordinance was originally prepared, it was probably done without the involvement of a professional as is the case in many small communities.

"That sign ordinance was probably prepared by a committee of people in the community, but there's been a lot of water over the dam as far as these types of ordinances go and we're more knowledgeable at this time and can write a little better ordinance," he said. "Frankly, the ordinance we have in place functions very well, we don't have any real problems with it."

But, he said, the attempt is to hedge any potential problems which could arise in the future.

As it stands, a sign ordinance allows a government body to have dangerous or unattractive signs removed or repaired and limit them from becoming obstructive or distracting.

Some things which could prevent a sign from being allowed in any district include any signs which are filthy, in disrepair, inconsistent with standards set forth in the ordinance, are unsafe or appear to direct traffic. Except those which direct traffic on private property, deter intersection visibility, commercial advertising flags, banners, pennants, streamers airborne devices, portable signs and roof signs.

Some temporary signs, including real-estate signs, real-estate development signs, construction signs, political signs, yard sale signs and temporary event signs are allowed, each with certain restrictions, without first obtaining a permit.

In certain cases, such as "unique circumstances or physical conditions" the Charlevoix Zoning Board of Appeals may allow a variance from the sign ordinance so long as the applicant establishes, "strict compliance with its provisions (which) will render conformity unnecessarily burdensome."

After the public hearing, the city council could adjust the proposed changes before voting on them.

Girl Scout troops rally for cookie sale fund-raiser

On Feb. 22 Charlevoix Area Girl Scouts gathered at the Charlevoix Middle School for their annual Cookie Rally — an event to kick-off for the group's annual cookie sale.

This year's cookie rally was billed as Cookie College, educating girls about the varieties available for sale while emphasizing safety protocols.

According to Charlevoix Community Cookie Chair, Stephanie Brown, the cookie sale is about more than making money for the projects, activities and events in which Girl Scouts participate.

"It's also about learning valuable life skills and business literacy," she said.

Through the sale Girl Scouts learn and practice skills such as money handling, budgeting and planning.

Girls learn the importance of knowing their product and servicing customers with a friendly smile and get an appreciation for others with the Gift of Caring Program.

Through Gift of Caring, girls have the opportunity to help less fortunate members of the community or show appreciation for public service employees.

Each year, individual troops select a local non-profit organization to receive donated boxes of cookies.

This year, some of the donations will be going to the VFW, hospice, hospital volunteers, BASES, the Women's Resource Center Safe House and Good Samaritan Family Services.

Donald Jadwin: died Feb. 20, 2006

Donald Jadwin

Donald Allen Jadwin died at 10:15 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 20 in Mt. Dora, Fla.

He continued to live a full life with his wife, Dona Jadwin, in Mt. Dora, Fla. eight months of the year and at his Charlevoix home on Lake Michigan four months of the year.

Joan Jadwin, the mother of Don's sons, Steven and Charles Jadwin, preceded Donald in death in 1988.

Donald was born in Holly and moved to a farm with his aunt and uncle in Palo. During the depression, he finished high school in Ann Arbor and enlisted in the army immediately thereafter, as the World War II broke out. In the army, Donald traveled halfway around the world and fought his portion of the war in India.

Donald returned after World War II and entered Michigan State University on a land grant scholarship from the armed forces. There he met Joan Clare Heise of Charlevoix. After the two of them finished their degrees at Michigan State University, they married in Charlevoix and moved to Flint where they resided for the following three decades.

Donald and Joan raised two sons and completed their careers in the Flint area. Upon retirement, they returned to Charlevoix, their love of Lake Michigan and the northern forest. Joan Jadwin passed away almost two decades ago and Donald had the great fortune to meet and marry a past friend and friend of the family, Dona McEachem Zeis.

Don and Dona have had a delightful time living in Mt. Dora, Fla. and Charlevoix. Donald split almost all of his time between his work at Masonite Corporation and raising his sons in Flint. He participated in Indian Guides, the Boy Scout Program, and later with high school sports. As his sons entered college, Donald returned to Eastern Michigan University to retain a master's degree in social work. During this time, he moved from a sales career to work at Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Flint, where he finished his working career.

Throughout his life, Donald has enjoyed both the outdoors and the indoors. He loved hiking, biking, boating and travel. He enjoyed woodworking and construction projects with his sons. In retirement, he continued to involve nature and religion in his life. He gained great joy following the artist and photographic endeavors of his wife, Dona Jadwin and reviewing the progress and growth of his sons, step-daughter and grandchildren. We will miss him as he moves from this life to the next.

Don is survived by his wife, Dona; sons, Steven (Pamela) Jadwin of Swartz Creek, Charles (Nona) Jadwin of Charlevoix; step-daughter, Peg (Ed) DuBuc of Flint; grandchildren, Laura, Elise, Daniel, Elizabeth and Rebecca.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be sent to Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Michigan, 902 East 6th Street, Flint, MI 48503.

A funeral took place Feb. 25 at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix.

Helen worked at the Fairbanks Bakery in Charlevoix and was a member of the American Legion Post #226, Auxiliary.

Helen married Robert A. Zeitler on May 24, 1940 in Charlevoix, and he preceded her in death on Dec. 4, 1983.

She is survived by her daughter, Roberta "Birdie" (Ken) Whitley of Charlevoix; sons, James (Tina) Zeitler and Gary "Tink" Zeitler of Charlevoix; grandchildren, James and Jacqueline Zeitler, Julie Farmer, Gregg and Jason Whitley; nine great-grandchildren; half brothers, Donald Murphy of Charlevoix, James "Pete" Murphy of Pittsburgh; half sister, Sharon (Howard) Herriman of Charlevoix.

Charlevoix man arraigned on prostitution and drug charges

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

A Charlevoix Township man accused of providing oxycontin and methadone to at least one woman in exchange for sex was arrested and arraigned last week in Charlevoix County District Court.

Lloyd Joseph Waltonen, 42, was arrested by Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater on Thursday, Feb. 22 and was arraigned that day in Charlevoix County District Court on three criminal sexual conduct felony charges, one count of prostitution and a delivery of a controlled substance charge.

He is being held in Charlevoix County Jail with bond set at $50,000 and will face a preliminary examination on March 7 in Charlevoix County District Court.

According to Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema, more charges may be added.

According to summaries of testimony by two women in an affidavit of probable cause given by to Charlevoix County Sheriff's detective corporal Chuck Vondra, Waltonen forced oral and vaginal sex in exchange for oxycontin and methadone.

A search warrant executed at Waltonen's residence on Feb. 9 resulted in seizure of pill bottles labeled Lloyd Waltonen containing methadone, oxycontin, amphetamines and Adderall XR pills.

Jarema said information gathered in the investigation that has taken place thus far alleges incidents of exchange of pills for sexual favors dating back to 2001 and extend through 2005.

Waltonen was charged as a habitual offender for two prior felony convictions from the early 1990s when he was convicted of assault with a dangerous weapon and a felony firearm violation. This means if found guilty of these charges he could face twice the maximum sentence prescribed.

Shannon Dibble named MHSAA scholar-athlete

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Shannon Dibble
(MHSAA) scholar-athlete.

There are four eligibility requirements to enter the scholar-athlete contest. According to the MHSAA, a student must be a senior with at least a 3.5 grade point average who has received at least one varsity letter before graduation and is enrolled and participating in interscholastic athletics at an MHSAA member school.

Shannon Dibble, a Charlevoix High School student and daughter of David and Maria Dibble, has been named a 2006 Michigan High School Athletic Association

"They are as good as it gets in Charlevoix High School."

Jim Kanine,
Charlevoix High School Athletic Director

"It's an enormous honor and it's very exciting," Dibble said. "And, I think it really embodies everything I've worked for throughout my high school career."

Dibble said the ability to show good sportsmanship while competing in sporting events in the good times as well as the bad is key to maintaining good character.

She added, "The bulk of the scholar-athlete contest application was a 500 word essay on the importance and value of sportsmanship in educational athletics."

Aside from maintaining a 4.0 grade point average, and being the 2006 Charlevoix High School co-valedictorian, Dibble has managed to earn four varsity letters over the course of her four years on the basketball team and three varsity letters over the course of her three years on the track team.

She is also the National Honor Society president as well as the yearbook editor for the second year in a row.

While Dibble isn't sure which college she will attend, she plans to study premed for a possible career in radiology.

Though only 32 students were chosen statewide, this year's MHSAA scholar-athlete contest yielded 2,145 applications from 470 schools. Of that, Dibble and fellow Charlevoix senior Nathaniel Sotuyo were two of 120 finalists chosen.

According to Charlevoix High School athletic director, Jim Kanine, the MHSAA made a great choice in Dibble and Sotuyo as finalists.

"They are as good as it gets in Charlevoix High School. And, they are as good as it gets anywhere else," Kanine said. "They just exemplify any qualities you want to have in a son or daughter. They are just amazing."

He added, "They are involved in volunteer work and if you ask them to do something, they will do it."

The scholar-athlete award and the $1,000 scholarship which accompanies it is the highest honor the MHSAA bestows, Kanine said.

Dibble will receive her award during ceremonies on March 25 at the Breslin Center in East Lansing.

The MHSAA is the private, not-for-profit organization which governs the athletic programs of 1,800 high schools as it pertains to common rules for eligibility and competition requirements.

In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. It should not be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, when to look or even to know what you're looking for to be informed. New business aims to solve human resources headaches

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Shawn Hall

Big city human resources expertise is now available in Charlevoix.

Shawn Hall, president and founder of On-Call Human Resource Services, relocated to Charlevoix from Grand Rapids in October 2005 and is now making her company's services available here.

"This is for companies that can't justify having a full-time HR person on staff. For a fraction of the cost they have someone with all the experience helping them," Hall said.

Hall, a member of the Society of Human Resource Management, has been in the human resources field for over 15 years. In that time, she has worked for small and large companies including major retailers and manufacturers.

"I've done all of the school of hard knocks things," she said. With a long history in the field, she said she can now tailor her services to the needs of individual clients. Helping write employee handbooks, establish hiring procedures, polish job descriptions and keep clients in-line with applicable labor laws are just some of the services she offers.

She said she is available for quick questions or larger projects.

"It's just a big headache that I can take care of for them. Business owners have numerous responsibilities and it's usually only the most pressing issues that receive attention," Hall said. "So keeping up on the latest regulations surrounding employment isn't a high priority. Unfortunately, that could lead to potential trouble."

"I believe that every business should have access to solid human resource policies and procedures even if they can't justify adding an HR professional to their staff. By contracting with On-Call Human Resource Services, companies are gaining that experienced manager and are then able to focus on their core business strategies."

Currently, Hall continues to service her accounts in Grand Rapids and has added an Emmet County customer. This has included those in manufacturing, restaurants, retail, massage therapy and health care.

On-Call Human Resource Services is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and by appointment.

For more information about On-Call Human Resource Services visit www.ohrsonline.com or contact Hall by phone at (231) 237-9645 or e-mail at shall@ohrsonline.com.

Boyne Rehabilitation center nears its goal

Floyd and Nancy Wright, head of the committee to raise funds for the Boyne Rehabilitation Center, a subsidiary of Charlevoix Area Hospital, recently announced that the capital campaign is nearing its goal.

"We are delighted to be able to be this close to the goal and are pleased that we are now just $50,000 short of the $500,000 goal we set at the beginning of this campaign," said Floyd. "This committee, and the people of the Boyne City area, have responded remarkably to the challenge and the end result will be a facility that can accommodate more patients who have rehabilitation and physical therapy needs."

Charlevoix Area Hospital President, Bill Jackson, said, "We are so very pleased with the community response thus far and are hopeful that more people will help to push this campaign over the top."

The expansion will double the size of the existing facility and will add important modalities not before offered on site, including a warm water therapeutic pool and expanded gym areas. The number of treatment rooms will be doubled, allowing 10 rooms for individualized care in a private setting. Industrial medicine patients will see improved and expanded space for evaluations and treatment and the pediatric treatment area will be greatly improved with additional space as well. The project is expected to be complete this spring.

Individuals or businesses interested in contributing to this project may call the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation at (231) 547-8502 during normal business hours.

You can now e-mail your organization's information to the Charlevoix Courier at news@charlevoixcourier.com

Council overturns decision to hire HR manager

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Jim Shull

Charlevoix City Council reversed its decision to hire a human resources manager for the city.

Under miscellaneous business at council's meeting Feb. 20, first ward councilman Boh Timms requested information on overturning a decision council made at its Feb. 6 meeting.

At that meeting, a tie vote of council to approve a proposal from city manager Mike Wiesner to instate a human resources position was broken by mayor Norman Carlson.

Timms, who initially voted in favor of the new position said after

"I don't think it's something you have to have a high-paid person doing."

Bob Timms,
First Ward Charlevoix City Councilman

further review of the city's situation and the proposed position he changed his mind.

"I don't think it's something you have to have a high-paid person doing. It's more of a clerk duty than a supervisor type deal," he said.

Wiesner had requested council combine the current part-time airport manager's position with part-time human resources manager's responsibilities to create a full-time position. The proposed wage was $42,214 with fringe benefits costing $29,972.

Jim Shull, the city's airport manager who has worked there for a little over a year, currently works about 16 hours per week at the airport. He has said the job requires about 20 hours a week.

Wiesner's proposal was to tack on 20 hours a week which the airport manager would dedicate to human resources issues including worker's compensation questions, health insurance issues, completion of the city's employee handbook, drafting of job descriptions, maintenance of employment records and coordination of hiring.

Wiesner said this would reduce turnover in the airport manager's position and would better address holes in the city's existing human resources program.

Shull, 45, recently entered his resignation from the airport manager's position to accept a business manager's job at Ballard's Plumbing and Heating in Petoskey. His last day is March 10.

He said his resignation was not related to the city's discussions of the human resources position.

In spite of council's recent decision, Wiesner maintains that the city needs a human resources manager on staff.

"I see the need for day-to-day contact," Wiesner said.

But Timms said he feels the work the city needs done can be "farmed out."

The city currently employs 50 full-time staff members, 34 of which are affiliated with one of two unions as well as employing 75 seasonal workers. In 2005 the city issued 191 W-2s.

These duties currently fall primarily on the shoulders of Wiesner's administrative assistant Linda Weller who has worked for the city since 1978 and city treasurer Rick Brandt.

However, Weller said this is taking up 25 percent of her time in the off season and about 50 percent of her time in the summer. She said her other responsibilities do not allow her to dedicate the time needed to human resources issues.

She said council's decision last week surprised her.

"I'm trying to evaluate other possibilities. This decision greatly affects everything I do with the city," she said. "God only made one of me."

First ward councilman Bill Haggard, who supports the city having a human resources manager on staff, said this recent decision leaves the city vulnerable.

"We are back to square one. I'm not sure exactly what will happen now," he said.

In this second council vote concerning the human resources manager's position, Timms along with third ward council member Shirley Gibson and second ward councilmen Gahe Campbell and Gene Beer voted against its creation. Haggard and third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain are in favor of creating the position.

Charlevoix student selected for Senate Youth Program

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Chuck Mason

For the second year in a row, Charlevoix is the hometown of one of only two students from Michigan selected for the United States Senate Youth Program.

From March 4 to March 11, Charlevoix High School senior, Chuck Mason, will be in Washington D.C. on a learning and sightseeing experience which is completely paid for by the William Randolph Hearst Foundation. All 104 students chosen for the trip will also receive a $5,000 scholarship to go toward undergraduate studies.

"I tried for it last year, but Chris Golski got the scholarship and went on to Georgetown," Mason said. "This year I applied and Jim Kanine and Mrs. Conway wrote letters of recommendation and I don't think they thought I would get it, and I didn't think I would get it."

Mason said he couldn't believe there was a chance of two students from the same city being chosen two years in a row.

"It's an amazing feeling to know that, what I've worked so hard for in all my life, has paid off towards my own advancement," Mason said. "I've probably been interested in politics since I was 12 or

13 years old."

Mason said, while he's not sure whether he wants to go into political, social or psychological sciences, he does know he wants to do something where he can work with people.

"My parents taught me to have genuine compassion for people. Through them I learned that, having your own agenda is not always the best way of achieving what you want. Sometimes reaching out and helping other people is the best way to accomplish that and working through the social sciences is the best way it can be accomplished," he said.

Mason said if he takes anything away from this experience, he hopes it will be, "More understanding as to why and how things happen in our government. You watch the media every day and watch news and read papers and you only know so much because only so much information is given."

Mason said he looks forward to the many activities planned for the week in the nation's capital.

"There are many intellectually stimulating things planned. Different speakers come in, we'll see the Capitol Building, the White House, the Pentagon and at least a day will be spent in the Senate."

He added, "This is only a beginning and then you can leap off from there. Hopefully this will help me establish a foothold."

The week in March will be Mason's fourth trip to Washington D.C.

"I've been there three times," he said. "Last year for the presidential inauguration, once in eighth grade for the regular trip and the other time was for a leadership conference."

According to the youth senate program Web site, the United States Senate Youth Program was established in 1962 by U.S. Senate Resolution 324 and originated by three U.S. senators because they felt the "continued vitality of our republic depends, in part, on the intelligent understanding of our political processes and the functions of our national government by the citizens of the United States."

"The program is set up to educate those who might spend their lives working in the government and trying to do better," Mason said.

This program allows two students from each state to spend a week in Washington learning how the federal government works.

The students get to hear policy addresses by cabinet members, senators, and officials from the Departments of State, the Department of Defense and other federal agencies.

Two dogs killed in Norwood Township house fire Feb. 26

At 6:23 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 26 the City of Charlevoix Fire Department was called to a structure fire at 1161 Norwood Road in Norwood Township, the Bruce O'Conner and Paula Pace residence.

Firefighters arrived to find a fire in the kitchen of the residence. Firefighters were able to extinguish the fire, but smoke damage affected the entire ground floor of the home. Damage to the basement was limited to water damage.

The fire started on the stove, when cooking was left unattended.

No people were injured in the fire.

However, two dogs were killed due to smoke inhalation. Two cats survived the fire and the whereabouts of a third cat is unknown.

Banks Township and Charlevoix Township fire departments responded for mutual aid and water supply assistance.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff Department also responded and handled traffic control duties.

Firefighters were on scene for about two-and-a-half hours.

Kur released from Whistleblower's judgement in individual capacity

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Mary Beth Kur

Former Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur will not have a judgment against her pertaining to the Whistleblower's Act lawsuit filed against her and the county.

An order dismissing Mary Beth Kur in her individual capacity, was signed by Thomas G. Power, a circuit judge in Grand Traverse County on Feb. 13.

This dismissal comes nearly nine months after two former Charlevoix County employees were awarded over $1 million dollars in the settlement of the Whistleblower's Act suit they brought against Kur and Charlevoix County.

"I was pleased to see that the judge granted our motion," Kur said.

Kur said the judgment has been satisfied and this dismissal is merely a housekeeping matter.

"It's the final piece of paper after a trial is over with. It sets forth what the verdict is," she said. "The long-range practical effects of it, I guess, remain to be seen."

This most recent activity pertaining to the Whistleblower's Act case comes just weeks after one of the plaintiffs from the suit, Jacqueline Rozema, filed another lawsuit against the county requesting she be granted $400,000 in damages for future health care costs.

Juniors: The time to plan for college is now

John Prescott
'Kids' corner'

As spring approaches, it is a critical time for high school juniors to begin to get into the "serious mode" for their college planning.

Too often juniors think that college is all about their senior year and they have an attitude of, "I'll get to that next year," when in reality, they are already late in the process.

At Charlevoix Public Schools, the High School Student Services Office informs students as early as their freshman year to attend "College Nights" in order to gain a better understanding of what colleges expect from them before they apply.

When it comes to college selection, the first thing that a student should be looking at is the program of study. Too often a student wants to attend a college for all the wrong reasons. It could be that they have seen the college's basketball or football team on television and think it would be really cool to be one of those students with their face painted holding the sign, "Hey mom, send money." Or sometimes it comes from family pressure. Though these might be good reasons for some, they aren't the best for most students.

Students should begin to look for colleges that offer their program of interest. A good example of this is the student who wants to be a lawyer chooses a school with a good pre-law program. Caution should be applied here, because keep in mind, colleges are businesses looking for your money. They may not have a pre-law program, but they do have a "related program." Using our pre-law student as an example, this could be a social studies major with emphasis on the law of the United States, not a true pre-law program.

A close second to the college selection is the cost. In today's world, I hate to say that cost interferes with education, but it does. Too often students say they want to go out-of-state to attend college, but out-of-state tuition is nearly double or even triple in-state costs. Parents need to understand that college will cost money and for many this means incurring loans to pay for tuition and fees. It's a rare case these days to see a full, four-year all expense paid scholarship.

The junior year is the year the students should begin finalizing their searches and narrowing down their choices. It's good for students to have three types of choices for their post-secondary education. The first choice is the "dream school." This is the school that they have dreamed of going to since they were little. The second choice is a school that would still fulfill their desired college major with maybe slightly lower admissions standards. The third choice is the college that still has their program of interest, but has an open-door admission policy.

As stated earlier, college will cost money and many people shy away from the private schools because of the cost of attendance. Parents and students should understand that though the initial cost might be high, there are many grants and scholarship programs available at these schools that are not available to students who attend public institutions. Every student is different when it comes down to what these schools will offer, and before you reject the private schools, parents should sit down and review some of the scholarships available to their child.

Size is also a factor to consider. Sometimes just the size of the school is too overwhelming for the student with in the past. It may have sounded great at graduation to be accepted at one of these schools, but when their classes are miles away from their dorm rooms and there are no friends to walk to class with, it sometimes seems easier to just come home.

The best way to avoid these mistakes is to visit the campus, and I mean visit, not going to hang out with other students, but to really visit the campus. Parents and their student should take the admissions office guided tour of the campus. Request to sit-in on classes and see what really takes place in the college classroom. It is also wise to ask to speak with the instructor within the department that your child will be applying to in the future. For example, if your child wants to be an elementary teacher, ask the admissions counselor if you could possibly speak with the department chair or lead instructor for the department of education. When you make that contact, ask to speak with students in the program, and get their insight into how to better prepare for what lies ahead for your child.

The application process itself can be overwhelming for some. Some applications are very simple to do where others may require three essays to be written by the student as well as three recommendations from school staff and community members. Some larger schools will require this just to see how serious students are about attending their institutions.

The application process is becoming more and more technical each year. Many schools have their applications on-line and some have done away with the paper applications. Students should be prepared to take some time to first review the application before filling it out. It's critical that they complete all parts of the application and not delay their acceptance by leaving something blank.

When students complete their applications on-line, the students typically will get a counselor verification page that they will take to their high school guidance office. The counselor will then verify the student's class rank, grade point average and list of classes and credits. The counselor will then forward that information and the student's transcript to the college.

Most importantly, the process should be started early. Applications are on-line and it is never too early to review what is going to be required, by going on-line and seeing what each college is going to request. If you have more questions contact your local school counseling office.

John Prescott is the counselor at Charlevoix High School. He can be contacted by calling (231) 547-3222.

'Must reads' from library director Valerie Meyerson

The following is a list of age-specific books selected by Charlevoix Public Library director Valerie Meyerson for March reading.

Harriet Ziefert, "Circus Parade."

Ages 2-5
Ziefert's whimsical characters portray the visual music that is the Circus Parade. The clowns, animals and children are all having fun as they march to the "rum-a-tee-tum" of the drums. This story is a fun-loving romp, full of anticipation, waiting for the circus.

Judy Cox, "Don't be silly, Mrs. Millie!"

Ages 4-6
This is the perfect book for a child hesitant to go to kindergarten. Mrs.

Millie is a silly kindergarten teacher who uses funny words throughout the day, evoking giggles from all her students. She starts the day by asking the students to hang up their "goats," and ends the day with a wave and a "butterfly." Of course, the children think she is hilarious and magically get through their day of learning and adventure with smiles.

Judy Allen, "Fantasy Encyclopedia."

Ages 8-14
This is a comprehensive guide to creatures and peoples from folklore and fantasy. There are beautiful drawings and photos to accompany each entry, some of which you will recognize. My favorite part of the book though, is each entry includes cross-references to books and movies where the creature is featured. A great read for lovers of this genre as well as for parents looking for the next good book for their child to read.

Dawna Markova, Ph.D., "The Smart Parenting Revolution."

For parents
Parents often focus on correcting their child's weaknesses. This book offers ideas, activities, and strategies to identify and strengthen a child's passions and purpose in life. By understanding a child's assets, parents are better able to help them succeed in school and life. A very hands-on approach to helping your child develop self worth. Highly recommended in the sea of parenting books.

City Council will not pursue sanctions from Eveleighs

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

In a 5-1 vote on Feb. 20 Charlevoix City Council accepted a $2,900 payoff from Grewal and Associates P.C., attorneys involved in a land dispute between Charlevoix residents Robert and Mary Eveleigh and the city.

"Early on the city offered to enter into an order to dismiss the case without attorney fees. That was something their (the Eveleighs') attorneys (Grewal and Associates P.C.) should have obviously accepted," city attorney Jim Young said.

According to Young, this settlement agreement closes the appeal filed by the Lansing based law firm Grewal and Associates P.C. on Jan. 9 with the Michigan Court of Appeals.

This appeal followed a final judgment made by Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas on Nov. 4, 2005. In this judgment Pajtas determined that the lawsuit filed against the city by Grewal and Associates P.C. on behalf of the Eveleighs was frivolous.

In this final judgment Pajtas ruled in favor of the defendants and granted them sanctions including $6,563.21 to the City of Charlevoix; $3,300 to the Sheffer family that owned the Eveleigh property before them; and $7,257.50 to Northern Michigan Title Company, the title company that handled the property split.

Under this ruling the city is entitled to collect $6,563.21 from Grewal and Associates P.C. or the Eveleighs. City council's vote did not include pursuit of sanctions against the Eveleighs.

Mayor Norman Carlson said, "In their (the Eveleighs) mind they truly believe it was not frivolous. I would hope we take the $2,900 from the attorneys and put the matter to rest."

However, third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain disagreed. He was the lone vote against the settlement because he feels the city should pursue sanctions against the Eveleighs.

"I'm tired of frivolous lawsuits and no one being held responsible. The city spent a lot of time explaining the facts to her (Mary Eveleigh)," Chamberlain said.

The Eveleighs sued the city and the other parties claiming their property was illegally split in the 1980s; thus making it difficult for them to sell it.

The couple considered a property sale about two years ago.

In a previous interview, Mary Eveleigh said, "It's a mess, in essence we don't have a marketable piece of property."

According to court documents, the Eveleighs claim the property they bought on land contract from the Sheffers at 208 East Dixon Avenue was illegally split in 1984 from another section of land owned by the Sheffers.

They claim the city did not take action on this matter when it was discovered and did not enforce its ordinances as a result. They further claim Northern Title did not conduct a thorough title search.

In a memo from city attorney Bryan Graham to city planner Gerry Harsch with regard to this matter he states that the city has no record of the split. But in 1985 the city recorded the division on the city tax roll and separately assessed the parcels.

"The city cannot now take legal action to force the recombination of the parcels to their pre-1984 configuration," Graham stated.

Graham said the Eveleigh property is recognized as a non-conforming lot of record and can be sold as such. He said this designation does not limit use of the property.

"There was absolutely no basis for this lawsuit," Graham said.

But the Eveleighs disagree and feel the city acted unlawfully in designating the property as a non-conforming lot of record.

The Eveleighs claim the city also "invoked its zoning powers by creating spot zoning on the (Eveleigh) property from R-1 to R-2, thereby depriving them of their property."

The Eveleighs had visited the Charlevoix City Council on the matter in the fall of 2004. They claimed the previous owners of the property, the Sheffers, split the lot without going through the proper procedures that were in place according to city and state law.

However, after several meetings on the matter with the Eveleighs, Young informed them and city council that the lot was not illegally split according to laws in the city at that time.

There are different laws dealing with lot splits in place now, including the 1997 Land Division Ordinance that would make a split such as theirs illegal now, Young said.

Rayders to host basketball district finals

Haske: Team inconsistent leading into playoffs

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders upped their record to 11-7 overall and 8-5 in the Lake Michigan Conference with two more league wins, defeating Elk Rapids, 71-64 and Boyne City, 85-70. The Rayders also lost at Kalkaska, 81-69.

"We've been up and down all year," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "I don't know if it's our youth, our lack of a true big man or what, but we're hoping for more consistency."

The Rayders don't have much time left for improvement as they close out the regular season this week and host the districts next week for the first time since 1998.

It was a two-pronged attack that led Charlevoix past Elk Rapids as sophomore Dustin Dibble and junior Matt

Kautz combined for 48 points in the win.

The Rayders led 21-11 after the first quarter but went cold and were outscored by the Elks in the middle two quarters, 38-

22. Charlevoix overcame the deficit in the fourth quarter with a 28-15 advantage to close out the game.

"We started the game flat, had two really ugly quarters and played a good fourth quarter," Haske explained.

Dibble finished with 25 points, seven rebounds and three steals. Kautz had 23 points, six assists and six steals. Mitch Crandall had a double-double with 11 points and 11 rebounds.

At Kalkaska, the Blazers used a 23-14 second quarter lead to take a 12-

Dibble again led Rayder scorers with 23 points and seven rebounds. Crandall had 15 points and eight rebounds.

Charlevoix used a huge 32-12 third quarter advantage to come from behind and take control against Boyne City.

"I thought we played one of our best quarters of the season (in the third quarter)," Haske said. "And that was the difference in the ball game."

Crandall scored 18 points, Dibble had 16 and Kautz 14. Derek Friske and Tyler Haske each scored nine. The Rayders played at East Jordan on Tuesday, Feb. 28. Results were not available at press time.

They close the regular season at home against unbeaten and Class D no. 1 ranked Bellaire at 6 p.m. this Friday, March 3.

Charlevoix hosts the district and opens play at 6 p.m. on Monday, March 6 against Harbor Springs.

The winner of that game will play Boyne City at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 8. The district final will be at 7 p.m. on Friday, March 10.

Rayder volleyball team enters districts on a winning streak

By SCOTT RICHARDS
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayder varsity volleyball team picked up two more victories as they head into district play.

The lady Rayders traveled to Harbor Springs on Monday, Feb. 27 to battle Harbor Springs and Grayling and came away with wins against both.

According to head coach Liz Grunch, she was pleased to see the team compete successfully in spite of the loss of Zita Anderson, one of the team's key players, who is recovering from an unplanned surgery.

Grunch had to call up Desi Faust from the junior varsity team and said, "She had to fill in some pretty big shoes, and she did."

Faust had 26 assists, 10 aces and 7 kills against Harbor and Grayling on Monday.

Anderson will miss the rest of conference and district play while she recovers.

The Rayders were perfect in all their matches against Harbor Springs with the scores of 25-11, 25-16 and 25-18.

Grayling also fell to the Rayders by scores of 25-8, 25-19 and 25-19.

The totals for Monday were Ashlie Bradley with 19 kills, 8 digs and 22 assists. Bethany Pearson had 11 digs, 5 blocks and 11 kills. Murphy Gillespie and Sally Haselschwardt each had 7 kills. Emily Heffling had 14 digs and Jourdan Holecheek had 5 kills.

The last Charlevoix volleyball Lake Michigan Conference game at 4:30 p.m. this Thursday, March 2 at Traverse City St. Francis.

They return to Traverse City St. Francis for districts. In their first match of the tournament they will face Suttons Bay at noon on Saturday, March 4 in a best of five game.

"Once the districts begin it's a one game season," Grunch said. "Whoever shows up with their best game is going to take it, it's not going to be easy, Suttons Bay is the team to beat."

If the Rayders win their district opener, they will face either Traverse City St. Francis or East Jordan later that afternoon.

Courtesy photo

Mat Golovich was one of four Charlevoix High School wrestlers to compete at the Individual Regional Tournament Feb. 25 at Manton High School. Jeff Golovich and Jed Daman qualified for the state championship to take place March 8 at the Palace of Auburn Hills.

Entering with four and exiting with two, the Charlevoix Rayder wrestling team traveled to Manton High School on Saturday Feb. 25 for the Individual Regional Tournament.

Seniors Jeff Golovich, Jed Daman, Matt Novotny and freshman Mat Golovich all competed in the event. At 119 pounds, Mat Golovich started off the day wrestling the two time national freestyle champion Riley Ewalt, who is a freshman at Carson City with a record of 42-0. Golovich fell to Ewalt by pin. His second match was against senior, Josh Kotecki from Muskegon Catholic with record of 25-16. Golovich was pinned at 2:50 minutes.

Ending his season with 38 wins and 14 losses, Mat Golovich broke the school record for freshman wins when he passed 27 on Feb. 4. He qualified for regionals as a freshman and had 14 pins this season.

Wrestling at 145 pounds, Daman ended the day Saturday with a 3-1 record. His first match was against senior Mike Barnhart from Carson City (36-16). Daman won by decision with a score of 11-9. His second match was against senior Zac Maloney from Whittamore Prescott (53-0) and fell with a final score of 14-6. Junior Tyler Schuitman from Rogers City (41-15) came next and Daman defeated him by decision 8-4. Fighting for the third place medal and trip to the State Championships Daman outscored junior Rubin Flores from Holton (43-4) 7-5 during the last match of the day.

Daman's record is now at 48-8. Novotny wrestled at 152 pounds on Saturday. His first match was against senior Derek Russell from Kent City with a record of 43-4. Novotny lost by pin. Wrestling senior Shane Vigilante from Belmont (39-13), Novotny fell by decision with a final score of 12-3.

Ending his career with 111 wins and only 62 losses, Novotny had 19 pins and a final record of 35-17 this season.

At a light 189 pounds, Jeff Golovich took on senior Ryan Dubie from Hesperia (31-18) on Saturday morning. Jeff Golovich won by major decision with a score of 10-1. Next came first seated senior Ben Dollinger from Carson City. Golovich fell 5-1. Wrestling senior Nathan Bayne from Holton (44-14), Jeff Golovich dominated with decision score of 12-5. In his final match of the day, Jeff Golovich wrestled Dubie again, pinning him in 2:58 minutes. This placed him third in regionals. With a current record of 47-5, Jeff Golovich will be traveling to the Palace of Auburn Hills on Wednesday, March 8, along with Daman, for the Individual State Championships.

Grant deadline for community foundations

Once again, it's time to put local charitable dollars to work on behalf of the community.

The Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation are inviting nonprofit organizations, educational institutions, and municipalities who are in need of funding to submit grant requests in support of their projects.

During the next few months, the community foundations and their Youth Advisory Committees will review grant proposals to help fund health initiatives, community development projects, education, the arts and cultural events, environmental efforts, and human service programs. The Youth Advisory Committees, which are made up of representatives from high schools throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties will award grants to programs that serve children and teens.

Programs chosen for funding must serve residents of Emmet or Charlevoix County and have a non-profit tax status. The deadline for grant requests is April 3.

Applications are available by calling the community foundation office in your county. All applicants must call and discuss their proposals in advance. Foundation staff are available to offer advice and assistance to organizations interested in submitting a proposal for funding consideration.

Both community foundations are grassroots charitable organizations made up of various funds—all of them established by local donors. Some funds are earmarked for specific causes, and others are open-ended to meet changing needs. The funds are held in permanent endowment, so they can continue to grow and generate income to enhance the quality of life in Charlevoix and Emmet counties, now and for generations to come. Together, the community foundations grant-making total amounts to over $11 million since 1992.

For more information about the grant-making process, establishing a fund, or making a gift, contact the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation call (231) 348-5820, or visit www.petoskey-harbor-springs-foundation.org. Contact the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI, 49727, or by phone at (231) 536-2440.

Ragamuffins present Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory

Ragamuffin Theatre & Company of Charlevoix will be presenting an "interactive" musical theater version of Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory, at 7 p.m. on March 3 and at 2 p.m. on March 4 at the United Methodist Church in Petoskey.

Both shows are sponsored by Petoskey Children's Nursery to raise funds and awareness of the school as a positive resource in the community.

Coordinator Karla Stokel experienced last summer's presentation of Willy Wonka in Charlevoix and couldn't wait to bring it to Petoskey.

"It's such a delightful event, and I loved the idea of combining theater with activity. My kids are still talking about it even though they saw it last summer, and they can't wait to participate again," Stokel said.

Lead actress, Brittni Whittaker's light-hearted, sly portrayal of Wonka is well worth the ticket price.

"Her eye-movements, imperturbable facial expressions, impish smile and side glance, are reminiscent of Gene Wilder's classic performance," states production attendee R.G. Sell in a review of the show.

Aside from being entertained by a large cast of Oompa Loompas, audience members will have the opportunity to take part in a variety of different "chocolate factory" games, which of course includes eating lots of chocolate.

Ragamuffin Theatre will select volunteers for activities throughout the evening's program. Willing participants will then search for hidden golden tickets; build their own everlasting gobstoppers; and compete for prizes during the fizzy lifting liquid "burp" contest.

"Everyone will leave with a prize of some sort," said director Kathleen Whittaker. "This event is about discovering the beauty of pure imagination while celebrating the child within."

The classic story will be told in a creative new way and is not limited to children. Adults will be invited to join in the fun of creating memories with their children or grandchildren, by experiencing interaction similar to the productions main characters, Charlie and Grandpa Joe.

Tickets are $10 each, and can be purchased on-line by visiting www.RagamuffinTheatre.com, or by calling (231) 348-6949. You may also purchase tickets at the door. However, seating will be limited each performance.

Council hires Pollack Design to coordinate East Park renovations

Peter Pollack

According to Peter Pollack, principal designer for Pollack Design Associates, he made high construction estimates in formulating the contract.

That means if construction bids come in lower than estimated the total charge will go down. However, if costs come in higher than the estimates his fees will increase accordingly.

Pollack has been closely involved with the East Park and Charlevoix Municipal Marina renovation projects since planning first began about five years ago. He handled all the initial planning meetings for the city and drafted preliminary designs.

Pollack said in this next stage, a team he has formed including five other groups will take the project through completion. Groups he is working with are architect, Mark Buday of Harbor Springs, Performance Engineering of Charlevoix, Acoustics by Design of Grand Rapids and Ann Arbor and Peter Basso of Novi who is an electrical and mechanical engineer.

City council authorized Pollack to begin work immediately. Now, he and Brian Barrick, the East Park project manager for Pollack Design who has extensive experience in construction and landscape architecture, will begin creating construction design documents to prepare the project to go out for bids in June or July.

Aside from design and bid work, Pollack's firm and representatives of the five groups included in his team for this project, will also provide oversight during construction.

"We are interested in producing a product that is as good as it can possibly be," Pollack told city council. "The role of my team is to act literally as an intermediary between the owner (the city) and the construction companies."

Wiesner said he anticipates at least five contractors being hired to tackle both the marina and park projects. Pollack will make recommendations to city council as to who should be hired to handle park changes. City council will make that final determination.

East Park changes include demolition of the existing Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce building and harbor master's headquarters and construction of a new harbor master's building and boater support facility at the foot of Clinton Street.

Construction on the harbor master facility is expected to begin Sept. 13 with completion in March 2007.

A new performance venue will be built at the south end of East Park. Demolition of the existing bandshell has been slated for Nov.

5, 2006 with construction of the new facility starting a week later, on Nov. 12, 2006.

The marina design contract with United Design Associates of Cheboygan was approved in February of 2005 for $244,000.

The marina project will include replacement of the sea wall, removal of the existing 17 docks which at the furthest point extend 75 feet into Round Lake and replacement of those docks with a 67-slip floating dock system that extends 220 feet into Round Lake at the furthest point.

Dock work is expected to take place from April 15, 2007 through May 27, 2007.

According to the preliminary project schedule, construction will begin with sea wall replacement preparation starting on July 23, 2006. Bids for this project will go out this month.

Wiesner said the construction start date will result in the late season loss of seven existing docks. On the flip side, he said the early start will allow for a cushion in spring 2007 which will allow contractors to lay sod in East Park in preparation for the grand opening of the completed project.

The final site review for the total $8.1 million East Park and marina overhaul is expected to take place on May 27, 2007.

In December 2005, 75 percent of the two project cost, or $5 million, was secured from the Michigan Waterways Commission. The Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority will pay for the $3.1 million balance.

Equalization Ratios, as shown, are the percentages of assessed valuations to true cash value as determined by a survey of individual assessments. The Multipliers are those necessary to bring the Ratios to the required 50% of estimated true cash value. The Multipliers, as shown, are tentative and subject to change as the result of possible adjustments by individual assessing officers. Assuming that no adjustments are made, the Multiplier may be applied to each individual valuation.

New Courier publisher named

Doug Caldwell of Pennsylvania appointed

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

On April 1, the Charlevoix Courier will welcome a new publisher.

On Thursday, March 2, Schurz Communications Inc., an Indiana based news and information company in the process of buying Northern Michigan Review, the parent company for the Charlevoix Courier, announced that Doug Caldwell will serve as the newspaper's new publisher.

The ownership change from the Schaller family to Schurz Communications is expected to be complete by early April and Caldwell has said he will likely come aboard later this month.

The purchase of Northern Michigan Review includes the following publications: The Charlevoix Courier, the Petoskey News-Review, The Gaylord Herald Times, The Graphic, Super Shopper, PhoneGuide and Saturday.

Caldwell, 48, has served as publisher of the Daily American, a Schurz newspaper in Pennsylvania's Somerset County, for about four years.

At the Courier, he'll replace Ken Winter, the current publisher and Petoskey News-Review editor and publisher, who has worked with Northern Michigan Review publications for 34 years. Winter announced his plan to step aside in early February and will leave the company April 1.

Caldwell, a Texas native, visited Petoskey for the first time in late February.

His ties to the newspaper business started in his teens when he began working at Illinois weeklies owned by his parents.

Caldwell obtained a bachelor's degree - with a journalism major and psychology minor - from Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

In 1987, Caldwell obtained his first publisher's position at the Evening

Call, an American Publishing newspaper in Du Quoin, Ill. It would be the first of several publisher and regional manager positions he would hold at newspapers around the Midwest before joining Schurz's Daily American as general manager in December 2001. He moved into the publisher's position four months later.

During Caldwell's time with the Daily American, the newspaper reached several milestones including completion of a $2.4 million building project and an increased Internet presence.

Charles Pittman, senior vice president of newspaper operations for Schurz Communications, credited Caldwell with streamlining operations at the Daily American, producing a

City of Charlevoix unveils its $25 million 2006-2007 budget

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

East Park and marina improvements are the big stories in the City of Charlevoix's proposed budget for 2006-2007.

The proposed city budget for 2006-2007 shows a total of $25 million in it, but $13.7 million of that is money for capital improvement projects such as the marina and East Park renovations and $7.9 million of that is from federal and state grants.

The marina and East Park projects are at the top of this list with a total cost of $10,999,300. While this debt sits in the city budget, the state Waterways Commission will be paying for 75 percent of it and the Downtown Development Authority will cover the rest.

The second largest capital project is the airport clear zone purchase slated to cost $967,500. According to city treasurer Rick Brandt these funds will be used to purchase property off Old Norwood Road in Charlevoix Township where Waste Management used to operate, to ensure nothing is in the way of the municipal airport runway. Grants are paying for a large portion of that project as well with the federal government covering 90 percent of the cost and the state paying an additional 5 percent.

Some other projects in the capital expenditures list include Chicago Club area infrastructure improvements at $539,800, electrical system improvements at $370,000 and vehicle purchases for the city's motor pool at $233,000.

In addition to a large list of capital projects, the budget has traditionally shown a fund transfer from the infrastructure fund of about $100,000 into the general fund for stabilization.

Brandt said this will not happen in the proposed budget as the proposed operating millage has been levied at 9.05 mills, an increase of .55 mills bringing in an additional $100,900. Consequently, the infrastructure millage is proposed at 2.4021 mills, or $461,700, a reduction of .55 mills from 2005-2006.

"We can't levy more if we wanted to without a vote of the people."

The not so sunny side of Sunshine Week

Benjamin Gohs
'Staff writer'

Government entities and I aren't exactly what you would call chummy. Though I assure you, my disdain for them began well before my journalism career.

For those of you rolling your eyes and reaching for the Pepto-Bismol, let me say this: this antigovernment rant has more to do with Sunshine Week and less to do with my frustrations — I think.

Sunshine Week lasts from March 12-18 this year. It is designated to increase awareness about the importance of openness in all levels of government, from accessible public documents, to open meetings.

And, although we benefit anytime people demand more from their government, this week was designed not for journalists, but for the American citizen.

Your government has billions and billions of pieces of information on its roughly 320 million residents give or take a few million illegal aliens — that's the citizenship impaired for all you politically correct types.

The information ranges from who you are, what you do for a living and how much you earn, to how many children you have, how many times you've been stopped for speeding and what your mother's maiden name is.

We are even issued a serial number at birth like a piece of Tupperware or a spark plug. Somehow, people only find it horrifying when the "Social Security" number is tattooed on your forearm.

When city council awards a contract, when the county commissioners appoint someone, when township officials create ordinances, you ought to know what the cost is, who the applicant is, where and why a meeting is being held.

According to the Michigan Freedom of Information Act, any person (not in prison) may inspect, copy or receive a copy of a public record, regardless of age or residency.

And with all the information your supposed civil servants have on you, how much do you know about what they do in their tax funded offices and meeting halls?

Here is what you can know: Just about anything a councilman, commissioner or committee member has on the table in front of them during an open meeting can be requested by John or Jane Q. Public.

This means you are privy to handwritten, typewritten, printed, photostated, photographs, photocopies and every other means of recording.

The Freedom of Information Act states, "It includes letters, words, pictures, sounds or symbols, or combinations thereof, as well as papers, maps, magnetic or paper tapes, photographic films or prints, microfilm, microfiche, magnetic or punch cards, discs, drums or other means of recording or retaining meaningful content."

Further it states, "'Public record' means a writing prepared, owned, used, in the possession of, or retained by a public body in the performance of an official function from the time it is created."

While the "public record" is probably only a few percent of what we should be allowed to see, it is a start.

Is the Freedom of Information Act little more than a dog and pony show intended to appease disgruntled taxpayers? Possibly. Granted, it's easy for me to lecture about the importance of keeping an eye on the government since I get paid to go to the meetings. And, more times than not, local government meetings make a root canal sound enjoyable, but that doesn't make them any less important.

Don't get me wrong, I don't think the Freedom of Information Act or open meetings act are our great saviors. I defer to the Alcoholic's Anonymous slogan, "It only works if you work it."

Oh, officials may heap great, steaming shovels full of excuses as to why we shouldn't see these documents, why we shouldn't attend certain meetings, but that is to be expected.

That's how a democracy oppresses its citizenry, not with the loud end of a gun, but with the silent treatment.

A government employee once told me, "Some people are always looking for a hodgepodge." I'm much more afraid of the plain old man who lives off tax dollars and controls the information.

Sunshine Week may not be observed with cocktails and confetti, but it is definitely worth celebrating. For more information visit www.sunshineweek.org.

Michigan winters past, present and future

Gayle Gennett
'A look at life'

This is a Michigan winter. One minute rain sweeps through, melting the walkways with the promise of spring, then a quick freeze, then snow, then another thaw. I'm not sure whether to plow or plant from one day to the next.

The weather has caught the attention of many and what used to be the topic of retired folk is now in the news and played out in our governmental realm as well. Yes, the climate is changing and we'll not see the likes of heavy 20 foot snowfalls and 40 below temps returning to northern Michigan.

OK, I've been known to exaggerate but I spoke with a local well-respected senior citizen, Winnie Green, the other day and she doesn't tell tales. As we talked about the weather, she shared with me the recorded 40 degrees below zero in Central Lake on Jan. 11, 1917, the day she was born. The doctor arrived to her home by horse and sleigh as roads weren't plowed back then. What few cars existed in our area were stored away during the winter months and sleighs were utilized instead. Being the concerned retired teacher, I quickly asked about snow days. Winnie replied, "If you lived on a farm you missed school, arrived by horseback or stayed with friends in town." Teachers of course would find lodging in town next to the school.

Living in the Great Lakes region it is becoming apparent how we are affected by the changing climate due to the Greenhouse Effect. The discussions about global warming are complex, challenging and controversial.

The best I can understand is that energy from the sun controls the earth's weather. The earth's surface heats up from the sun and in turn, the earth bounces it back. Our activities on earth have led to a buildup of greenhouse gasses, mostly carbon dioxide. Some of this heat the earth radiates is staying in our atmosphere, retaining it like the glass panels of a greenhouse. So to put it simply we are retaining heat like some of us retain water.

Speaking of water, the Great Lakes are very sensitive to climate changes. With increasing warmth in our atmosphere, our future will probably see warmer summers, more rain in the winter, evening temperatures will rise slowly, migratory birds will return earlier and with increasing water temperatures that could mean fewer trout and more blue gills. Does that mean our new state fish may become the blue gill?

If our lake levels decline, irrigation and drinking water will continue to be an issue. Winnie reports that the Shook family farm is concerned about the lesser amounts of snow this year because that means lack of moisture for crops. The government and politicians are meeting to discuss climate concerns related to our Great Lakes. There is talk of utilizing crops such as switch grass, corn and poplar trees to produce ethanol fuel as this source does not emit significant amounts of carbon dioxide.

According to Judith Monroe, who heats her home by burning corn, corn can be replaced in 180 days. Compare that to trees which will take 30 years to replace. And then we wonder why are we paying the cost of importing oil when we have resources right here at home. New technology and innovation will help in tackling our fuel resources issue.

A lot has happened since the Industrial Revolution — some good, some not so good. Carbon dioxide would be at the top of my "not so good" list. Many individuals committed to developing new technology and policies are encouraging. We all need to help reduce emissions that are harmful to the atmosphere. I've decided to do my part in reducing environmental stress by replacing worn out appliances with new energy efficient ones is a start. I'll continue to re-cycle, plant trees, walk or bike when I am able, and by some day replacing my car with a hybrid and by supporting our local Shade Tree Commission by planting trees.

We all need to do our part. The environment can improve over time if we take steps to do so. I'll take my philosophy from Winnie Green, "Get involved, work together and take one day at a time." Now that's good fuel for thought.

Dove hunting doesn't make sense

Editor:
 I'm a pro-hunting Michigan resident. I am also for keeping Michigan's 100-year-old ban on shooting doves. Shooting doves doesn't make sense, especially since they pose no danger, are not a viable food source and are not overpopulated. And there are 40 other bird species to hunt. The pro-dove shooting crowd is trying to make folks like me out to be anti-hunting, but that's not true. I have tremendous respect for Michigan's hunting heritage, but dove shooting has not been a part of that heritage for a century. I believe in traditional Michigan values. Michigan values say there are a few things we shouldn't kill — bald eagles, endangered species and our official bird of peace, the mourning dove. Real sportsmen don't shoot doves. That's why polls show over half of Michigan hunters are against lifting the ban and why we should vote 'no' on the dove shooting initiative in November.

Fantasy condo development
 Editor:
 Is fantasy condo development coming to Charlevoix? The question comes up around a three-story structure, proposed for a .7 acre site on Pine River Lane. The building will have 12 apartment/kitchen suites and be operated condo-style. The developer says each individual owner will have the option of renting his or her suite when not staying there.

Pine River Lane is the predominantly residential street parallel to the channel leading visitors toward Lake Michigan. It provides a charming introduction to Charlevoix and a valuable contrast to the busy hotel intersection of Pine River Lane and Bridge Street.

The Pine River neighbors, and the other neighbors to the north on Dixon Avenue, think the project, at three stories, monolithic. So close to lot lines and only 25 feet from the sidewalk, is too hulking and out-of-character with the street and the neighborhood. Please redesign, they said, a condo project with more open spaces, larger setbacks, and a more residential feeling; any necessary zoning change for this kind of development will be encouraged by us, they added.

Although the street is predominantly residential, this particular parcel is C-1, commercial. This came about years ago when the widow, Mildred Campbell, hoped there might be small shops built on the steeply sloping channel bank part of her property. She asked for the re-zoning, but the project never matured. She later traded that part of the property to the city.

Now comes the fantasy part. Gentle reader, please stay alert. The developer, Catt Acquisitions, is quite frank in saying that to achieve their profit goal they want to build the biggest volume building that the site can possibly hold. Their problem is that condo, multi-family apartment buildings are not allowed in the C-1 district. The Catt Co. thinks it sees a way around the problem. They will pretend their multi-family apartment condo is a hotel, permitted in C-1. They will further pretend that they don't have to follow the hotel zoning code for sizes because Pine River Lane isn't the hotel district. Clever, huh?

The Charlevoix Planning Commission, the first step in the permitting process for this project, already has bought this fantasy hotel idea, even though the characteristics of a real hotel are not present. In a real hotel, the architecture follows the business model. Since they want to attract the traveling and vacationing public, real hotels have an open, welcoming, easily identified, easily navigated, vehicular and people entrances. Inside the entrance, is a reception area with a reception desk and an attendant on duty continuously. A real motel has these features, plus car parking near the rooms. A real resort, has these features plus amenities such as tennis, private beach and water sports, golf, lawn games, a restaurant, shops, etc. In contrast to these descriptions, this project looks like, inside and outside, a multi-family apartment building, condo, locked and fenced. Such a project should be in R-4, not C-1.

What will the city council members do when they decide to vote on this project? Stay tuned. I hope the council won't tie logic in knots, or wink at zoning regulations, or abandon common sense and go fantasy. Is a locked, fenced condo really a motel?

Isn't the best idea an orderly, controlled, growth of the city, achieved by following the zoning codes?

National debt
 Editor:
 The current National Debt (the total of all of the previous annual deficits combined) is at $8.2 trillion. That is a figure that's hard to imagine. To put that figure in perspective, it means that every American citizen, baby, child, teen, man and woman, owes the government $156,000 in order to pay off this huge mortgage.

The current administration has increased this national debt by $3 trillion. That's an increase of 40 percent in five years. Please think about this as the current Congress requests another $781 billion to pay off government responsibilities.

This deficit does have an impact on the average family. It drives up interest rates, which impacts future mortgage payments resulting in higher interest payments. Now add in the problems with Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid. Then ask yourself, do we really need another tax cut?

Regardless of political party affiliation, I urge citizens to take a hard look at what we have gifted to our grandchildren and to future generations. Please let your representatives in Washington know how you feel. It's time we ask politicians to get serious about fixing this problem.

Friends of the Library to host history of the Library of Michigan program

At 7 p.m. on Tuesday, March 14, at Charlevoix Public Library located at 109 Clinton Street, the Friends of the Charlevoix Public Library will host Fran Pletz who will share her research on the history of the Library of Michigan.

Originally a territorial library containing the laws and government documents for use by the territorial council in 1828, the Library of Michigan became the state library in 1837 when Michigan became a state.

Having served on the Board of Trustees of the Library of Michigan for 15 years, Pletz is uniquely qualified to discuss the development of the collection in Lansing, the commitment of the state to information services and the construction of the spectacular library building at the campus of the state capitol.

The public is invited to attend and to discover the wealth of resources which are available to every citizen of Michigan at our state library and which can be accessed at our own Charlevoix Public Library.

Charlevoix High School students attend civics commission seminar

While at the Capitol, students visited with Sen. Jason Allen and Rep. Kevin Elsenheimer. Pictured with Allen and Elsenheimer are: Michelle Lemond, Matt Novotny, Juli Neidert, Dan Elliott, Sally Haselschwardt, Nate Gilmore, Chuck Mason, Logan Niswander, Isaac Matchett, Nate Sotuyo, Genevieve Kohanny, Shannon Dibble, Kirstin Dupuis, Kenny Anderson, Shannon Gillespie, Elysse Michuna and Annemarie Conway.

On Feb. 28, Charlevoix High School students participated in the House Civics Commission seminar at the Capitol.

The Michigan House Civics Commission is an initiative of the Civics Institute, which believes that one of the best ways to teach civics is to engage students in governmental processes like creating, discussing and defending ideas for new laws.

With that in mind, teachers can download curriculum to use in class that can lay the groundwork for getting involved. To go a step further, students can vote on bill ideas at www.civicscommission.com, and can even create ideas for new laws and testify about them to the commission, at a public hearing. While at the Capitol, students visited with Sen. Jason Allen and Rep. Kevin Elsenheimer.

Local author publishes third book 'Field Guide to Optical Thin Films'

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Ron Willey

Chances are you don't even know it's there, but thanks to the work of scientists like Ron Willey of Charlevoix, astronomers can see the stars and you can take better photographs of your family.

Willey, a local author, has just published his third book entitled, "Field Guide to Optical Thin Films." The book covers one of the more specialized occupations in the world.

"It is an esoteric field as there are probably only 1,000 or 2,000 people in the world who work in the field at the engineering level,"

he said.

Willey said while most universities have a copy of his work, this isn't the kind of book that you pick up for a little light reading.

"This is the technology that I have been working on for decades. Optical coatings is a field that relates, in this case, to things as exotic as the Hubble space telescope and military guidance, but also as mundane as eyeglass anti-reflection coatings," he said.

Willey said the book came about as a compilation of notes from lectures over the years.

"I've taught courses in this field for many years. I taught at the Florida Institute of Technology years ago and have given talks throughout the country and Europe," he said.

Willey fancies himself somewhere between an engineer and a scientist.

"My whole career has been geared toward optical instrumentation, which in the early days was associated with missiles and military optical systems," he said. "But, sometimes it gets involved with commercial products as it relates to optical instrumentation."

According to Willey, one of the simplest applications are in telescopes where the mirrors have to have a metallic coating deposited on the glass to make it a mirror. "Our bathroom mirrors probably have an aluminum or silver coating on the glass, while Hubble is probably the same with a more sophisticated coating," he said. "The other extreme is where you want to eliminate reflections. Like on a camera, the two problems are loss of light to the film and ghost images."

Willey said the optical thin film can eliminate ghost images while ensuring the proper amount of light reaches the film. The films are also used in television cameras, color projectors and entertainment lighting where certain types of light need to be reduced.

"Another application is filters for the telecommunications world. These are very high-tech optical coatings used to isolate one channel from another," he said.

When someone has use for a coating, the wave length or color of the light is determined and a coating is designed to specification.

Willey's first book, published in 1996, was entitled, "Practical Design and Production of Optical Thin Films" and his next venture is working with his wife to publish her mother's memoirs.

Willey was born in Colorado, raised in Richmond, Va., educated in New England and lived in Florida for 32 years before moving to Charlevoix 11 years ago.

Willey Optical Consultants will hold a week-long course on Optical Thin Films in June at the Edgewater Inn.

As many as two dozen guests are expected to attend from all over the world.

Judge denies Lockman's modified injunction request

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Karla Sue Lockman

Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas denied an injunction modification request made by Karla Sue Lockman, a Boyne City resident charged with embezzling over $750,000 from a local business. Lockman requested the modification to allow her to pay for the services of her attorney, Fred L. Gibson. On March 3, Judge Pajtas cited the United States vs. Monsanto of 1989 which states, "There is no exemption from... forfeiture or pretrial restraining order provisions for assets that a defendant wishes to use to retain an attorney."

Gibson said he did not take Lockman's case simply to line

"The defendant has a right to counsel, but not at the expense of the victims."

John Jarema,
Charlevoix County Prosecutor

his pockets, but he did anticipate getting paid for his services.

"I am very concerned about Mrs. Lockman," he said. "And she is without funds to further my retention."

Charlevoix County Prosecutor, John Jarema, said the defendant is charged with embezzling, "an enormous amount of money."

"The defendant now wants to sell the assets which were obtained with money that we allege was obtained illegally to pay for her defense," he said. "The defendant has a right to counsel, but not at the expense of the victims."

Pajtas said, it has not been determined that Lockman's assets were derived from ill-gotten gains.

He added, that, though the Lockman case differs from the Monsanto case, his initial injunction will stand.

Under the existing injunction, funds from the sale of any of Lockman's assets must be directed to an account created by Gibson and cannot be used without permission from the court.

Lockman is charged with two counts of embezzlement by an agent or trustee of $20,000 or more, from Northern Preferred Title Company LLC. This crime is punishable by up to 10 years in prison and/or a $15,000 fine or three times the amount embezzled.

Lockman is alleged to have embezzled funds in the months of January and May 2005 while acting as a closing agent with the company.

Two civil suits, which were filed in United States District Court Western District of Michigan in 2005 allege Lockman may have embezzled as much as $975,023.64.

Northern Preferred has since severely curtailed activities and laid off 14 employees.

In December 2005, Lockman's trial which was set for January 2006, was postponed to June 5 following a forensic evaluation which questioned the status of her mental health.

According to the report authored by Lockman's examining physician, Dr. Jeffrey Wendt of the Center for Forensic Psychiatry, Lockman meets the statutory criteria for legal insanity.

Gibson said a major issue in this case is Paxil, a prescription drug used to treat depression and anxiety disorders.

Lockman was prescribed Paxil in August 2004. When her prescription was renewed by a physician in November 2004, Gibson said a mistake by a pharmacist resulted in a doubling of the dose.

He maintains Lockman took the double dose of Paxil while the alleged embezzlement occurred.

Lockman remains free on bond while awaiting the trial scheduled for June 5.

How often should you have your eyes examined?

The American Optometric Association generally recommends that infants have their eyes screened for congenital eye disorders and disease at birth before leaving the hospital. Eye examinations for children are recommended at six months, three years, and before the child enters first grade. Most school-age children and teens should see their doctor of optometry every one or two years, and adults benefit from eye examinations every one to three years (as recommended by the optometrist). Annual eye examinations are always a good idea for those over age 60. If you or a loved one is overdue for an eye examination, why not schedule one soon by calling any one of the fine professionals in your area.

Elsenheimer backs M-75 trunkline into Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

While a solution to the disrepair of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road is several years away, the ground work for making the project a reality is being done now.

State representative Kevin Elsenheimer is working with the Michigan Department of Transportation and local agencies and residents to have the county road transferred to the state. Parties involved are hoping this will increase project funding sources and lessen the burden on the Charlevoix County Road Commission.

Pat Harmon, manager of the Charlevoix County Road Commission, said an estimate for the project at this time is $5 million.

"That's a lot of cash. The government isn't allotting us that kind of money," he said. "If they can get money appropriated to reconstruct it, that's great. Otherwise, it's going to take a long time to do it."

While the Charlevoix County Road Commissioners have not discussed this possibility, Harmon said he is in favor of turning the road over to the state if the repairs will be made.

He said currently the Michigan Department of Transportation contracts with the road commission to maintain state roads located in the county. So, the agreement would not result in local layoffs.

Elsenheimer said in order for the project to be eligible for federal funding ownership of it will have to be transferred to the state.

Elsenheimer's interest in this project first peaked when he was approached by John Haggard, chairman of the Charlevoix County Republican Party.

Haggard said the proposal is to extend M-75, which loops between Boyne Falls, Boyne City and Walloon Lake, into Charlevoix by converting Boyne City-Charlevoix Road into an M-75 trunkline.

Haggard said in considering the project, he hopes the state will see value in connecting Young State Park, located off Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, to U.S. 31 which borders Big Rock Point, the former nuclear power generation site being decommissioned and considered for purchase by the state.

Elsenheimer said another potential benefit would be the road's accessibility in the winter to commercial traffic including trucks with heavy loads.

While connecting state parks and increasing commercial traffic are two possible benefits, Elsenheimer said his focus is also on safety.

"Upgrading that road would make it safer for everyone traveling it," he said.

Harmon said the road is still safe to travel at the posted speed limits but in many places along the 17 mile route from Boyne City to Charlevoix the blacktop is breaking up and the surface isn't smooth.

Work that needs to be done includes undercutting the sub-base in about two to three areas and laying new gravel on the shoulder. However, Harmon said the bulk of the cost is in the 3 inch blacktop surface that needs to be laid across the entire length of the road.

Harmon said if the county tackles it, the project will likely be done in five phases over 10 to 12 years.

The road is the next priority for the county. Right now its major focus is on completing Thumb Lake Road in Boyne Falls. This project is expected to be complete in summer 2007.

Elsenheimer said his progress may be no faster than the county's.

"We have no illusions about this happening quickly. These things take years. But the project has to start somewhere and I've decided to start it," he said.

Currently, Elsenheimer is initiating discussions with engineers from the Michigan Department of Transportation who will review the proposal with the hope of getting on the department's five-year plan.

He expects this to be discussed by the Michigan House Appropriations Committee and the department of transportation in the next three to four months.

Elsenheimer will be available at office hours to talk with residents about this project and others at 9 a.m. on Friday, March 24 in the first floor conference room at Charlevoix City Hall, located at 210 State Street in Charlevoix.

Strife continues in Norwood Township

Sadie Bartosik lone 'no' vote in appointment of Way to planning commission

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Denny Way

The Norwood Township Board appointed one of its members to the township planning commission during the Tuesday, Feb. 28 meeting.

A 4-1 vote was sufficient to appoint board member, Denny Way, to fill the vacancy left following the removal of former commission secretary Sadie Bartosik.

"My position is to follow the ordinances and laws of the township clearly. I have no agenda and I have nothing that would construe any conflict of interest," he said. "I feel good. I'm ready to get to work, I'm ready to get down to business and I feel like I can be an asset to getting some things accomplished."

Way is resigning from the Norwood Township Zoning Board of Appeals to prevent any conflict with his appointment to the planning commission. According to Bartosik, a Norwood Township Board member, she voted against Way because she feels she was removed from the planning commission improperly.

Bartosik stressed that her vote had nothing to do with Way's capability to serve on the planning commission.

"I think my rights were violated — my rights to due process," she said. Bartosik said she still isn't sure whether she will pursue any legal action on the matter.

"It doesn't seem fair to punish the township for something that wasn't their fault," she said.

Norwood Township attorney, Jack Turner, said he is unaware of any illegalities on the part of the township board pertaining to Bartosik's removal.

"Based on the information that I've reviewed, the township followed proper procedures," he said.

According to Norwood Township Planning Commission Chairman, Chuck Cleland, the planning commission was established pursuant to state law and is responsible for, among other things, involving citizens in planning activities.

"If (planning commission) is responsible for writing a master plan for the township, it is responsible for updating the master plan once every five years," he said. "It is responsible to examine applications for special-use permits and other permits to make sure they are in conformance with the master plan. And, the planning commission also writes, adopts and recommends the adoption by the township board of provisions of the zoning code."

Cleland added, "He (Way) will be one of seven commissioners whose duty it is to provide those services to the people of the township. I hope he'll serve the people."

Cleland said the planning commission still does not have an official secretary since Bartosik was removed by the township board, but that should be taken care of at a meeting to take place at 7:30 p.m. tonight, March 8 at the Norwood Township Hall.

"We do not have a secretary at this point because I didn't want to elect a secretary until such time as we had a full compliment of commissioners, which we now do," he said. "The commissioners will be selecting a secretary at the next meeting and we may also hire a stenographer to take minutes. But, nonetheless, we will have a secretary."

He added, "Marion Light was good enough to volunteer to take minutes at the last meeting so we could proceed. She acted as a citizen volunteer and would accept no money for her services. I will likely have someone act in that capacity for the next meeting."

Cleland said the township's master plan is one of the biggest projects the planning commission will be working on in the near future.

"We're trying to revise our township master plan, which is probably the biggest and most important task a planning commission has to undertake. And we have, of course, had some difficulty due to some various distractions," he said. "We have a difficult situation in our township and I hope that the future will bring us better government."

Northwest Academy fundraiser to take place March 18

The party will take place from 7 to 11 p.m. on Saturday, March 18 at the First Baptist Church located off M-66 in Charlevoix.

The evening will include non-alcoholic beverages, hors d'oeuvres, cash raffles, silent and live auctions, and dance music provided by the Northwest Academy Jazz Band.

DDA gives $25,000 to chamber of commerce

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Hugh Mason

Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority approved distribution of $25,000 to the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce on Feb. 27 in spite of talk last year opposing the continued allocation.

"We are funding the chamber to the same tune we did last year when we put them on notice that it was a one-year commitment," said Downtown Development Authority member, John Yaroeh. "And now we're funding them without someone earmarked to handle the downtown."

The funds, which were made available in January when the authority approved its budget, will be directed to a number of events including $3,000 to the Taste of Charlevoix which will take place June 17 and $5,200 to fund the summer concert series. The cash commitment also includes a $1,400 stipend to be given on a monthly basis from April 1 through March 31. These funds were not earmarked for any one event.

Last year, the Downtown Development Authority gave the chamber the same amount of money with $20,000 of it directed to the downtown coordinator's position and $5,000 to the summer music series.

"There is no downtown coordinator but funds are needed to promote projects," city mayor and authority member Norm Carlson said.

Chairman of the Downtown Development Authority, Hugh Mason, said the way in which the downtown coordinator's position will function in the future will likely be determined by a study the city will pursue through the state's Blueprint Program.

The Blueprint Program, which is steered by The Michigan Economic Development Corporation which has its headquarters in Lansing, is aimed at boosting Charlevoix's economic climate and is an offshoot of the popular Cool Cities initiative.

In a previous interview, city planner Gerry Harsch said Charlevoix's two major economic issues are a lack of vacant space in downtown and the seasonal nature of business.

The program cost is about $30,000 and if an application the city plans to submit in this month is denied, funds will have to come from elsewhere.

Last year, when the authority funded the summer concert series authority members stressed it would be a one-time allocation.

However, Chairman of the Downtown Development Authority Hugh Mason said the group opted to fund the program again this

"We are funding the chamber to the same tune we did last year when we put them on notice that it was a one-year commitment."

John Yaroeh,
Downtown Development Authority member

year.

"We are hoping it won't continue and they'll find a way to fund it," he said.

In formulating the authority's 2006-2007 budget the authority members were given documents outlining chamber budget expenses.

"But that really didn't mean too much to us. Most of their funds go to salaries," Mason said. "We feel the chamber does add to the strength and improvement of the downtown and smooth operations of it. It's a necessary important part of the downtown and we want to help them as much as we can."

Information submitted by chamber president Jacqueline Merta shows the chamber's annual budget is $300,000. Of that, the business' projected salary and wage expense for 2006 is $126,000. That is 42 percent of the total budget.

According to Mason, the $1,400 monthly stipend the downtown development authority approved was not earmarked for anything in particular and can be used for operational expenses at the chamber.

"I don't think we're a bank supplying money to the chamber to fund all their normal business issues. This funding is specifically for the downtown," Carlson added.

According to city treasurer, Rick Brandt, the majority of downtown development authority funds come from the capture of taxes. The authority also levies 1.3631 mills on properties within its district which generates about $37,000. They also maintain a lease with the Beaver Island Boat Company.

ISD receives $90,000 research grant from the state

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District received $90,000 to assess the strengths and weaknesses of services intended for early childhood education and care in the area.

According to Michigan Department of Human Services director, Marianne Udow, the Great Start Collaborative Grant from the Early Childhood Investment Corporation (ECIC) will allow the Intermediate School District to improve upon its already high caliber programs as well as act as a funnel for numerous programs.

"It's so important to focus on our youngest citizens so we make sure that all children in our state have a great start in life and that's what the ECIC is all about," Udow said. "That's why a year ago the governor signed the agreement that formed the ECIC."

Udow said 85 percent of a child's brain has developed by age three.

"We know what happens in those early years has a permanent affect on what happens in later years and we hear from so many of you in schools about how many of our children come to school unprepared to learn and not ready to succeed," she said. "We need to do more to help those children and help their parents prepare them to be ready for school."

The Early Childhood Investment Corporation has three areas of focus.

"First of all it has been set up to be a clearing house of information about early childhood. Information that can be used by families and communities. We want to make sure that people know where they can get information they need," Udow said. "The second purpose for the ECIC is to be a focal point in state government for work on early childhood and the third part is to support Great Start collaboratives."

She added, "We know that there is a tremendous amount of work going on across the state. Char-Em (Intermediate School District) is an amazing, shining example of those assets."

There are over 90 programs aimed at helping children under age five in the area.

Udow said the grant will also be used to study what programs there are and who is being served.

"We need to figure out where the assets are, and what they are doing to support children and families," she said. "We're not just looking at preschool programs, although they are important. We're looking at the whole gamut of early childhood care and development. We're looking at nurse family partnership programs, we're looking at programs that focus on health care and programs that focus on parenting education."

She added, "The needs assessment is intended to do that kind of work to help us make sure that we do have the programs needed."

Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District is among only 14 of 57 Intermediate School Districts in the state which received this grant.

Mark Eckhardt, superintendent of the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, expressed his gratitude to Governor Granholm and the Michigan Department of Human Services and the Early Childhood Investment Corporation for the funds.

"Early childhood and helping young parents to be even better parents has long been the focus of the Intermediate School District and our community partners," he said. "The funding that we are so gracious enough to receive from the state will help strengthen this early childhood initiative we call Stepping Stones to School. We feel it's very important to this because we know that children will come to school better prepared to learn. And, our schools, our businesses and our communities will ultimately reap the benefit from our focus on young infants in the family."

According to Mike Foley, chief operating officer of Early Childhood Investment Corporation, of the 38 grant proposals submitted, Char-Em's was ranked the best.

"It is just an incredible testament to all the work you do here," Udow said. "You can really be a beacon for others."

Foley said the assessment of existing and needed services throughout the area will help the state better understand where to focus funds.

"You've done some of that work already, but we want a real careful assessment in every one of these communities that's receiving these dollars so we can see where the gaps are and so you can assess how well everyone's collaborating and working together," he said. "And when that's all done, we're going to be in a position where we will receive good, comprehensive information."

According to a press release from the Department of Human Services, the Early Childhood Investment Corporation, which Gov. Granholm announced in her 2005 State of the State Address, is developing the framework for effective early childhood development and care programs through partnerships with local collaboratives around the state.

The local Great Start collaboratives will use the grant money from the Early Childhood Investment Corporation to conduct a community assessment and develop a strategic plan for the development of a comprehensive system of early childhood services and supports, accessible to all children from birth to kindergarten and their families.

According to Udow, children who participate in high-quality early childhood development programs are better prepared to enter elementary school, are more likely to pursue secondary education and have lower dropout rates and higher high school graduation rates.

Proposed federal funding cuts have local implications

ISD's Safe Schools Program may take a hit

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

If the proposed 2007 White House budget remains unchanged, local drug education programs such as the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District's program to help ensure safe and drug free schools could suffer.

According to the drug rehabilitation group, Narconon, the White House budget contains a proposal to cut $322 million from the Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities programs nationwide.

"Any cut would obviously impact our programs, but it would be up to us to manage how they would be impacted," said Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District Safe Schools coordinator, Dennis Halverson. "To be able to react to similar reductions, we would need to be flexible so other services wouldn't suffer."

Halverson said there are 11 districts in the Intermediate School District which receive this money primarily based on student count. Beaver Island receives the smallest of the grants at $255 a year, while Petoskey receives the largest grant with $5,800.

"Charlevoix is somewhere in the middle with $2,954," he said.

The federal funds, which could be cut by as much as 21 percent nationwide, are used for preventative types of programs such as alcohol and drug prevention education, but up to 20 percent of the grant can be used for security purposes.

Halverson said the Intermediate School District manages the money for the schools and makes sure new programs are being pursued.

"If it goes into effect in Charlevoix, it will affect each district differently," he said. "If these cuts are imposed, we're going to be looking at the district very closely for other funding mechanisms to ensure the schools can continue to provide these programs."

He added, "We're not going to throw the towel in on any efforts to reduce drug and alcohol abuse in the schools."

Executive director of BASES, Scott Kelly, said while many cuts to drug education programs could affect his organization, this one won't.

"We should be fine since our funding comes from other sources than the federal government," Kelly said.

According to the Office of Safe and Drug-Free Schools (OSDFS), the organization through which the funds are released, it is responsible for administering, coordinating and recommending policy to improve the quality and excellence of programs and activities designed to accomplish several things. These things include: providing financial assistance for drug and violence prevention activities and activities that promote the health and well being of students in elementary, secondary and other places of higher education.

Charlevoix City Council postpones decisions

New sign ordinance and development plan tabled

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

The future of signs in Charlevoix and that of a proposed hotel resort remain uncertain.

At its meeting on March 6 Charlevoix City Council hosted a public hearing to consider a revised sign ordinance and a development plan. However, unanswered questions related to both topics lead council to vote unanimously to postpone their decisions on both, indefinitely.

The first decision was to delay the development plan review for a proposed hotel resort to be located along Pine River Lane. This project will be back in council's hands once a determination is made by the city's zoning board of appeals as to whether the project adheres to the definition of hotel/motel in the city's zoning ordinance.

Bob Grzech, an attorney with the Charlevoix office of Running, Wise and Ford, representing a resident group opposed to the project as presented, submitted the appeal to the zoning board. He argues this project doesn't fit the definition of hotel as outlined in the ordinance.

This evaluation will likely take place at the board's March 15 meeting.

"Our hands are tied until the ZBA meets and comes back with an opinion," city mayor Norm Carlson Jr. said.

The city planning commission has recommended approval of the development plan which shows a 12-unit resort hotel to be built at 115 Pine River Lane, overlooking the Pine River Channel.

In this proposed development, each of the units would be sold individually and would possibly be included in a rental pool.

The proposed resort hotel, to be developed by Catt Acquisitions of Gaylord, would span over 30,000 square feet and would have 24 underground parking spaces. The lot is 7 tenths-of-an-acre of land and is owned by Peter Carey, Julie Bandfield and Randy Carey.

The property is zoned commercial and the city's zoning ordinance allows for hotels/motels in this district.

Doug Mansfield, president of the project's architectural firm, Wells Mansfield, has said there exists similar uses in the same area, like Pointes North Inn and the WeatherVue Terrace.

According to the ordinance, hotels must have a central lobby or office area from which users enter and exit supervised by a person in charge at all hours.

The office area for this project is located in the parking level.

Mansfield said there will be an on-call box and a manager in residence seven days a week.

City planner Gerry Harsch has revised findings of fact related to the project addressing resident concerns as to its impact. Seven residents with property near the proposed project submitted concerns in writing.

Residents argue that the proximity of the project to their homes could pose a risk to their homes' structure during the construction process. Other concerns include soil erosion issues, light pollution, a potential impact on traffic flow, mechanical noise, trash removal, walls and fencing.

Light pollution was also a topic of discussion during a public hearing for the city's proposed sign ordinance.

First ward councilman, Bob

Timms, said internally, or backlit signs, can be more aesthetically pleasing than uplit signs. He said currently, sign lighting in Charlevoix can distract drivers and poorly direct light.

"These darn things shine right in your eyes and no one seems to give a hoot," Timms said. "If they were internally lit, I think we would be better off."

Mayor Carlson agreed. But no direction was taken on the ordinance as Charlevoix's age-old battle to keep billboards out of town resurfaced.

In 1997, Harsch was told by city attorney, Jim Young, that the ordinance needed to be revised to include billboards so it wouldn't be deemed exclusionary.

"If we don't have some provisions for them we could end up with billboards in places we don't want them," Harsch said.

Provisions for billboards in the proposed ordinance allow for them on the north side, of town along U.S. 31 bordering the city's industrial district and on the south side along U.S. 31 near the airport property. The maximum allowed size for these signs is limited in the proposal to 36 square feet.

"That's not a billboard, that's a sheet of plywood," Carlson said.

The size issue quelled the fears of some including Timms who said, "A sign of that size, I wouldn't be too worried about."

However, second ward councilman, Gabe Campbell, would rather nix the concept entirely.

"I don't want to see it in if we don't have to," he said.

City resident and planning commission member Francis Flanders agrees.

"If we add zoning language for billboards we will get applications for them. And then we'll have to deal with them. I think there is enough case law to defend that position," he said.

Since 1997 when staff was directed to address billboards in the ordinance, numerous cases have come through the State of Michigan in which courts have upheld a municipality's right to exclude the signs.

Young was directed to review existing case law with regard to billboards and advise council as to whether they can exclude them from this revised sign ordinance.

Council didn't set a date for this review to be considered.

April conference to bring fireworks over Round Lake

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

Dan Barron

A fireworks show over Round Lake in April?

No, the Venetian Festival isn't moving its annual July event to spring. Rather, the Michigan Festivals and Events Association is planning a spring conference to take place April 27-30 in Charlevoix.

"This will bring life to the downtown. It's great for retailers, restaurants, bars — especially at the end of April," Tracy Sell, president of the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau said. "This is a big event, in the time of the season when it won't impact other tourists or summer residents."

On Feb. 27, Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority members voted unanimously to give $1,000 to the Convention and Visitors Bureau to partially fund bringing a barge to Charlevoix for the proposed April 29 fireworks shoot. The total cost for barge use and relocation from Beaver Island is about $5,000. Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc. has given $1,000 and the bureau is funding the balance.

"For $1,000, no pun intended, we're going to get a lot of bang for

Who: Michigan Festivals and Events Association
What: Conference including public events
When: April 27-30
Where: Castle Farms and East Park

our buck," said Dan Barron, president of Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc. and a member of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority.

Barron abstained from the Downtown Development Authority vote. The final vote was unanimous to donate $1,000 to the effort.

"This is what we've been trying to do all along. Get these shoulder seasons moving. I'm all for that," said Fred DiMartino, a member of the Downtown Development Authority.

According to Barron, the Michigan Festivals and Events Association boasts the largest membership of any events association of its kind in the United States. Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc. has been an association member since 1999.

Colonial Fireworks Co., the business that handles the famed Venetian Festival fireworks show, has offered to donate $25,000 in fireworks for the occasion.

The show is expected to be similar to the stadium shoot Colonial does during the Venetian Festival.

Rayder basketball win district opener

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Despite an up and down regular season, the Charlevoix Rayders showed they were back at home — figuratively and literally, with a 69-62 win over Harbor Springs March 6 to open district play.

The Rayders were playing at home in their own gym as Charlevoix is hosting the district tournament for the first time in years. They were also playing in post-season tournament play where the Rayder program has reigned supreme, winning six of the last seven district basketball championships.

"Well, it's March madness," coach Keith Haske said. "It's an exciting time of year and something we always look forward to."

The Rayders host Boyne City in game two of the district games, beginning at approximately 7:30 p.m. today, Wednesday March 8. Charlevoix has beaten the Ramblers twice this season.

Against Harbor Springs, Charlevoix trailed by six at the half, at 34-28, and fell behind by nine to begin the second half, before mounting a decisive comeback. As it has been most all season long, it was the sharp shooting of the Rayders' wings, juniors Mitchell Crandall and Matt Kautz and sophomore, Dustin Dibble, that got the team going.

Dibble hit a three-pointer, followed by a Kautz bucket to cut the lead to 37-34 with 5:13 minutes to play in the third quarter.

Crandall then took over. Having missed the regular season finale against Bellaire with an ankle injury, he was scheduled only to play briefly in the Harbor game, but adrenaline earned him.

Crandall buried a three-pointer to tie the game at 37-all. The Rams answered with a lay-up to retake the lead, but Crandall then sunk another three, followed by an old-fashioned "and one" three-point play and then a tip-in to give Charlevoix a 45-39 lead with 2:35 minutes left in the quarter.

"(Crandall) really came up big for us," Haske said. "We didn't expect him to play that much. As much as we played him, he'll be sore tomorrow and probably questionable for Wednesday."

In all, the Rayders went on a 17-2 run in five minutes, led by Crandall's 11 points.

The Rams wouldn't say die, however, cutting the lead to 47-44 at the close of the third quarter. They took the lead briefly at 55-53 with 4:59 minutes left in the game but a Mike DiMartino basket off a feed from Kautz re-tied the game seconds later.

Trevor Mays sunk a free throw with 3:53 minutes remaining which gave the Rayders a lead they never relinquished. Kautz nailed a key three-pointer to push the Charlevoix advantage back to five at 63-58.

Crandall grabbed two key rebounds off Harbor Springs misses down the stretch and sank four of four free throws in the last minute of the game to seal the win. Crandall finished with 21 points, 17 of which he scored in the second half. Kautz scored 19 while Dibble added 10.

In the previous week, Charlevoix closed out the regular season with a 12-8 mark with a 71-48 win over East Jordan and a season-ending 63-59 loss to Class D second-ranked Bellaire.

The Bellaire game was close throughout with seven ties and numerous lead changes. Charlevoix led late in the third quarter, at 36-34, but an Eagle run to end the period put Bellaire up, 41-38 at the buzzer.

In the final stanza, the Rayders fell behind by eight at 52-44 but seven straight Charlevoix points scored by Dibble, brought the game to within two, at 55-53 with 1:31 minutes left. The Rayders would get no closer though.

Dibble finished with 31 points and Kautz tallied 13.

Against the Red Devils, Charlevoix blew a close game wide open with a 29-13 third quarter surge. Kautz led the Rayders with 22 points while Dibble had 14. Freshman Justin Friske grabbed seven rebounds in his varsity debut.

Crandall had six rebounds. Ty Haske dished out six assists.

Brown University names Scott Friske its 'Rookie of the Week'

Early this month, Brown University freshman forward Scott Friske of Charlevoix was named the Ivy League Rookie of the Week for the third time this season after helping Brown to a 69-64 victory over Cornell.

Friske exploded for 23 points against the Big Red on 7 of 9 shooting from the field, including 1 of 1 shooting from behind the three-point arc. He also converted 8 of 9 free throws, grabbed five rebounds and handed out two assists against Cornell.

Friske has started 19 of 24 games for the Bears and is averaging 8.3 points per game, third on the Brown team. He ranks second on the Brown team with 4.6 rebounds per game and is shooting a team leading 50 percent from the field (67 of 133). He scored a career high 26 points against Quinnipiac earlier this season.

Brown wrapped up its 2005-2006 season March 4.

Stumpwork artist to teach needlework class for the Jordan River Arts Council

Michigan fiber artist Kathy Fenchel will be a featured teacher as part of Jordan River Arts Council Show, "Rare Threads with Another Twist."

Fenchel is a nationally recognized fiber artist and a veteran of The Carol Duval Show where she demonstrated the timeless art of stumpwork embroidery.

Stumpwork is a form of raised embroidery that was only done for a period of about 50 years in the mid-1600s. It is often enhanced with beads or small jewels. The modern application for this type of embroidery is embellishment for small fabric boxes, pin cushions and quilts.

It is important to Fenchel that each student understand various stitching techniques and how they can be developed to suit the students' skill level, aesthetic tastes and creative talents.

Fenchel conducts a weekly canvas-enhancement class in the Detroit area and travels throughout the U.S. teaching her designs for both the Embroiders Guild of America, the American Needlepoint Guild and in needlework shops.

Fenchel's featured class for Jordan River Arts Council is "Raspberries for Lunch." Students will be introduced to several needlework techniques that will easily translate for use on other needlework

SCRAPBOOK

A glimpse of life in Charlevoix during the 1940s

Marilyn Boss

gone by'

I am amazed at the amount of work that went into making the 1940 directory of Charlevoix which I am using to tell about the people I knew at that time. One man went to every house and business in town, writing the data down, including all the rural areas. It would have been a monumental task. There are only a few of these books around, and I wanted to share these memories of the people who lived here when I was a young girl.

Some of these Charlevoixians were Irvin Racignol and his wife, Marvel. They lived at 211 E. Garfield Avenue. He worked at the Petoskey Cement Company. He ran the railroad engine which moved the empty and full rail cars around the premises.

Esther Radle was a widow (Charles E.) who lived at 403 Mason Street. Her son, Edward lived there also, as did daughter, Marjorie. Dale remembers one summer when Ed worked for the city recreation department. On Saturdays, he would take a group of town kids on a hike out to the old Charlevoix Lime Kiln, where St. Mary's Cement Company is now. They had fun playing on the old abandoned foundations, and quarry.

Arthur and Violet Ranger had a board-ing house in the summer time, at 209 Lewis Street. Mrs. Ranger had a large commercial stove in her kitchen, and she served meals to her guests. Their children were Virginia and Arthur A. (Alvin). Mr. Ranger took care of the Goldman family's large yacht. Dale remembers that when World War II was over, Charlevoix had a whole day of celebration on Bridge Street.

Art had a Model A pickup, with a whistle which he attached to the exhaust, and a big bedspring that he pulled behind the car. This was during the parade which the town had because they were so happy that the war was over. The other towns around were quiet, but Charlevoix celebrated into the night. People lined the sidewalks and the parade kept on. Art's father, Roy Ranger, had a wood working shop at 209 Belvedere Avenue, where he lived.

George M. Rassieur lived at 405 Mercer Boulevard in the summer, and also in St. Louis, Mo. in the winter. He was an attorney. George was a good friend of my dad, and we would go over there often. He would cook for us, and I remember especially his tiny flaky biscuits, and the wonderful salad he made. He would rub the inside of a wooden bowl with a garlic clove, and then add the delicious ingredients. Very tasty for a little girl.

Louis Rassieur and wife, Lilie, owned the house on top of the hill next to Mt. McSaubia, toward town. The house was built in 1929, and is now known as Turtle Hill. Edward Rassieur lived at 505 Mercer Boulevard. Theodore Rassieur lived at 501 Mercer Boulevard. They also lived in St. Louis, Mo.

Elmer Reed and his wife, Viola, lived at 103 Green Street. He was a meat cutter, and worked at Curtis Market. He had red hair, and everyone called him "Red." Their children were Robert and William.

Charles Reinhart and his wife, Elizabeth owned the Charlevoix Hotel at 206 Antrim Street. Their son was Charles William, who was in my class in school. John Reinhart and wife, Birdie lived at 603 State Street. Lyman Reinhart lived at 203 Lewis Street. Mary Reinhart was a widow (Alexander) and lived at 207 E. Dixon Avenue.

James J. Reis lived at 208 W. Dixon Avenue and also Cincinnati, Ohio. He loved boats, and also drove fancy convertible cars, which he brought up every summer. He truly enjoyed Charlevoix's summers.

Floyd Rice and his wife, Tillie lived at 301 Stover Road. He was an operator at the city power plant. Their son Ernest W. also lived there.

Arthur T. and Julia Richardson lived at 103 W. Garfield Avenue. He was a carpenter. Daughters Edna and Delora lived there also. Delora worked at the Kroger store, and later was the book-keeper for Maxbauer's Dairy, when Dale's dad was the manager. When Dale bought the dairy, she continued to work for him. Charles Richardson was a sailor, and lived at 901 Bridge Street. Ward and Doris Richardson lived with their children, R. Louis, Carol L., and John at 204 E. Upright. He was a boat builder.

John B. Rickard and wife Blanche, lived at 207 W. Garfield Avenue. He was a trucker. Their children were Robert, Richard, Howard, Beverly, Jean and David.

Rev. Harold Ringenoldus and wife, Dorothea lived at 313 W. Garfield Avenue. He was a pastor at the Barnard Reformed Church. The church was later moved to town, and is the present Community Reformed Church. The parsonage at 313 W. Garfield Avenue was owned by Fred and Etta Trimble. Dale's dad was the church treasurer, and many times he would have Dale hand deliver the $13 dollar monthly rental check for the parsonage to Fred and Etta, who lived at 304 W. Garfield Avenue. The parsonage was practically new. Mr. Trimble was a good carpenter, and built it for rental purposes.

Glenn E. Rose and wife, Ida, lived at 107 Mason Street with their children, Donna, Patsy and Charles. He was a policeman at the time. Glenn would tell the story of how sometimes in the summertime, he and a couple other officers would spend the night on the big sand dune between 431 and 505 Michigan Avenue, providing police protection. The people living there were wealthy, and wary of kidnapping. The police had a good view of what was going on down the entire street. The sand dune that comes out to the road is still there. It has a stone fence in front of it at the curbside.

At that time, the Chicago Club also had a policeman standing on the sidewalk on the hill leading to the depot. Later, Glenn became sheriff. He ran against my grandpa for years, but couldn't beat him. When Grandpa retired in 1955, Glenn was elected. Glenn's children were my second cousins, and Patsy and I were good friends in school. She was in my class. Ida was a telephone operator for Michigan Bell Telephone Co.

Simon and Lizzie Rose owned Rose Barber and Beauty Shop at 102 Bridge Street, which was adjacent to the channel on the east side of the street. They lived at 302 Mason Street. Simon was a diver in his younger years. There is a picture of him in his diving suit in the archives at the Charlevoix Historical Society.

We had such interesting people in town then, and with everyone knowing everyone else, it was a most interesting time of life.

Smoking ban may return

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The Public Health Clean Air Act of 2005, a measure which would disallow smoking in certain businesses of more than one employee in Charlevoix County may soon be back before the Charlevoix County Commissioners.

Newly elected First District County Commissioner Connie Saltonstall hopes to have the regulation on the agenda of the March 22 meeting of the board of commissioners.

"The last time it was voted on, it was a three to three vote, which meant it didn't pass," Saltonstall said. "Josh Barnes (former first district commissioner) voted against it, and by my voting for it, I think it will pass four to two."

The proposed 2005 regulation does not apply to restaurants, bars and other food service establishments and certain gambling and casino operations since other laws already affect those establishments. Businesses operated out of private residences will also be exempt, except for those used for childcare, health care or adult day care businesses.

In response to concerned business owners and citizens, the board of health made changes to the original wording of the clean air act to allow smoking in businesses which employ one person as well as smoking for businesses with vehicles used by one person at a time.

The new wording also allows smoking break rooms as long as they are sufficiently ventilated.

Saltonstall is reintroducing this regulation because the health of Charlevoix citizens is important to her.

"I think secondhand smoke is a serious health issue," she said. "But, businesses that are sole employees are exempted from the regulation."

She added, "I don't think that someone should have to quit their job because someone else at their workplace decides to do something injurious to their health and the health of others. Secondhand smoke has been proven to be a health risk."

Following much debate by county officials and citizens back in November 2005, the County Board of Commissioners voted to pass the smoking regulation in order to allow the other counties covered by the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency to adopt it if they so choose.

The other counties covered by the health department are Antrim, Emmet and Otsego, all of which adopted the regulation.

The commissioners then deadlocked with a three to three vote which exempted Charlevoix County from the clean air act.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners will meet at 7 p.m. on March 22 in the commissioner's room at the county building.

You don't have to be Irish to enjoy all that Charlevoix restaurants and pubs have to offer this St. Patrick's Day.

Whether you prefer corned beef and cabbage with some traditional Irish tunes, or buckets of green beer with rocking contemporary music, Charlevoix has you covered.

The day before St. Patrick's Day, the Charlevoix Senior Center is hosting a luncheon starting at 11:30 a.m. for $5 for adults.

Additionally, Jeff Sprecksell, manager of Stafford's Weathervane, said they will continue their tradition of fine food and entertainment.

OPINIONS

Do private businesses deserve tax money?

Surprise, surprise, the Downtown Development Authority gave the Chamber of Commerce another $25,000 handout.

We support the DDA's mission to better Charlevoix, but wince when they give cash to private enterprise.

It could be argued, since the chamber's job is to promote Charlevoix, the DDA is merely promoting the city. We argue the DDA sets an unnerving precedent, and wonder how the contributors to the DDA's coffers feel about doling their green to the chamber year after year.

The chamber's budget is around $300,000 with $126,000 of that for salaries. With $174,000 leftover, why can't the chamber swing $5,200 for concerts?

The chamber isn't the bad guy. Sure, they can ask for money all day, but the DDA has the power to say no.

In a previous editorial we stated, "The chamber needs to report back with specificity as to how that money is being spent."

EDITORIAL

We were wrong. Corporate welfare is never the answer whether or not they account for the money. While $25,000 isn't enough to make or break the chamber, it isn't chicken feed.

The city also gave the Mason Street building to the chamber for $1 a year — not exactly a cash cow.

If the chamber's income won't cover their obligations, perhaps they should look at restructuring. The burden shouldn't fall on the taxpayers.

Maybe they're on to something. After all, the downtown businesses promote the area. Perhaps the ice-cream and apparel shops deserve a $25,000 treat.

We don't claim to have the answer to this quandary, but when it comes to tax dollars, there is no such thing as asking too many questions.

Evenday a new holiday we all could get behind

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Two years ago at this season I proposed a new worldwide holiday on the occasion of the spring equinox.

It was meant to celebrate the idea that on that day everyone, all over the earth from the equator to the poles has the same number of hours of light and darkness. With the sun on that date positioned precisely over the equator, we are all equal in its light. I suggested, at that time, that we could surely use a holiday that unites all citizens of the earth. And nothing is so ultimately important to us as the sun, which provides essentially all the energy that fuels life and growth on our globe. Even fossil fuels like petroleum and coal are products of that sun which shone on earth millions of years before humans arrived on the scene.

It is safe to say that the idea has not yet caught on. I can only assume that it has not had sufficient advertising. I suggested two years ago that we call it Equal Day. Maybe it needs a somewhat catchier name. Evenday carries the same idea in a more complex way. Since the exact time of the sun's location over the equator is sometimes on March 20 (as it is this year) and sometimes on March 21, we might need to make annual adjustments of the holiday. I will firmly resist placing it on the nearest Friday or Monday in order to establish a long weekend. Some things, like the placement of the sun, are too important to be moved for our holiday convenience.

In our northern hemisphere of the earth, Evenday will mark our emergence from winter into spring, a most welcome change. On the southern half of the earth the March Evenday will precede their descent into winter from autumn, but there must be reasons to celebrate that transition as well. The larger problem may be finding a way to appropriately celebrate this international day.

The participation of schools will be vital. Only when every primary school class takes note of Evenday will it begin to find a place in the broader culture. A celebration of equality in every grade of every school would not be out of place. There could be equal signs everywhere and 12-12 might become as well known as 24-7. I stand ready to help our local schools in any way they might desire.

Maybe our stores could hold Evenday sales, and temporarily price everything at the same level. If we can only get Wal-Mart to agree, the holiday could almost instantly become a part of worldwide culture. Restaurants could for one day sell all meals for one price. Fast food emporiums could do the same.

A single holiday that includes every political, religious, ethnic and economic group on earth might cause us all to think differently about equality. And who could object to a holiday based on the location of the sun?

When the equinox arrives on March 20 this year, give some thought to how you could celebrate it. What can you do on that day that will enhance the idea of equality for all? Even if the day happens to be cloudy, look up occasionally.

We know the sun is up there somewhere even when we don't see much of it. Take note of the times of sunset and sunrise on March 20. And tie the idea of life-giving sunlight to the idea of our worldwide equality in the light of that sun.

Celebrate Evenday.

Project is wrong

The Charlevoix Pine River Lane fantasy motel project [Rivulet Point] has been referred to the Zoning Board of Appeals by the neighbors.

The neighbors think the project is wrong for two reasons. First, its size and shape make it out of keeping with its lot and with the primarily residential character of the street. Secondly, the Rivulet demands are making a joke of the Charlevoix zoning regulations, those who wrote them and those who work to enforce them.

Too harsh? Remember, please, the city's official position that Rivulet's units are "designed as transient accommodations." The "occupants will be automobile transients." Let us imagine a group of 12 sincere and honest couples who each buy one of these 1,000 plus square foot suites with kitchen, several bedrooms and others for the purpose of renting them out as motel rooms. We will leave aside the fact that there is no main entrance, no lobby and no reception desk.

What will their business plan have to be in order to just cover expenses — no profit making? I have done a "back of an envelope" calculation using these assumptions: unit price $800,000, 30 year mortgage, occupancy rate of 127 days each year, association expenses and management company fee of 50 percent of bookings. I get a daily rate of $1,000.

This is not a realistic Charlevoix motel business plan. The Rivulet won't be built like a motel and I don't think the owners would want to run it like a motel. In short, it isn't a motel. It is, in fact, a multi-family apartment condo building proposal.

I think we can have two mottos — "Charlevoix the Beautiful" and "Charlevoix the Square Dealing." Steven Hansen Charlevoix

Thanks for abusing drugs

This letter is directed to all the people who use, abuse and sell pharmaceutical pain pills and muscle relaxers as an illegal trade. Thanks to you it is almost impossible and embarrassing to get pain medication from doctors for those who really need it.

I am recovering from a serious lower back injury. Without prescription pain medication I literally could not get out of bed.

I recently had to see another physician for a medication refill while my doctor was on vacation. Even though I brought my own documentation of my injury and previous prescription information, the doctor I saw basically rolled his eyes and said, "I'm only going to give you ten pills," and that was of a lower dose than what I had been previously prescribed.

By Sunday night I was back to taking handfuls of over the counter Motrin.

When I was able to see my regular doctor I explained to him what had happened.

He stated that because of the increase of illegal street use and federal tracking of prescription pain medication doctors don't want to risk criminal prosecution.

So who suffers? Me.

I don't blame the doctors for being suspicious. I'm not mad at them. I am really mad at you idiots selling pain pills on the street and even more mad at you morons buying it to get high.

Presently, volunteers monitor 35 lakes spread throughout Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet and Montmorency counties, collecting baseline data, characterizing lake ecosystems, identifying specific water quality problems, determining water quality trends and informing and educating the public regarding water quality issues and aquatic ecology.

Monitoring water quality does not ensure clean water, but provides valuable information to help protect and improve water quality in the lakes of Michigan's northern Lower Peninsula.

Because streams potentially impact the water quality of the lakes that they flow into, the watershed council applied for and in early 2005 was awarded a two-year grant by the Michigan Clean Water Corps to kick-start the new Volunteer Stream Monitoring Program.

"For several months after receiving the grant award, we were busy structuring the program, developing a quality assurance protection plan, purchasing necessary equipment, and recruiting volunteers," said Kevin Cronk, research and monitoring coordinator at the watershed council.

"By September, 2005 everything was in place and volunteers began their maiden voyage into stream ecosystems by first receiving a training provided by Watershed Council Staff at the Freshwater Center in Petoskey and then going into the field to collect data."

Presently, the program focuses on streams that flow into Mullet Lake, Lake Charlevoix and Torch Lake. A total of 15 sites are being monitored on seven streams. These represent only a small fraction of the streams found in the watershed council service area, but include streams that have potential water quality issues or areas of concern as expressed by local residents.

As the program's foundation strengthens, it will be expanded to include more of the over 2,500 miles of streams that crisscross the council's coverage area.

Those interested in learning more or becoming involved should contact Kevin Cronk at (231) 347-1181 ext. 109.

Planned Parenthood awarded money for two of its education programs

Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan has been awarded $3,390 in support of two of its education programs: Motivation, Esteem and Respect in Teens (MERIT) and Out Of The Locker Room (OOTLR).

Support comes from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Eugene B. Renkiewicz Memorial Fund.

Motivation, Esteem and Respect in Teens, an intensive, 10-session program presented to boys ages 11 to 14, to help prevent risk taking behaviors such as early sexual activity and substance use. The program combines discussion, activities and group process to motivate students to take responsibility for their actions and strive to set and achieve personal goals, which include remaining abstinent.

Out Of The Locker Room is a six-hour program which uses interactive exercises, role plays and discussions to provide information and skills on topics including relationships, sexually transmitted infections and contraception, abstinence, sexual limit setting, communication and laws regarding sexual assault, consent and dating violence.

Both programs will be presented in schools throughout Charlevoix County and combined, will reach over 290 students.

"We are very grateful to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation for its long-standing support of the programs that we provide," said Lori O'Neill, Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan's director of education. "This funding will allow us to continue to deliver high quality educational services that help area youth make responsible choices. We're thankful for the opportunity to support these youth during a critical time in their lives."

Schools to host Irish festival March 22

Charlevoix middle and high school band students will be presenting an Irish Folk and Music Festival at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, March 22 at the Charlevoix High School.

Under the direction of Charlevoix Public Schools band director Jayne Bennett they will perform penny whistle, Irish dance, storytelling, hammered dulcimer and bodhran drums. Art students will also be displaying Celtic designs.

There will be guest performances by Irish folk duo "Switchback," Irish folk singer, Sean Ryan and harpist, Jan Goodwin.

Over the last few months instructors have been brought in to teach the students Irish instruments and dance.

Bennett said the students are excited about sharing what they've learned with the community.

It is requested that those who attend the event wear green. At 7 p.m. on Tuesday night, March 21 all Irish lovers are invited to a Hooley, an old-fashioned Irish jam session at the Weatheravne Restaurant in Charlevoix. Musicians are invited to bring instruments and join in the fun.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation, Charlevoix Education Foundation and Michigan Council for the Arts provided grants to help with the cost of the event.

Attendees are asked to donate $5 each and $15 per family at the door.

Fundraiser for 5-year-old's therapy set

By Benjamin Gohs
Staff Writer

A fundraiser to help 5-year-old Zachary Zahawa attend therapy for treatment of his atypical autism will be from 12 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday, March 26 at St. Mary Catholic Church.

Zahawa's mother, Beverly, hopes to raise the $11,000 necessary to attend the three month Applied Behavioral Analysis (ABA) at the Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak, during the spaghetti supper and silent auction.

"We do plan on submitting it to our insurance company, but they said they've never seen this kind of therapy covered by an insurance company," Zahawa said.

Zahawa said this therapy is important because it can help her son learn vital life skills.

"One of my biggest concerns with my son is that he has no fear. You can't teach fear to an autistic child," she said. "He has no fear of jumping in the road or jumping into a pool — my husband has had to rescue him before."

She added, "And, their social skills aren't very good. They can't pick up on emotional cues. Where you and I would pick up on when somebody is angry, they don't have that ability."

Zahawa said the therapy program will work on other things as well.

"This training at the Hope (Hands-On Parent Education) Center in Berkley in association with Beaumont Hospital is a parent-child therapy where I go in and they teach me how to interact with Zachary," she said. "They will work on his social skills, how to effectively teach communication, and his play and social interaction skills."

She added, "He is nonverbal. It would be nice if the speech comes. Even though we have done a lot of speech therapy, his speech is very intermittent at this point."

Zahawa said she and her husband, Mark, began noticing Zachary might have issues when he didn't begin talking at the normal age. Zachary was officially diagnosed when he was four-years-old.

"And then he started having a lot of typical symptoms of autism: Things like not being able to focus or look you in the eye; Not engaging people; And he was stimming (stimming is the act of engaging in self stimulating behavior such as spinning, rocking and yelling)."

Child, family will benefit from therapy THERAPY

she said.

"He used to get upset for no apparent reason and he seemed insensitive from pain."

Zahawa said Zachary used to yell for hours on end.

"We found out that a lot of his getting upset and seeming to be in pain had to do with intestinal pain from foods that he couldn't digest," she said. "With the change in his diet, a lot of his behaviors became better."

"He is also on many, many supplements and minerals, and all of these things have helped immensely," she added.

Zahawa said, though autism is not yet curable, it is treatable and even reversible.

Upon completion of the three month course, Zahawa will be able to teach other people how to do this therapy so they will be able to work with her son.

"In the last month of the course, they allow grandparents and siblings to come in. They recommend 20 to 40 hours of behavior therapy for relatives and caretakers," she said.

Zahawa said she is certain there will be a good turnout for the fundraiser.

She added, "Money can't be an issue to stop us from doing this. I haven't come this far to help my son not to have this come through for us."

According to Zahawa, autism tends to be a genetic disease.

"They've narrowed it down to five to 12 chromosomes and it is much more common in boys than in girls," she said. "It is a neurological disorder that impairs socialization and communication and may cause differences in the way information is processed."

According to information from autismweb.com, some warning signs for parents to watch out for include a child that does not: Babble or coo or does not gesture by pointing, waving, grasping by 12 months of age; Does not say single words by 16 months of age; Does not say two-word phrases on his or her own rather than just repeating what someone says to him or her by 24 months of age; or has any loss of any language or social skill at any age.

The incident occurred on Lake Charlevoix near Hemmingway Point in Charlevoix County at around 9 p.m., Sunday.

Adam Fuller, 21, and Keith Wilson, 27, went through the ice, but were able to get out on their own. They were uninjured. The ATV sank in 50-60 ft of water.

The sheriff's office is reminding people that the ice is very unsafe and must use caution in retrieving their ice shanties or going out on the ice at all.

New whooping vaccine suggested

The Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency recommends a new vaccine that includes protection from pertussis — also called whooping cough — for adolescents and adults, especially those who are in regular contact with infants.

The new vaccine, called "Tdap" for tetanus, diphtheria, and pertussis, replaces the tetanus-diphtheria vaccine for people age 11 to 64. People over age 65 should still receive the tetanus-diphtheria booster.

"Adding protection from pertussis to the vaccine is an important step in controlling pertussis outbreaks," said Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the health department that serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Oshtemo counties. "The number of reported cases of pertussis are increasing dramatically, mostly among adults whose immunity has waned."

Immunity against whooping cough wanes five to 10 years after the last childhood vaccination.

According to Meyerson, vaccinating adolescent and adult contacts will reduce the risk of transmitting pertussis to infants who have a high risk of pertussis-related complications, hospitalizations and death. Infants acquire whooping cough, often from siblings and parents at home, when they are still too young to be vaccinated against the infection, or when not yet vaccinated.

The Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices recommends Tdap for adults who will have close contact with an infant less than 12 months of age, ideally at least one month before beginning close contact with infants.

"Although pertussis is most serious in infants, it can also be serious in adolescents and adults. Even if they don't typically come in contact with young children, adolescents and adults should be vaccinated if it's been more than 10 years since they've had a tetanus-diphtheria booster," Meyerson said.

Tdap is also recommended for adolescents age 11 to 18 as a single dose booster, preferably at age 11 or 12. Adolescents who had a tetanus-diphtheria booster five or more years ago should receive a single dose of Tdap. It can be administered at the same visit as the new meningitis vaccine.

Cases of pertussis were reduced by more than 90 percent following introduction of diphtheria, tetanus, and pertussis (DTP) vaccine in the 1940s. Reported cases of whooping cough have increased from a low of 1,020 cases in 1976 to 25,827 cases in 2004, a 40-year high. Reported whooping cough-related deaths among infants increased from about 10 per year in the 1990s to about 20 per year during this decade.

To schedule an appointment for a Tdap vaccination, call your health care provider or the health department at (800) 432-4121.

(From left) Lt. Michael Wheat, marine officer Sgt. David Beyer, Sheriff Deputy Clyde Peyton and Sheriff George T. Lasater receive plaques in honor of their work helping in New Orleans during the aftermath of hurricane Katrina last year. The honors were presented by Charlevoix County emergency management director, Jack Messer, (far right) on Friday, March 3.

Officers honored by House

Work responsibilities kept Charlevoix Sheriff George Lasater, Sgt. Dave Beyer, Deputy Clyde Payton and Lt. Michael Wheat from attending a special House of Representatives' ceremony Jan. 18 recognizing the men for responding to help victims of Hurricane Katrina, but Rep. Kevin Elsenheimer ensured the local officers' names were included in the proceedings. "These four men continue to exemplify the best in public service," said Elsenheimer, R-Bellaire. "They answer the call to duty each day for our local communities, and when great need called in the aftermath of the hurricane they stepped forward to help."

Lasater, Beyer, Payton and Wheat were among almost 100

Michigan law enforcement officers from 21 agencies who volunteered for a week-long search-and-rescue operation in the gulf region immediately following the storm.

All officers were invited to the Capitol in Lansing to take part in the recognition ceremony. The House also approved a resolution honoring their service and notable representation in Michigan.

Road commission to get four new trucks

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners approved a resolution to grant $300,000 to the Charlevoix County Road Commission for use toward the purchase of four new trucks at an estimated total cost of $643,000.

Road Commissioner Manager Pat Harmon said the commission needs these trucks to ensure the quality of road maintenance in the county.

"What I'm shooting for is to get these trucks on an eight year rotation," he said.

"What happens when you get beyond eight years is the cost of maintenance skyrockets."

Harmon said the ideal rotation of seven to eight years will ensure there is still some trade-in value for the vehicle.

"Right now we keep them until they are junk. When we go to sell an old truck, we're lucky if we get a bid of $1,000 to $1,500," he said. "We've got trucks which are 15 to 20 years old. We keep them going, but it costs a lot of money."

He added, "When you spend money and make repairs on a 20-year-old truck, you still have a 20-year-old truck."

Harmon said, in spite of the initial cost, the more new trucks the fleet has in it, the more money taxpayers will save.

"Sure, this is a lot of money up front, but it will save money in the long run," he said. "Then we're not in the business of rebuilding engines and broken frames and rotting cabs."

The road commission fleet is approximately 24 trucks strong at any given time, depending upon what is in the shop for repair. Uses of the trucks vary from plowing, spreading sand and hauling gravel to blading roads and performing assorted summer maintenance.

"In the winter these trucks are going everyday," Harmon said. "From November to April these trucks have to be dependable. And, when we have three or four of them sitting in the shop, other people have to pick up the slack."

He added, "If we have a truck down for a week, it's not fair to the public."

Harmon said the purchase of these four new trucks will help get the road commission on track.

"This is going to be good, especially in the winter," he said. "I really appreciate the county board doing this. It is a real benefit to the county."

Two of the trucks will work out of the Ironton garage and the other two will work out of the Boyne City garage.

All four vehicles, two Peterbilt and two International, have been ordered and should be on the road and ready for next winter by some time in October, Harmon said.

THE SEASONS OF THE EMMALÉE

MICHAEL LINDLEY
A NOVEL

In "The Seasons of the EmmaLee," Grand Rapids author Michael Lindley explores the deep and complex emotions of unexpected love, betrayal, murder and redemption as two families from different social classes find themselves tragically drawn together by the relationship of their son and daughter.

This is Lindley's first novel. The story is set in the idyllic resort community of Charlevoix in the early 1940s, as well as present day. It takes the reader back in time to the small resort community of Charlevoix in the years before World War II. Emily Compton is a young woman of privilege whose family lives in the exclusive summer resort. Her father owns the magnificent cruising yacht, the EmmaLee.

Jonathan McKendry, son of a local boatyard owner, finds himself drawn into their world by his fascination with the ship and attraction to Emily. A series of tragic events bring the two cultures crashing together while creating an even greater divide.

The story simultaneously tracks the meeting and relationship of two people decades later who are drawn together by the return of the EmmaLee to modern day

Charlevoix. Sally Thoinason, a descendant of the family that first owned the ship, struggles with overwhelming grief linked to her family's history. She meets Alex Clark, the new owner of the EmmaLee, and as their relationship grows they search for common ground to help each other move beyond the past to build new lives.

Lindley's family dates back to the early 1900s in northern Michigan. His great grandparents emigrated from Germany and moved north following opportunities in the lumber industry. Settling in Boyne City, his great grandfather became an accomplished carpenter and builder and built homes and cottages on Lake Charlevoix and Walloon Lake.

Later, the family ran a small marina and boatyard on Lake Charlevoix. Lindley spent many days of his youth out at the boatyard fishing and swimming with family and trying to avoid being locked in the old wooden outhouse by his older cousins.

"I recall those years so vividly," said Lindley. "My uncle and great-grandmother worked on the big cruising and sailing yachts, painting, varnishing and repairing. As a boy, I was always fascinated by the incredible cruising and sailing yachts of the summer residents who came north each year, and kept their boats at my family's boatyard."

Charlevoix's history in print BOOK

In preparing to write the novel, Lindley spent considerable time at the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum as well as the Charlevoix Public Library, researching the early years of Charlevoix's history.

"I have to especially thank David Miles, the co-director of the Historical Society for his assistance in helping me learn more about the great ships that sailed the waters around Charlevoix in the first half of the 1900s," said Lindley.

The EmmaLee is based loosely on boats like the 180-foot yacht Sylvia, that was brought back to Charlevoix each summer in the 1930s and 1940s.

The ship was commissioned by the Navy at the outset of World War II and never returned to Charlevoix. The latest information available on the Sylvia had it sailing the trade routes of the Greek Islands as a cargo ship through the 1960s. Its current whereabouts, or condition, are unknown.

Lindley has been writing professionally for years as a marketing and advertising executive. Recently, he had his first fictional short story published by the literary outdoor magazine, Sporting Tales, that has also featured the work of Zane Grey, Nick Lyons and Ernest Hemingway.

Lindley's book, "The Seasons of the EmmaLee," is available as a trade paperback for $16.99 from Sage River Press, at the Bridge Street Book Shop.

For more information on "The Seasons of the EmmaLee" and Lindley's other writing can be found at his writer's Web site www.michaellindley.net.

Lasater warns of new credit card scam

Sheriff George T. Lasater has been advised of a credit card scam that is extremely difficult for the average individual to recognize as fraudulent, so citizens who would normally be wary are finding this one easy to fall prey to.

Victims of this scam receive a call from someone identifying themselves as the Security and Fraud Department of your credit card company. They provide their name and badge number and proceed to advise you that your card has been flagged because of an unusual purchase pattern. Then they will ask if you purchased (insert here) for (money amount). When the victim states they are not responsible for that purchase, the caller then advises that they will be issuing a credit to the account and promises to send you a credit before your next statement arrives. The victim is then assured that a fraud investigation will be pursued and any questions you have should be referred to the 800 number listed on the back of the credit card.

At this point the caller advises that they need card verification and requests that you provide them with a three-digit number listed on the back side of your card, which is your personal security code. Because they never ask you for your credit card number, it is quite easy to feel confident that they are who they say they are. However, the important thing to remember here is that they already have your credit card number, and they need the three-digit security number to complete fraudulent internet and/or telephone purchases. These fraudulent purchases will then appear on your next statement.

Because you provide the caller with so little information, it is particularly easy to fall prey to this scam. Please remember that your credit card company will never request that you provide them with information from your card because they already have all this information. By the time you receive your next statement and realize your error, it is considerably more difficult to successfully investigate a fraud complaint due to the time lapse. When in doubt, advise the caller that you will call your credit card company direct and verify that their call is legitimate.

Currey Farms producing maple syrup once again

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Pancake addicts and flapjack aficionados in the Charlevoix area will soon be in for an all natural treat.

After 30 years without producing a drop of syrup, Currey Farms is once again fully operational after tapping 3,000 of their sugar maple trees.

Rob Currey said, his father, Art, decided to begin producing syrup again after he retired from a 30 year career as a veterinarian.

"It has been so fun to be a part of this, I think my dad, who is a very soft-spoken man and would never say this, has a great amount of pride in reviving something the Curreys have done for five generations," Currey said. "We grew up snowmobiling, farming and hunting this land, and I would walk alongside him when I was younger and he would say, 'Boy, I can't wait to get those making syrup again.'"

He added, "In 1973, the Currey family bought the Barnard Road property and produced syrup for three years before my grandfather died and the farm went idle. It was too much work for my grandmother to handle alone."

Three decades later his neighbors and family members have all worked hard to help make the syrup producing operation a success, Currey said, including helping to connect thousands and thousands of feet of tubing from the trees to a giant collection tank.

"It has been a monumental task to get ready. We strung this 12 miles of tubing along with the help of our dear friends and neighbors," Currey said. "The crew has included Ron Cox, a former teacher here in Charlevoix, and friends all the way from Helsinki Finland."

He added, "My mother holds a full-time job and acts as director of marketing and my brother, who will attend Michigan State medical school in September, has taken a year off and delayed going to medical school to help with this farm."

In the old days, Currey said, "You would tap a spile (spigot) into a tree and hang a bucket from it. Then you would have to go around like my grandfather did with a team of horses and a tank and empty the buckets into the tank. What we have now is a system of tubes and pipelines that connects in a complex web that connects all of our trees."

Syrup harvests last three to five weeks depending upon weather conditions. Forty gallons of sugar maple sap are required to make one gallon of syrup. The average tree produces about a quarter of a gallon of syrup. "Eventually, all the sap flows downhill to one central tank in the woods. Not only does this eliminate the need for a horse drawn wagon but really limits the amount of damage we do to forest floor because it's all done automatically," he said.

Once the sap is collected in the forest, a pump transfers it up into the sap house — a barn with a giant evaporator for boiling the syrup.

"The evaporator is 5 feet wide by 10 feet high and 10 feet deep," he said. See SYRUP, page 21

Public Notice?

Without it in your newspaper, you're left guessing what the government's doing in your community.

Public notice is the people's right to know the issues that affect them directly, and people know the place to find public and legal notices is in the newspaper. What you're holding right now is a historical document, printed and published with a date on every page. Public notices have been posted here since the days of colonial America. In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. After all, it shouldn't be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, or when to look, let alone to know what you're looking for to be informed. Why guess? That is why you have, and read, your newspaper... where your right to know is already being served.

Currey Farm's maple syrup could soon be found at a store near you SYRUP

16 feet long, which is full of 3 to 4 inches deep of sap," he said. "The evaporator is a huge stove fired by wood. And, as you might imagine, with 80 acres of woods, we have more than enough dead or dying trees to satisfy the voracious appetite for fuel that this stove has."

He added, "We cut wood to both clean the forest and satisfy the need for fuel — and that need is intense. We need a fresh load of logs in the fire every 8 minutes."

A perfect day needs freezing temperatures at night and thawing in the afternoon, Currey said.

"That is a natural indication that the tree wants to start moving nutrients around," he said. "So, on a good run, we will be boiling around the clock for certain."

Currey said, when done properly, harvesting does not harm the trees. "Studies have shown that it can be continually tapped year after year for its lifetime — up to 100 years," he said.

Currey said boiling the sap into syrup requires both art and science. "If you go too far, you can ruin the evaporator," he said. "When the sugar content is just right, we pull the syrup off and there is a complicated process where we run it through one final filter to remove any impurities like dust or wood chips and then we bottle it."

He added, "We have a bottling area right next to the stove, so it goes immediately from the evaporator to the bottles."

Currey said the family isn't sure quite where they will market their syrup, but they hope to begin soon.

"We hope the first jug of syrup will come off the line in the next few days and we are starting to think about selling through our Web site and direct orders in the area," he said. "And we also hope to sell potentially through either Michigan focused or farm focused retailers and potentially on Bridge Street."

Currey said their product's slogan is: "From the heart of our woods to your table."

"The characteristics of this syrup are that it is all natural, no additives, pure and delicious," he said.

Currey said, as it stands, the family has only tapped about half of the trees on the property.

"There is a huge potential to expand and grow," Currey said. "In the future, we think we could increase production to be one of the biggest operations in the state."

Currey said visitors are always welcome.

"If people are interested in this, they are encouraged to stop by the farm to see the production process," he said. "If you see steam billowing from the stack on the barn, that should be interpreted as an open invitation to come and see the operation."

Currey Farms is located at 5358 Barnard Road. For more information visit them on the Web at: www.currey-farms.com or call toll free (866) 823-3267.

Africa to be topic of talk at college

The urbanization of Africa, globalization, and the effects of globalization on traditional cultures will be addressed in a series of lectures at North Central Michigan College beginning next week.

On Wednesday, March 15, Ellen Bassett, assistant professor of urban and regional planning at Michigan State University, will discuss the rapid growth of urban areas in some of Africa's less-developed nations. Professor Bassett spent 10 years in eastern Africa as a Peace Corps volunteer, urban planning advisor and environmental planning advisor.

She will look at the challenges posed by 187 million people living in urban slums and address the question of American engagement in Africa. Professor Bassett's lecture will take place at 7:30 p.m. in the college's library on the Petoskey campus.

On Monday, March 20, Nancy Alexander, director of the Citizen's Network on Essential Services, will give a talk entitled, "The Impact of Globalization on Communities at Home and Abroad."

The talk will take place at 1 p.m. in the College Cafeteria located in the Student Center.

On Tuesday, March 21, Saginaw-Chippewa Tribal Instructor Mico Slattery will give a talk entitled, "Effects of Globalization on Traditional Cultures." The program will take place at 1 p.m. in Room 122.

On Tuesday, April 11, Native American singer-songwriter Jody Gaskin will present stories, dances and songs in the College library. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m.

All of the programs are free and open to the public.

They are presented to the community by North Central Michigan College and the Michigan Global Awareness Consortium.

For more information on the series, contact North Central Professor Larry Cummings at 348-6637.

Historical photo

This photograph was recently cataloged and scanned during the Charlevoix Historical Society's ongoing digitization project that is preserving its photo collection onto a computer and DVDs. It was given to the society by the Charlevoix Courier in 2002.

Apparently, the picture had been left at the Courier office several years ago and never retrieved. The only information accompanying the donation was that it may have been given to the paper by the person named on the back, Rose Taylor.

The small text on the Rebecca's Triumph card reads "The Season's Hit. Do not (illegible) to see the greatest amateur play ever staged in Charlevoix." If anyone has knowledge of when or where this production took place or recognizes any of the faces, contact the Charlevoix Historical Society at (231) 547-0373.

Boards discuss library property

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

A meeting to discuss the Clinton Street library property took place March 1 at Charlevoix City Hall between several members of the Charlevoix Public Library Board and the Charlevoix Public School Board.

"The goal of the meeting was just to sit down with the two boards because we just hadn't talked yet," said library director, Valerie Meyerson. "We felt we needed a couple people to sit and talk and see how we could resolve the issue of the building as win, win situation."

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock, said several options of possible resolution were discussed at the meeting.

"There were a couple of options that were thrown out and they were supposed to go back to their board and see if, in fact, it was something that their board could buy into so we don't get into a court or litigation scenario," Sturock said. "We're waiting to see what happens."

Meyerson said, one of the options which appeared promising for the taxpayers, school and library could be to trade properties.

"We would get the administrative property for the library building. But, we would need the Saltonstall family to change the deed restriction so that if it was sold for private use, the profits would be split between the library and the school."

She added, "We felt that that would be good solution."

Meyerson stressed that this was merely an option that was looked at, and not a decision that was made.

Once the full boards of the school and library have their respective meetings, Meyerson said, she believes the

UPS worker saves customer's life

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Just how much does doing a little extra mean to others? A local woman believes it may have saved her life.

When Charlevoix County senior citizen, Christa-Maria, injured herself about a year-and-a-half ago, she asked UPS driver, Kathy Lawson if she could bring packages into the house as opposed to leaving them on the front porch, a routine which became much more than a convenience last autumn.

"I can't go shopping, so I have to order most things," Christa-Maria said.

Christa-Maria was forced to use crutches during her recovery from a broken hip, and, Lawson said, "She has a small entryway that is enclosed. Most people just throw the packages in there. But with the crutches, it's really hard for her to get down there, so I always set hers inside on a stand and I holler to let her know it's me so she doesn't think somebody's coming into her house."

Christa-Maria had no idea how important her request would be until October 2005.

"I had come from the pool and been putting my things away when I tripped over the strap on my backpack," she said. "Because I had broken my hip a couple of years before, I did this strange move when I fell to protect my right hip."

She added, "I ended up with 11 fractures. Six on my left femur, three on my right shoulder and two on my left hand."

Christa-Maria laid on the kitchen floor for two days not knowing if she would be found in time.

But, she maintains a sense of humor about the life-threatening ordeal.

"After two days you don't know if you're going to make it," she said. "I even drank the cat's water — I didn't cough up any hair balls."

After awhile, she realized her only hope was if someone walked into her house and found her lying there.

"I hoped the UPS driver would be bringing me a parcel," she said. "It came about three o'clock and I thought, 'If she comes, it will be in the next hour.' And sure enough, I heard the door open and I knew I was going to be OK."

Future of library's Clinton Street property debated

LIBRARY

two will have another meeting similar to the March 1 discussion.

"I think the best part was that both boards realized that we are all on the same page and that nobody is out to get anybody," she said. "Both boards want to come together to see what's best for the taxpayers. Both sides are working very hard to come to an agreement."

She added, "My two board members said, 'Boy, that was nice to actually talk to them.'"

"It worked out quite well I thought. We have a lot of work to do still. I don't know if that agreement is going to work because we need the Saltonstall family to agree with that," she said. "Sometimes it's just hard to get so many different parties to come together."

Sturock said when Proposal A came about, the public schools were no longer allowed to run the public library.

"There were two resolutions signed and agreed by both boards (library and school) when we had to make the break under Proposal A," Sturock said. "The property was an asset of the school. In order for the library to gain the property they would have had to buy it, but the school board, understanding that the library didn't have the money to buy it, signed the property over to the library for $1 as long as remained a library and until such time as it was not a library."

There is a state statute that prevents municipalities and school districts from giving away their assets.

"You have to get a fair appraised value for them," Sturock said. "How

"I think before the library and the school make a deal, the library board needs to get community input on the issue. If the community says they want it to be the school's building and the library gets at least 50 percent of the value, then we would probably sign off."

Connie Saltonstall.
Family member of which approval of removal of deed restriction is required you circumvent that is you can grant them a lifetime lease and when they stop using it, then it reverts back to school."

Sturock said this arrangement was agreed upon by both the library and the school board long ago, but when renovation at the old middle school-new library property began, someone from the library found that the quit claim deed was never executed.

"They came to school and said we need to make it right. The school board acting in good faith said they would do it," Sturock said. "We signed the deed and inadvertently the reverter clause was left out."

He added, "About a year later we discovered that the reverter clause wasn't in that deed. I explained the deed wasn't right, but they haven't made the deed right."

When the property was originally given to the school, there was no building. It was given to the school for the purpose of building a library or other educational purposes.

Sturock said, in the original title, the reverter clause says if the property ceases to be a library or used for educational purposes, then it reverts to Dr. Saltonstall or his heirs.

"If we get the building back and build offices there, then it would stay as an asset to the school district. If the Saltonstalls would waive that restriction, then we possibly could do something with the library board in terms of value," Sturock said. "I think if we were to litigate it, then we would get the library back. We could go to court, but we don't want to do that because we would end up with both the school district and the library board paying legal fees and that doesn't make any sense."

He added, "We think we dealt in good faith and found an error. They saw an oversight and we corrected it. We found an error and just want them to make it right."

Sturock said the law firm of Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone PLC., who drew up the original legal papers in 1997, agree with the school board's attorneys.

"Absolutely the intent was that it would revert to the school if and when the library ceased to use it," he said.

Sturock said right now both boards are in the talking stage.

"Hopefully, as people are talking and facts become clearer we can resolve this without it becoming a legal situation, because it would be a lose-lose situation for both parties," Sturock said. "I think the library is acting in good faith and I think we're acting in good faith. We're working toward resolution."

Connie Saltonstall, daughter of the man who donated the property, said the new library project has been the result of a great community effort.

"I think this happened because all the groups worked together and I think if the library is talking about what happens to that (existing library off Clinton Street) building, they have a responsibility to get input from the community before they make any deal," she said. "We're not trying to be difficult. We're just trying to do what is best for the community and the library."

Saltonstall said all the deeds to the property are inaccurate because none of them reflect the original deed restriction.

Saltonstall said the City of Charlevoix, Norwood Township and the Downtown Development Authority have all passed resolutions supporting the idea that representatives of the library should be able to sell the old building and use the proceeds to help pay the debt on the new library.

"I think that's a really bad deal for the taxpayers. The school has property and they should not be taking prime commercial space away from downtown Charlevoix," she said. "I think before the library and the school make a deal, the library board needs to get community input on the issue. If the community says they want it to be the school's building, and if the library gets at least 50 percent of the value, then we would probably sign off."

She added, "But I'm not going to agree to any deal until I see that in writing."

The balancing act of a working parent

Julie Witthoef
'Just a thought'

With rising gas prices, skyrocketing heat and health care costs and a state-wide economic crisis rearing its ugly head, households with single-parent financial providers are becoming a thing of the past.

Since graduating from college in 2000, I have been fortunate enough to secure full-time employment in Charlevoix.

It isn't a popular choice for college grads to move to Charlevoix. The scene falls short of swinging, professional introductory positions are few and far between and the young available singles group is scant.

Fortunately, I met my husband while still in college so my last gripe is a non-issue. And both our families live in Charlevoix making it a natural pick for a place to settle.

We bought a home in the country in 1999 when prices were still high but hadn't quite reached the $7,000 per acre asking price they are at now.

Things fell into alignment for us. Then, in 2003, we welcomed our first child which knocked that alignment mildly out of whack.

Following her arrival I took 12 weeks off work. I returned after a three-month hiatus to resume my responsibilities as staff writer for the paper. That first morning I sat at my computer and put lotion on my hands. After 12 weeks accountable to a newborn, this felt like a day at the spa.

But that spa feeling was fleeting. Back to work meant the beginning of a daily tug-of-war between my career and my child.

It wasn't a question of leaving her in a stranger's hands, my mother-in-law and husband shared her care during the day. But as any working parent knows, your belly still aches a little each time you leave for work.

Since then I have found my dual role to be quite rewarding. Fortunately, I work in a family-friendly atmosphere. When winter colds rear their snotty heads I can stay home to fight fevers.

I am also fortunate to live in Charlevoix where wonderful people support my dual role. My husband Charlie, grandparents, nieces and nephews step forward to cover meeting nights. And when all else fails and my toddler tags along to weekend photo opportunities, attendees fill her with sweets and keep a watchful eye while I take snapshots of Charlevoix's memorable moments.

This past weekend was a perfect example of a working mom's balancing act.

On Friday night, the boys' varsity basketball team faced Traverse City St. Francis in the Class C Regional title showdown.

I joined my fellow media entourage on the baseline to capture some pictures of the game. My assistant, my two-year-old daughter, was glued to my side.

At the half, we had to fight crowds to secure a bag of popcorn which I had promised her when we walked into the game at Petoskey High School and she smelled her favorite buttery treat.

Charlevoix High School athletic director Jim Kanine and principal Gary Grundman offered to watch my gear while I braved the hungry crowd.

The lines were horrendous. It was hot and another minute would have meant meltdown. I spotted Ron Agnello, a local CPA who I know well, who was in perfect position for a fast grab of fluffy popcorn. He helped out and stress turned to smiles as she snacked.

Back at the game, she sat back in a corridor close to where mom was snapping pics. I felt like I was in a slow motion movie as I watched a misguided shot from a Rayder player result in the basketball flying directly toward my tiny assistant who sat drawing and munching.

This is where mommy magic and some athleticism from my high school days kicked into gear. I lunged, extended my leg and successfully deflected the miscue.

I got props from my fellow photographers and finished shooting the game.

The next night, shorty and I were off to the Northwest Academy dinner, dance and auction.

Upon arriving a group of ladies directed my daughter to the treat table. Minutes later she was double fisted with cookies and out on the dance floor with an older lady, who I have to admit I don't know.

The moral of this juggling tale is that while families with young children aren't coming to Charlevoix in droves, they should be.

This is the perfect place to balance a professional career and family. Even if you don't have oodles of in-laws and relatives living here, there is always a community member willing to lend a helping hand.

Volunteering is good for mind and body

Gayle Gennett
'A look at life'

Whether you are a transplant to the community, a student needing experience, or recently retired, there is one sure method for meeting others or deciding on your next career path and that's by volunteering.

Volunteering is a positive outlet for your talents, a great way to network, and an opportunity to develop new skills. I spoke with Lorna Lewis the other day who oversees the volunteer chaplaincy program at Charlevoix

Area Hospital. She said, "Volunteering is a great way to acquaint you with the community and an easy way to get to know others. Plus, it just feels good to help."

My fellow colleagues in counseling like to stress to their clients that volunteering can put you on the road to feeling better about yourself and may improve your mood and attitude. It's inexpensive therapy with a proven track record.

You have much to gain if you're a student trying to find your way to a career. It gives you a chance to discover whether or not you're suited to the line of work you might be interested in. You gain practical knowledge and it assists you in marketing yourself for future job interviews. Hands-on experience and networking are always a plus.

If you recently moved to Charlevoix,

I can't think of a better way to meet others with similar interests. Our community and surrounding area has numerous opportunities in which to volunteer. The Charlevoix Kiwanis Club sponsors a reading program for our younger generation at the local Head Start and Early Childhood building. If your interest is in beautifying our fair city the local garden clubs are just your ticket. If you like to perform, singing in the Northern Michigan Chorale, acting or working behind the scenes at the Crooked Tree Arts Center is where you can lend your talents. For history buffs, the Charlevoix Historical Society offers plenty of opportunity to trace your home's history or learn about Charlevoix's earlier era. With a new public library in Charlevoix's future there are plenty of areas to jump in and help with. One of my favorites is the Exceptional Riders Program which combines the love of horses and helping individuals with special needs learn how to ride. Let's not forget our community pool which has been such an asset to our community. It's very easy to help out one evening a week checking in swimmers at the front desk.

Once you have experienced the rewards of volunteering first hand you'll find that giving up a little bit of your time follows the old adage, "If you want something done, ask a busy person to do it."

Volunteering improves your attitude which may improve your overall health as well. What a great way to role model for our children how we can help others. Meeting new people and learning new things keeps your mind sharp and in turn can lead to a healthier body. Volunteering is as good for you as drinking water.

I've been fortunate enough to have had my own parents volunteer while still keeping busy with work and raising a family. The lesson I learned from them as well as those I've learned from Lorna Lewis, my good friend Kari Kollman, and my own husband, who've all volunteered with the Red Cross, is that the experience of helping your fellow man/woman/child gives you an overall up lifting feeling.

Be generous with your time and if you are ever in need of someone's help you'll surely receive it tenfold. Bernard Meltzer said it best, "There is no better exercise for your heart, than reaching down and helping to lift someone up."

Letters to the editor

Vote 'No' on referendum

Editor:
I would like to thank you for the recent publication of the letter from Dan Drost about the dove hunting referendum on the ballot for 2006.

People up here in our neck of the woods don't see a lot of media about the upcoming vote on the mourning dove referendum. A surprising amount of people still don't realize that hunting season was opened in 2004, and that a referendum will be on the ballot in November.

I feed mourning doves at my bird feeders, and I enjoy watching them. I have a pair that has nested on the end of one of the logs on my home for the last three years. Mourning doves are monogamous. They mate for life. It takes both of them to raise their little family of two squabs. The pair take turns sitting on the eggs. The female sits all night and the male sits on them all day so the female can feed. Once they are hatched, it takes both of them to feed and care for their squabs. If one parent dies the squabs will not make it, and the dove that is left will not mate with another. The mourning doves are gentle, non-aggressive birds with a soft sad coo.

They were awarded the title of Michigan's Official Bird of Peace in 1998, House Resolution 244. Many of us would like them to keep this title and remain protected for many years to come.

Please remember to vote "No" to shooting doves in November. Carol K. Hobbs Bid process criticized

Editor:
It is no wonder today, why people have no confidence in their government officials. We received a letter from Laura Stebe of D.S. Stebe Construction reporting the city had no bid from Alden Lumber to consider on the skate park project in Charlevoix. To this I reply, "bunk."

Many hours of effort was evidently wasted bidding, re-bidding, revising lists of material, specification changes, follow-up, now re-price for different department, re-price again with different specifications, then, oh, we are having a closed bid for this project. Which by the way we participated in every redo that was asked of us including the request for resubmission for a closed bid session. This list was priced, changed and resubmitted at least nine times. We then, during this "closed bid session" time frame, receive a call from Stebe Construction explaining the City of Charlevoix is not honoring the closed bids and that Stebe Construction needs yet another bid on yet another list of material with yet another set of specifications. We did this for them.

We have a copy of the correspondence faxed to Jeremy Stump and Michael Wiesner regarding the new revised list of materials for Stebe Construction that we were to fax directly to Stebe Construction's fax number, which we did.

We run a business that prides itself on the efforts and dollars we put into our local communities, whether by donations or cutting material prices far below market to help with just such projects.

Your city officials may have that kind of time to waste confusing the working world as to what is expected of them, but we have no desire to waste any more of our time with your city's practices of wasting time and money. Our time, and the taxpayer's money. So, any future quotes will be at market prices.

impacts every aspect of our lives — at home, at work and even behind the wheel of our car.

That's why Charlevoix Area Hospital Sleep Center is proud to be a participant in the ninth annual health promotion campaign, national Sleep Awareness Week, sponsored by the National Sleep Foundation.

This year's campaign is March 27 through April 2. As always, it leads up to the return to Daylight Saving Time (Sunday, April 2), when many of us who are already sleep deprived will choose to "lose" another hour of much needed sleep. The theme of this year's campaign is "Sleep: As Important as Diet and Exercise."

Getting a good night's sleep is as important to our bodies and minds as a good diet and exercise. Sleep experts say that most adults need between seven and nine hours of sleep each night for optimum health, safety and performance. But according to the National Sleep Foundation, nearly one quarter of America's adults, or 47 million people, don't get even the minimum amount of sleep they need to be alert the next day.

We at Charlevoix Area Hospital Sleep Center urge everyone in our community to make it a regular habit to get the amount of sleep you need for a bright and productive tomorrow.

For more information, go to the National Sleep Foundation Web site at www.sleepfoundation.org, or contact the Charlevoix Area

School board nixes ads on baseball diamond

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

A proposal to begin advertising local businesses on the fences of the Charlevoix High School baseball diamond was turned down after consideration by the school board.

The school board voted 4-3 not to allow any advertising at this time, with several board members opting to look into the idea further.

"The board members who voted against it had concerns that it could open issues that we may have no answer to at this time," said superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock. "So rather than simply approve something, they want to research it before they go down that road."

Sturock said one of the main concerns was whether there would be an ability to "pick and choose" who advertises at the school and who doesn't.

"There might be some advertisers that could be questionable and the board may not want them advertising on school grounds," he said. "And I think the board raised a good point. Originally, my concern was more of a question which came up from the baseball coach. It's a ready-made fund-raiser for him and the potential funds could be unfair to some of the other sports such as cross country which doesn't have its own field."

He added, "The question was, should we share in that?"

Sturock said this is not the first time an issue similar to this has been brought to the board's attention.

"When we built the new high school, there was a question of advertising at that time because Coke or Pepsi, for a fee, would come in (to advertise) and the board at that time said unanimously, 'No' they wouldn't do that."

"Does that particular fund-raiser give the baseball team an unfair advantage? That would be the other thing we need to talk about," he said.

Sturock said the gate receipts from sporting events go back into the general athletic fund where they are spread among the many sports.

He questioned whether funds raised from advertising on the baseball field would be divided among the many sports or if it would go directly to the baseball team.

"I think it needs to be researched more. Once we open the doors to something, they may be difficult to close," Sturock said. "What the board does with it now, I'm not sure."

Preliminary proposals show the possibility of a sign of 96 inches by 28 inches could go for approximately $300 with a renewal of $200 each following year.

"Some board members are interested in looking at it again," Sturock said.

Board members Christine Michaud, Dianne Kilkenny and Dean Spenceley voted for the resolution while Ardeth Wieland, Bill Trubilowicz, Larry Levensgood and Dennis Halverson voted against it.

Allen Telgenhof, the Charlevoix Rayders varsity baseball coach and author of the proposal, said a couple of the reasons he proposed the advertising on the baseball diamond are that many other schools are doing it and it's something which is prevalent in the sport.

"Having gone to baseball games for a long time, I know it's something that has historically been associated with baseball," Telgenhof said. "You look out at the outfield fence and see that signage — it's kind of a quaint — especially with the way I envisioned it here."

Telgenhof said he thinks it would be nice to let the local businesses show their support while helping the school, especially with the financial turmoil the state's educational bud-

Board may revisit issue of billboards around the baseball diamond budget-wise. They're looking at a lot of different ways to (potentially) cut with less money coming in," he said. "And athletics is always something that gets looked at. There is always a group of people who will say, 'Let's cut from the athletic program,' and this would have been a way to offset some of that."

But, Telgenhof said, he knows it isn't a coach's place to set the board's philosophy.

"I just thought it would be good to look at it, especially when we have a decrease in funding from the state. I think that's a decision for the board to make and I respect the board's decision," he said. "I'm going to abide by the board's decision. If they want to revisit it down the road, I'm willing and happy to do it."

He added, "I understand from the board's standpoint that it's more of philosophical discussion — do we want advertising on our fields?"

Telgenhof said he was a board member for eight years and knows just how important it is to take the time to make the right decision.

"So maybe this is something for them to look at down the road," he said. "Any information they want from me, I am happy to get for them."

Charlevoix Elementary School Spring Musical

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Following a one-year break, Charlevoix Elementary School's spring musical will return.

The show, "Child of the World," will take place at 7 p.m. on Thursday, March 23 in the auditorium at Charlevoix High School, located at 05200 Marion Center Road.

"The musical, 'Child of the World,' celebrates the role that children have in helping to make the world a better place to live. The children and I are looking forward to continuing the spring musical tradition in a new location," said Charlevoix Elementary School music teacher, Jodi Thompson.

For 32 years, former elementary school music teacher and founder of the spring musical, Marina LaBlance, directed the annual event. In 2004, the students staged their last show with LaBlance at the helm because the rolling bleachers in the former event venue, the Charlevoix Middle School gym, were removed to make way for more physical education space.

At that time, LaBlance determined that the change to the gym made it impossible for the performance to continue as it had in the past and opted not to have a show in 2005.

LaBlance continued in her capacity as music teacher and retired following the 2004-2005 school year.

Thompson took over the program this year and in conjunction with school art teacher Mary Beth McGraw decided in January to revive the musical.

Due to space constraints in the high school auditorium, instead of including all first through fourth-grade students in the show, Thompson opted to have the 150 students in the third and fourth-grade classes perform.

"It doesn't matter how big or small their part is. They are all involved," Thompson said.

McGraw added, "All kids are successful in this."

Younger students will attend a dress rehearsal the morning of March 23.

While this is Thompson's first spring show with the elementary school students, she is no stranger to spring musicals. In her four years as music teacher for Charlevoix's St. Mary School the spring show was a staple.

However, this is the first time she has directed students in the musical, "Child of the World," which is based on a book that shares the show's title.

The hour-long performance will include skits and 13 songs from world destinations including Germany, Mexico, Africa and Jamaica.

Character traits like respect, honesty, courage, compassion and responsibility will be woven throughout the show and displayed on elements of the set created by McGraw, students and volunteers. Thompson explained that this is an extension of character curriculum being implemented across the Charlevoix Public School District.

Northwest Academy fund-raiser earns $5,000 for school

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The Friends of Northwest Academy of Charlevoix hosted their annual fund-raiser with hors d'oeuvres and dancing on Saturday, March 18 at the First Baptist Church.

Well over 100 guests attended the non-alcoholic appetizer and dancing event which boasted door prizes and live and silent auctions with proceeds going toward projects including the construction of a miniature theater and playground at the school. Preliminary estimates of funds raised are approximately $5,000 with that number expected to rise.

Northwest Academy business manager, Leslie Herriman said, the Friends of Northwest Academy, who sponsored the event, wanted to try something new this year.

"Instead of it being a family event, it was an adult only event," she said.

Herriman said this event was for anyone who enjoys tasty food and fine music while helping a good cause.

"It was for everybody in the community. Our kids are from all over so we had people coming from Petoskey, Ellsworth, Boyne City and East Jordan," she said.

Co-director of Northwest Academy, Gary Stutzman, thanked Mel Morrison and Annie Russell for their efforts in putting the auctions together.

He also thanked, "Tim May for the wonderful variety of food items, auctioneers for donating their time for the very successful live auction, Angie Robarge and Kristina Prevot for arranging the decorations and Leslie Herriman for all her administrative support."

He added, "As always, an event like this would not be possible if it were not for all the teachers, parents and friends that attended this event and made it so successful."

Some of the items auctioned off included trips and exotic dinners.

"We sold a dinner for 12 on the beach with the jazz band playing and J & B Farms donated a livestock animal which will be taken to auction with the proceeds going to the school," Stutzman said. "All in all, it was a very well-organized and very successful night with the kids performing and people dancing and visiting with friends and family."

Stutzman said this event is such a success year after year, that the school will continue to host it.

"We'll be celebrating our first 10 years of operation so mark your calendar for one year from now — the third week in March," he said.

Charlevoix City Council passes $25 million budget

By JULIE WITTHOELT
Editor

Charlevoix City Council passed the $25 million 2006-2007 city budget on Monday night, March 20.

Prior to passing the budget council considered stalling levels at the city police department, proposed rate increases to airplane hanger lease holders and renovations to Brookside Chapel.

Police chief Gerard Doan signed on in January. His move from patrolman to chief left a vacancy in the department's line-up of full-time patrolman.

With city revenue being a council concern, it was discussed that this vacancy may not be filled.

"We're just looking for ways to save a dollar here and there," first ward councilman, Boh Timms, said.

Since 1995, the city has maintained a seven member force. It has operated with six since November 2005 when former chief Dennis Halverson resigned.

Boyer City maintains seven full-time officers and two part-timers while East Jordan has five full-time officers and two part-timers.

Doan said increasing hours of Charlevoix's two part-time officers to patch the gaps in the city's 24-hour patrol service is not an option. He said the two existing part-timers are unwilling to increase their shift work.

In order to meet Doan's goal of maintaining a school safety officer presence, as well as continuing to safely respond to calls in a timely manner, while keeping up his

Norman Carlson

$37,357 and the four patrolman make $35,732 each plus certification costs for EMT defibrillator use and firefighter training.

Council opted to keep the seventh patrolman in the budget and advertisements to fill the position have been posted.

Rate increases in monthly lease payments to store airplanes in city hangers were also proposed. Council did pass an increase but it equates to $1.60 per square foot as opposed to $1.88 per square foot as the budget initially proposed.

"It was a compromise council felt was fair," mayor, Norman Carlson, said.

Other rate increases included in the budget are a .1 mill increase in the trash collection millage to assist in funding increased costs of providing the service including brush and leaf pickup as well as composting.

Rate shifts show no change in water and electric rates and a 5.5 percent increase in sewer rates which equates to about $1.38 a month for the average user.

The budget also increases rates for Charlevoix Golf Club users who will pay $10 more for season passes and $2.50 more for locker rental. Landing and ramp fees at the airport also increased as well as ambulance rates for resident and non-resident transports.

Improvements to Brookside Chapel located along M-66 in Brookside Cemetery were also a topic of discussion. The budget includes about $80,000 from the city's perpetual care fund to stabilize the building which was built in 1910 to store bodies in the winter for spring burial.

It hasn't been used for this purpose in some time.

"No one has come up with a use for it. We are trying to perpetuate a building that has no definite use," third ward councilman, Sherm Chamberlain, said.

Chamberlain's doubts about the preservation work support information submitted to the city by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association opposing the overhaul. Citizens Advisory Committee member, Ken Staley, has also come out against pursuing the renovation.

The Citizens Advisory Committee has made no formal recommendation related to the chapel.

However, if third ward council member, Shirley Gibson, has it her way, the project will move forward.

"For me it's a landmark we would be tearing down," she said. "Considering the money we spend on other items, I think it's worthwhile."

Gibson is also a member of the city's Historic Preservation Committee who recommended council restore the building.

Architectural plans for the restoration will be ready in the next month and bids for the project are expected to be released shortly thereafter.

City council will revisit the issue once those architectural plans have been submitted.

While the airport, police department and chapel were contentious topics of discussion, the bulk of the budget is $13.7 million for capital improvement projects such as the marina and East Park renovations. Of that, $7.9 million is from federal and state grants.

The marina and East Park projects are at the top of this list with a total cost of $10,999,300. While this debt sits in the city budget.

Charlevoix finished the season with a 16-9 mark. The team loses only one senior and the younger returnees gained valuable experience.

"You can't overestimate the value of making a run in the tournament like we did," Haske said. "The kids can't get that type of experience any other way. It will do nothing but help us down the road."

State finalists Daman, Golovich end Rayder wrestling career

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

Senior co-captains of the varsity Rayder wrestling team ended their careers on top.

On March 8, seniors Jed Daman and Jeff Golovich were escorted out of the halls at Charlevoix High School with a ceremony fit for kings. The band played and students lined the halls to cheer them on. The two traveled to the Lake Michigan Conference which took place March 9-11 at the Palace in Auburn Hills.

Varsity wrestling coach, Craig Golovich, said while the two did not place in the top three slots out of the 16-man bracket they wrestled in at the tournament, they did put up an honorable fight.

Both lost their first match, won their second and lost again in the third round.

"They have nothing to be ashamed of. They did really well. They wrestled hard all year. It will be hard to see them go," coach Golovich said.

In Golovich's four years coaching the varsity team he said these two are his best wrestlers to graduate.

"Up north, no one could touch these guys," he said.

This year, both placed first in the Lake Michigan Conference tournament, which took place at the end of February, and placed third in both the district finals and the regional tourney.

This was Jeff Golovich's second year in a row to qualify for the state final. Last year, he dislocated his shoulder in the second match. He continued to wrestle with the injury but was unable to overcome his opponents in either the second or third matches.

"It was pretty sad, Jeff was there to take a medal," coach Golovich said.

While Daman didn't walk away with a medal either, his success on the mats in his four years wrestling for Charlevoix High School is now part of the school's record book. He broke the career win record of 132 wins. His career total is 140 wins and 47 losses.

second for the school's career win total with 137 wins and 46 losses.

The team's third senior, Matt Novotny, didn't make it to the state tournament, which came as a surprise to coach Golovich, who described Novotny as determined.

"He just didn't quit. I thought he would make it to the state. But he had a tough draw at regionals," coach Golovich said.

Saying good-bye to the seniors isn't easy for coach Golovich. He said he has coached Daman since he was in fourth grade and his nephew, Jeff Golovich, since he was in kindergarten.

"There weren't other kindergartners in the program so he would wrestle third and fourth graders. He got beat up a lot when he started," coach Golovich recollected.

While Daman and Jeff Golovich consider whether they will continue their wrestling careers at the collegiate level, coach Golovich said he's looking forward to the next generation moving up the ranks.

Daman's little brother Zeke Daman is a freshman this year who ended the season with 29 wins and 24 losses. Jeff Golovich's younger brother, Matt Golovich, broke the school record for the most wins as a freshman wrestler this year with 38 wins. The record was 27 wins held by Chris Aepelbacher from his 2002 freshman wrestling season.

"We should do fairly well. Losing our top three seniors who we depend on will be hard. But we have freshman, sophomores and juniors who are promising," coach Golovich said.

The program recently added a new rack system and mats as well as a take-down machine to its repertoire of training materials.

"We've got all the stuff, now we need the involvement," coach Golovich said.

He anticipates a large influx of wrestlers to the program in just a few years.

He said the middle school age wrestling program, which currently includes 17 sixth grade students, is showing bright signs for the future of Charlevoix High School's program.

Kent Ludwig joins Courier spring sports writing staff

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

Kent Ludwig

"Sports photographer and writer Kent Ludwig has joined the Courier's editorial department to cover the spring sports season.

Ludwig, 31, moved here from Midland in February to try a new pace of life and be closer to his family in Alpena.

"It's beautiful here," he said. Prior to relocating to Charlevoix, he worked as a freelance writer and cook at Dow Chemical in Midland.

He is a 1993 graduate of Bay City Western High School in Auburn and attended Davenport University in Midland where he studied business administration. Ludwig has also taken a number of photojournalism classes.

Ludwig said he's looking forward to joining the Courier's sports writing team covering varsity baseball and softball. "I like the competition," he said of sports coverage.

He added that this will be an opportunity for him to get to know the community better.

"There is a lot of community involvement in high school sports," he said.

Most recently, he shot photos at the March 10 varsity boys' Rayder basketball team's district win. He said the crowd's energy and hacking of its hometown team was amazing to watch and he is looking forward to covering other Charlevoix High School sports teams.

Aside from his contributions to the Courier, Ludwig is employed full-time at Harbor Industries.

Working toward Black Belt status Jung Shin Do students test for promotion

Jung Shin Do, Charlevoix Martial Arts, recently hosted its first rank test and promotion of 2006.

At the event, 11 junior students and seven adult students tested for promotion as they work their way toward Black Belts.

The adult test, which is just over three hours long, consisted of an hour-long workout to get the group warmed up and was followed by two more hours of intense martial art forms, self-defense techniques, break-fall demonstrations and board breaking.

The junior test was two hours long during which time young students demonstrated their skill in those same categories. All students were also required to demonstrate proper Martial Art etiquette in and out of the practice hall as well as a good understanding of the history and tradition of Martial Art.

Junior students received promotion to the following belt ranks: Black Stripe went to Rachel Titus and Matthew Whitley. Yellow Stripe was awarded to C.J. Rice. Yellow Belt was earned by Cody Allen. Orange Stripe went to Austin Edger, Haley Givens, Corey Hahn and Brad Rizzo. And Advanced Orange Belt was earned by Maurice Hanselman and Lucas Olson.

Tip of the Mitt uses grant to shape policy

As part of a grant funded by the U.S. Mitt Foundation, Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council is providing legal and policy research to members of the Michigan Legislature through a series of bi-weekly informational sheets on water management issues.

Fall 2005 was an active time for legislative proposals regarding water management issues in the Michigan Legislature. There are at least 10 proposals before the Michigan House and Senate addressing water reporting requirements, permitting, water conservation and other water management issues.

Michigan, the only state in the Great Lakes Basin not to have adopted water use rules, is finally considering doing so.

According to Tip of the Mitt

Watershed representatives, the hope is a bipartisan legislative effort will result that will protect all of our state's waterways from harmful water withdrawals, provide new protections against diversions of the Great Lakes, involve communities in decisions regarding their water resources and require all large users to practice water conservation and efficient use.

In order to ensure that the policies adopted will be the best to protect Michigan's wealth of water resources, the information sheets provided by Tip of the Mitt Watershed will provide legislators with information on the various water management strategies utilized throughout the other states in the Great Lakes Basin, as well as states throughout the U.S.

"Water defines us in Michigan. Our waterways and the Great Lakes form the basis of our economy and way of life," said Greta Thomassey, Ph.D., water policy specialist at the watershed council. "Unfortunately, Michigan is behind every other Great Lakes state in terms of oversight and protection of its surface and ground water treasures. As a result, we are a potential target for irresponsible users and are vulnerable to large-scale diversions. Because our legislators are now working on this issue, we want to help in any way possible. We hope this research will contribute to a bi-partisan solution to our water use challenges."

The first in the series outlined the basic doctrines of groundwater law that have shaped groundwater management in states throughout the country since the mid-1800s. While Michigan's case law on this topic has been a bit unsettled, our courts have adopted legal standards requiring reasonable use of groundwater resources.

Future editions of the information sheets will address other legal and policy issues to help ensure that our legislators are well-informed before making choices that are crucial to the health and sustainability of our water resources.

Genealogical society to host activity workshop

The Charlevoix County Genealogical Society will meet at 7 p.m. on Thursday, April 6, in the basement community room of the Boyne District Library located at 201 East Main Street in Boyne City.

The evening's program will be a workshop on using family oral histories and genealogical facts to compose a short biographical sketch of your ancestors' lives, known as an "ancestral vignette."

The presenter will be Patrick McCreary, who has many years of experience with genealogical study and in compiling historic vignettes for both his personal use and for a variety of publications.

This will be an activity-based workshop. Participants are asked to choose an ancestor to write about. Then, to bring the following information about that ancestor to the workshop: family information, his or her obituary, a photograph if possible, and one to three stories about that person.

The workshop is free and open to the public.

For more information call Jo at (231) 582-9602 or Joy at (231) 582-3440.

Community foundation funds Planned Parenthood programs

Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan has been awarded $3,390 in support of two of its education programs: Motivation, Esteem and Respect in Teens (MERIT) and Out Of The Locker Room (OOTLR).

Support comes from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Eugene B. Renkiewicz Memorial Fund.

Motivation, Esteem and Respect in Teens, an intensive, 10-session program presented to boys ages 11 to 14, to help prevent risk taking behaviors such as early sexual activity and substance use. The program combines discussion, activities and group process to motivate students to take responsibility for their actions and strive to set and achieve personal goals, which include remaining abstinent.

Out Of The Locker Room is a six-hour program which uses interactive exercises, role plays and discussions to provide information and skills on topics including relationships, sexually transmitted infections and contraception, abstinence, sexual limit setting, communication and laws regarding sexual assault, consent and dating violence.

Both programs will be presented in schools throughout Charlevoix County and combined, will reach over 290 students.

"We are very grateful to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation for its long-standing support of the programs that we provide," said Lori O'Neill, Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan's director of education. "This funding will allow us to continue to deliver high quality educational services that help area youth make responsible choices. We're thankful for the opportunity to support these youth during a critical time in their lives."

For more information about these programs, contact Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan at (231) 347-9692.
